late winter 2021
a 62 yo man with bad teeth, lanky like David Bowie was in the seventies [and sporting his 'Wizpensational' 'kin number' - 55, ... if you want a bite off that rabbit hole wall ask yourself why we have 12 months but 13 moons [and culture wars]

jan. feb. mar. apr. may jun. jul. aug. sep. oct. nov. dec.

....., me finding 'the beginning was the end' in a forest above Remagen where i was getting my driver's licence at 18 shortly after he did his occult sleep deprivation experiments in LA, with entirely different results than Chris Knight the treeculture man] has a few extremes to show for of his own. Very spikey ones [several family situations on the rocks] as well as rounder ones. Rounder than round in fact ['rond' rhymes with wond], wondrously round [to cover said wounds perhaps] which is what weight cycling is.
Bowie quote here ...

i promoted said principle on 'water is life' videos with zero response. Gravity harvesting memes have existed since Leonardo but never got off the ground. Perhaps i am the drop in that bucket ... but this era of lo ethics done sure make me shy. As it stands i'll chalk it up as a potentially posthumous brownie point.

OLDER INTRO
Welcome to the complete raw commentarian & note works of Piet B, born in and returned to a spot near the last 'Rhinemouth' wetlands patch left [1958 and 1990 respectively] - a man who thinks of himself as the third 'element' in the series jesus, spinoza, ... yup .. wait, .. i'm forgetting a better, more fundamental[ly fun] strand of 'meshzenders': Cernunnos brought amrita 'coinage' from the east, handed to me via Hensel and Hamaker.
A connexion that first klicked on the 7th of nov, kin 113 2014:

> 'serpent' (rope more likely) used in the 'quirlen der milch ozean' (see recent post)

... then on resonant eagle, k215 - wednesday 4th of november 2015:

> https://plus.google.com/106896244110201370836/posts/Yooydbzcyve > specially once you realize what the significance of 'grouding' the 'currentsea' has (look very closely at the friezes of cernunnos; were his coins fresh clay / trace mineral tablets rather than coins ... or both???) for concepts like keeping money .. and ... keepin it keepin on flowin .. so you never have to worry about havin too little (woodedness, too small a taskbase, etc) to stay afloat .... it's the meaning of the golem story also (beneath the anthropocentric distortions) ... and of the cross-current churning of the milk myths in hindu lands, .. using a snake for ropedope ... waterpower .. lemmee see ya saw yaropetrick for a rupee once you overcome co-operative probs. ...
> end Quote

... but Cernunnos was already on my rockdust radar since the mid 80s (dunno exactly when); all my notes and comments trying to generate interest in this tale through the years: forthcoming.

INSPIRATION FOR THIS WAS Arnold Keyserling …..

The version used for my dutch pages can be seen at the bottom here btw. It is a rough translation of the second black table on the next page. ——- I used an 11 hue variety to reflect 'spinsight' maturity at the time. ---- 6 more table / txt / colortine experiments here: 01-b-w-colours.htm

Colour scheme follows Arnold Keyserling's astrological 'WHEEL' .. more or less - i attended his lectures in the mid eighties ... basically added black and white at either end and some elements I thought/think lacking to make, in this case, a 14 band spectrum:

Bibliographies

ecology of bringing darkness to light long term thought and principled practice institutable protection and inspection friendship and technology
wholism, voltage healing personable politics
art in use as riches
science and investigation
noopsy vs spy ..sighkey whology pedagogy = playful gripchase pay economics back to soilbanking sweet lovespot between mercy & justice

2003 prolly 'brought me' the highest percentage of 'jeuw' focussed thought (and reporting out of all original mix files), mostly due to what happened to Rachel Corrie of course .. exceptional in so many and increasingly contradictory ways (given what has happened at Evergreen College, Olympia Wa since then) .. so i'll add it to that 'jewnowat' category and just note that the content is not ALL ... that not ALL content is about that pesky trauma propagating 'fuck overy' and stuck up memery. There's a german in Essen who works on a dryland version (in a tall water tower, his name is Richard Weiss, discovered about 10 years later).
It's the only one left [in my note pile] of it's kind [along these 'lines of might'] cause i think mankind is too immature to be given even greater metabolization powers (most lack the ethics to subsume them under 'metabolization powDers') and so i took them aside and hold them in reserve, about 800k accumulated between 2003 and 2019. Sure it has inherent 'modestifying' characteristics but the uses most use will be put to, is likely to have me turn in my grave so fast i'll blast off the other side of the earth in no time. piety Piet 2006 at an early gender blog

06-female DHenwood-fan ::: ::: 101 Kb

- formerly called 'dewd commits genderoozoozios'

some precendent here: 00-05/01-05-Ward-Churchill.html

on overlap between and convergence of duh mind prison frame names zionism and gender 'respectively' (can i use that word in this context without being scolded a sneak or 'having a thing'? thanx).

file titles begin to indicate content, the one coming up/down for instance, but for now i'll just list the ones related to this here file:

13-c -- /ZjGender-Hell-15-16.htm ---- ZjGenderToxed-to-duh-core-17-19-A.html --- ZjGenderz-13-14.html ----- ZjGender-Bender-17-19-B.html --- 16-b

That last file contains a note rewritten november 23 2019:

This file is jampacked with gender gooh & gaah {{{Shulie Firestone and Molly Klein, Otto Weininger}}}.. but it was nearly twice as long until the tec stuff got taken 'apart' ... keep that in mind please (and especially remember that when i speak of educating the young .. 3 years later) There's too little problematizing of hormone disrupting chemicals going on in general and even in this file ... i didn't actually pursue the Curtis Duncan line of enquiry myself much [after discovering his work in ???] cause my mind has no surfeit of duh 'scientific bend'.

ps: 2nd, 3rd and 4th files in the 06-12 batch have 'gender' 9x each ..

the rest has up to 5x per file with the exception of /12-e which counts 16x

1.4Mb of 5.16 for 6-12 = ZioSemz ... that's about a 1/4th (a quarter)

... perhaps try to find .34Mb worth of blogposts to bring the total up to a nice round [familiar] number ... ????

This series is a sidetack i made out of my great pile in 2019, ..i forked off stuff that concerns and increasingly even merely mentions zionism ... that o so rotten leaven bane and bloat ferment curse on human affairs.

For 2013 fully one third got diverted into duh 'ZioHeap' (last 2019)

For 2014 that portion rises to half (due to the Ukie crisis)

Don't you agree splitting is a grand gesture towards the goal: serving micro portions to micro audiences ... livin in a box in a tree, on a list, on a gem of a mind, under the sun ...

D = a mere 4 files with nothing but gender mayhem btw. The importance for me is great nevertheless, which the thumb for this collection indicates, Weininger and Firestone, tying into the 'C' strand of this period very tightly and very very fatefully .. but our world of propagan- and subsidized splinterprefs blinds us to these immensely clarifying complementarities ... which i am astonished, frustrated and disappointed over and about .. not to mention self blamerish.

Each of us has an interior war araging between the playful neotenous and the kneejerk egoic routines ... with nary a moment of respite long enough to try and practice emersive out of body 'expethics' effectively, the whole thing foreshadowed and 'prehearsed' in parent / child relations, i was now orphaned .. at 55 .. and saw the same repeated and played out in a nearby 'family' (badly cracked crock of shitbag mom not realizing just how blessed she is, disrespecting her child criminally in my eyes). / 2020

<==twirler and tipi pretty eh? Wouldn't wanna live in the latter though, I prefer live branches for that; made possible by the ancient technique now known as biotecture: (6 fused sycamores giving a good idea of the possibilities given time, pragmatism and imagination there is a large one available also). Next click takes you not to any inhabited living trees ones (This one does.) but pretty cozy places nonetheless: zianet.com/blackrange/br_pages/sunray.html (beautiful gallery in the tradition of the Tolkienesque whole earth catalog classic: "Shelter", but better, since this is in colour!!!)

I figure the twirler (octahedron frame with balloon material sown in after screwtype fashion suspended between fishingline swivels) preforms, prefigures and prototypifies some Bucky Fuller like boldishly dreamy schemes (wheels within wheels after wheels around wheels) of ballsy blessings: This whirly wonder, once suitably transmogrified into the stone and water chomping musical mist and muddiest mudmoney maker I live for; the complete chain of being quickening rock penetrant/polisher/and rocking spray/spreader; nature's own hell's knell, here is a long way to go yet eh? Can you help and/or fancy a ride out thattaway; synergetic hyrarchy anybody?

Coming soon I keep saying though it still ain't came (cause I should be praying): a change of location and career for me I think (I'm looking to join or start a rural community and do a grove/orchard/nursery).

New, now affairs (februari 2001):Done some printerfriendly version for files upon which I had used very light teints for 'texture'; Hamaker on climate (from the mid 80ties) =xxx= Hensel on cosmography (100 years ago) =xxx= Beckerath on peace making (during the fifties) =xxx=

Another few little, late and (slightly less) recent additions (covering all of 2000):I manage not to Kick the nettering habit. =xxx= (the latter half of it):(Lag) logging files 18 sortof regular files plus some special interest issues worth of initially just correspondence, but soon expanded to include reads, ponders, list posts, searches, living and linclicking); system backed and structure based (/oldcore.htm) log along long term longing ("lugalllogages" or "luggalogalongs" or lugalllogages;formerly: miscellanies: here is the tables of contents for 97 - spring 2000. =xxx=

New before that (late summer 2000): I'm up in Demnark now for a workvisit=xxx= Previous (to those) additions (early august): This is when logging files started getting briefed =xxx= I finally did an /index.htm file so that neatly alphabetically, size and upload date specified list has now become a private one and you get this index instead: pointing people straight to my in- and

what my site looked like in 2000

you'll note the strong echo to my words from the mid eighties if you end up reading them part 2 has large images of all her books :::: QUOTE:

Wow, this is a tough one for sure. I guess the greatest mystery to me is the true attitude of the Jews towards Hitler and the true extent to which the Nazis and Zionists worked together, amicably, to resolve their differences and find a solution to the German-Jewish problem. I cannot help but suspect that collaboration went deeper than any of us can imagine and that German-Zionist relations were more amiable than, say, Edwin Black has led us to believe. May I point out just one essay I found in this regard? It is located in the JSTOR database and is entitled “The Secret Contacts: Zionism and Nazi Germany, 1933-1941.” It was authored by Klaus Polkehn and featured in the Journal of Palestine Studies (Vol. 5, No. 3/4 (Spring - Summer, 1976), pp. 54-82). One can read this online for free at Archive.org[3]

braingrow=*rainbow=*strainflow
My use of rainbow associations presents a cross from all cultures past and possibly from a good few from the future too...... My work leans heavily on some aspects of the Hopi prohecies concerning a rainbow tribe and family, consisting of all races and ages, agreeing on some basic ethics like remunerating the cleansing of water and air, permaplant and pleachings besides freeing oppressed populaces from tyranny. ------- Far beyond and well before legitimating and justifying free migration for any other reasons than focus on said steppingstony stages, it is imperative that we protect indiginous autonomy through combining the former's voluntary multiculturalisms and interracisms with respect for the latters decentralized and relatively private and local particulars. These extremes can meet to measure up and annotate each others regional oxygen balances for instance through multilingual, nonencrypted but multiply translated and transparant mechanisms, tabulating and turfing impersonal yet 'special' generalities, averages, laws and statistics which will succeed all the more, the better they follow the golden rule of combining and implementing dualities like ebb and flow, more mixing must logically entail more openness and transparancy on the one hand yet more distinctive and characteristic contributaries on the other, a bit like the mountainmother rock which eventually finds neighbouring particles representing those journeyed from all other parts of the watershed. Fire and air mix must faster of course, but even such identity and indemnity shape sift- and shiftings are not intractable. ------- Nobody but the blindly blunted have anything less eyeball precious to lose than a window to a whole and happy world. ------- I better differentiate myself and help you distinguish mine from the use of rainbow colours by the gay crowd right from the start lest my use of rainbow colours leads yall to miscontrue rather than come 'to a true strew' with and through me; 'Homoerotuckalls' don't get much closer to realizing any of the aims herein expounded than other gender senders, blenders, enders and offending benders; their militarist-imperial origins are a latent threat though their gleeful jumpstarting till the batteries are dead is a good defuser and pre-empter of macho violence spreading beyond consenting adults. Another few distinction I need to make concern my (albeit complementary) differences from and with Greenpeaces (I believe it evolvaluted already, do you see that?) though the gulf is much less wide between them and myself than it is in the above mentioned case; matter of fact, this here body of knowledge is just the other side of their coin, the hidden underbelly, the neglected complement, the secret ingedient and missing link for their heroic quest to end war, destruction and insipid agression. My greatest tiff with them concerns and is best illustrated by pointing to my understanding of the deeper and less obvious meaning of one of their most used quotes, the one about the inedibility of money, purportedly from a native american, but wampun is at least literally just as unpalatable. Many of the hundreds of pages at this site intend to show that a type of money which is closer to the generic promise of prestige, freedom, liberation and celebration has always existed in earthlike conditions, it is the simple stuff now abused and prostituted, even literally, as a cover up for epitomistically polarized products like Range rovers, completely coated in mud and captioned with: mother's finest.....We need some new laws against such blatant lies and throw in an outlawing of single persons in cars for good measure while we're at it.............. I just found another candidate for prosecution: pinnacle systems dares picture a girl kissing frogs with a caption which reads: edit out the frogs, keep the prince. Is the unreality of it legitimating the cynical take on the plight of frogs which has yet to approve from laws requiring 100 percent recycling? For more comment on ilk of this kind, like paintcompanies, offering toxic products all too often go here: 888 my sample file 888***

I (may) have some old style crutchety Dutch startup capital to pool for a tribal attempt at permapleachingly 'currenticing' biotecture; preferably with mixedly aged, specied and spaced, in short: old growth in the backyard past the toolshed and workshop. (see gn.apc.org/nattytrust for a similar pipe dream). ------- Let's aim for a modest but whole watershed and send our leaders to the summits for a fostering dust to mud fluffing feast. ------- My 70 boxes of books are looking for a quiet, grateful home as well, they need one even more than I maybe, ...having been shut away in boxes for decades now; a spot by a garden at the edge of a forest, traffic out of earshot, etc... I'd pay to see that happen.....help....I am planning a tour of intentional and happenstance communities picked from a guide called Eurotopia.

Ever wondered how you can manage to metabolize inertia (physical + mental) for steady accrual? How to show your teeth so they will *(pre)*digest death itself? I did....so much I didn't even find the time to brush mine but if anybody is getting a grip (begetting grippies) and begins to understand opposable fingers and Hegelian tools it just might be me.

Head, Heart + Hand*(tool)* space is Z playz, integer, whole yet multiply fractionated and principled without mass productions, defense and other forms of unsportsy slavery. ---- Bit of an ugly job to do before getting us back to the pipe dreamtime again: Beat the bullies where it hurts their pocketbooks or something.

Fresh dust is the cozy and cageyness bridging, main theme here, welcome to the exciting world of mineral circulation. The will to (mechanically make and spray, blow or dab) fresh powder about can become an extension of organically and unconsciously mobilized will. In other words: the will to meta-mobilize fresh powder cannot be exerted.... proceeds not quite the same way in which will mobilizing fresh powder did of old, does, and will again under similar circumstances; not to mention speed and magnitude rate differences, but they can both organize (enhance, evoke and 'inform') each other. give or take a few hundreds of billions of lightyears, sunbeams or whatever. The will to powder may follow the powder that 'willed'; there is more use, simplicity, fun, etc in mimicry of than in arguing about accidental or designed origins of such phenomena as life.

Therefore fast forward to mimecha-neth-ically mobilized powder and keep it growing organically.

The texts here aim for duo- or compregenderer patriotism, a kind of perpendicularizing dissemination: to dig, slice, dice and dish up the vitals of rock.

Green Con-N-on-Drumming and 'firing' [ash] away on the road from part, past full to future time autonomy, independence, harmony, attractiveness and so on. Nonreactionary [thus not fascism provoking] activism revolving around (humility of) the most ancient and natural re- and conceptacle, blessed frictafructo-fertilizer: mineral milk!, be*(s)*motheringly making of which mimmicks, yet not without a fittingly ballsy gimmick prevents periodically imposed, by providing an agreeable kind of humility here considered choice enough to give voice. ------- Make a fist to match and tame, keep a breast of the ballsy, single out the bullies early enough to take and keep them easy, so they don't single themselves out making all others queasy, harness and engage all braves ready to bust too much tension toward pro-reductively feeding their family tree and set it off at declension. Gimme half of the defense budgets please. ------- ..

I would settle for a blue eyed bastardjew movie directorship (shapetreaty tree treat) to show GI JoeBlow the way to gogogrow on fun and valour; multidimensionally embedded and multigearedly racy, let me (live on the net) lead a few to herds of inflammation suitably armed to douse with dust and dispense with seeds (not to mention defuse da militant's paranoia).

I try punch keys mostly to help allow them follow the armybranch orders they (and I) like best (I argue it needs equally strong legs to stand upon, one for enforcible ultimatums directed at tyrants, one for repair from the bottom on up) in order to free all kinds of complexity degrees sporting populaces up and down the food chain; free the top of it from one secretive and nontransparantly centralized tyranny after another no less than the bottom end of it from one polish- and/or bustable boulderocking growth block before the next strata of 'throughrootability' (literal translation from D+G) (oh sorry, no not Deleuze and Guattari, Dutch and German) is up. ---------- With a little luck they will turn their campaign trails into a path blazed for children’s fruit picking pageants within a mere few generations, the ballsy ones among them can do without bloodshed altogether and spil powder as much as they like going to feed oceanlife with it.

Prosem: Lower the tolerance thresholds of and to *(bio)*freedoms, boost and burgeon the latter with the will to powder and flex the former cause light lives in and levers life from space, it can paint the skies red sometimes and often looms big and orange too at horizone hours, it showers us with golden yellow goodness of beaming mercy. Greyclad clouds wander along in and bycause of it. Will they find perfectly snug fits around and in green stuff, helped to enter it from below as just dust (sated waters) rewarding the mercurially wishy washy water bearerswho care about the state of nature that tickle token tad on which rests the history of inspiration for the way of rights while dark dies and lies dead below it drifting on a sea of darkling fire. SEE THE REMAKE IN THE 2000 INTRO FILE

The indexed bibliography listing the least known of my favorite resources and references to seeds, *(hand)*tools, directories, magazines, guides, catalogs, methods and other aspects most completely.

Motto: Mute and voteless participants in the food chain of beings may be small but outnumberingly numerous and if democracy wants to protect minorities rather than impose majority rule, it had better take note of these ancestors and keep 'm happy, personification of such hap- and helpless critters would be keynote of any and all new and improved religion, humble and benevolent. ------- Ask any from amongst Myriads of rocksoftening miniscules and they 'll confirm that humans (he and hy both but differently) are soft on helping biomamass and aloft, good at buggering and burning it, bad at earning it.....

--- Microbe soft, where do you want to grow to stay and wend your way aloft? (see linguae chapter for some Joycean microbesoftened mine era all).

The economy ultimately runs on metabolization of sunshine, the rate of which is a prime candidate for a truely honest standard of value, this process can be most suitably stimulated with such crop sweetening charges as any paramagnetic rock (dust) can provide. ----- The full spectrum trace minerals present in lava's, basalts, and glacial gravels act as catalysts in the process of growing disease resistant, nutritious and tasty foods, so lets expand the reach, range and after effects of sonic resonances so far but poorly employed in sermons, concerts, speeches and presentations; go listen to a rock grinder and imagine what this ice age mimicking size reduction could do for ecology, (provide humility, humus, extasy, put an end to scarcity, phallic fallacies, life atrophying technology addictions and protheses production) when instruments become pageant pilgrim taskforce, truely moving 'instrewments'.

rockdust [rock dust = see search result diffs in chronotes 2020]] is a coinage I regard a basic and common kind of *(p)recursion as most provisionar(il)y innovative '(pre)venting', understood as '(p)*reduction', that is to say: the kind which enables, stimulates, catalyzes, etc, the metabolization of minerals: oxide reduction = reversed fireworks, ashes the hard way; it is more manly to throw water into rock than vice versa. If matter is but light with a talent for accretion and intense densifying, putting on weight and it into the scale, with life un- and enfolding between these extremes it follows that refreshing where and when growing conditions are favorable is a good idea. ---------- Render back to rega-l-and hand lender his legal tender; the rate of photosynthesis stimulated, salvaged, served and savoured as an accurate and regional value standard. ------- Would it not contrast perfectly with the exclusive, top down and speculative credit emission founding fables (except mine of course) playing havoc with the cooperative roots of capitalism? --------- Aggression expressed constructively (get the bullykids to toast their testing on size reduction musiclamour) makes the difference between provision of abundance versus fighting over scarce goods.

Mobilizing for terrafically vertical traffic. Ideally ballsy braves can deliver proof of their prowess and excercize their muscle in solid ball games resulting in polished and powdered rock in emulation of the once statuary (but since crumbling) achetype and role model Cernunnos who let his wealth run away onto and into the ground for which all creation loved him. Historians may scoff at this romantic 'potion notion' taken from a myth they interpret bluntly as just another deified hunting hero but if we are ever to use our mettle and metal peacefully (Cernunnos' torqued ramheaded snake leads me to suspect he minted 'coin of the realm', this thus, wether or not modulated and fancified model is a good start). --------

(BLFS) Thus begins an ancient tree alphabet-calender, a letter per moon, but now we live in the age of raging and rapid firing. (Bo(u)lder Language For Security). --------

The harder money becomes, the more optimistic market ratings get. It often gets softened by bloating infloaters to pack and ship receivers off by consensus if not clout, tis the nothing new order of the era; it's time to sprout the kernel of truth from this crude and rude bolster best broken in just time, namely that such rhetoric may be taken to mean the following at a more quintessential, primary, fundamental, deep, substantial and basic level: more realistic market ratings thanks to a hard sort of current carrier softened: paramagnetic rockdust catalizes accumulation of quality photosynthesized biomass; more, more and never enough with succesrates as local, regional and perhaps one day global standards of value. ---------- Food, fibre and soilbanking through roots' right of way. At the humble side of life, small change is never too dearly dour, so plow her in, that fluxily fix for fun and freedom: long live reducible karmadeductable flowerable flours that lead us to and through the mystery of many monies' worthwile truthful hours. ------- On the long raid ridden road back to a true gift economy the ideal inflation free, symbolic yet significant and systematic monies must be: sensitive: dated and timed (in/out); informative: provided with specs about, emission conditions, circumstances, location and intent, such as par participants, etc; and:steadily stabilizing: accurate trade statistics and reports must be up to date and updated frequently. ----------- In short: definite, descriptive properties need be listed. Libertarians are in love with cryptography, they figure it is a crowbar to pry into and break or circumvent big bad government, as the case may require. I love playful cryptism like James Joyce's but not the manipulative kind which may indeed be used against bothersome bodies but as easily by them. I stand for decryptive pro *(p)*revisionism and reprovisualizing.

A note on illustrations: I have collected a whole gallery full of paper fruitbags, appealing pictures from calenders, magazines, etc, but most of them (58 pages worth) are diagrams by the various cosmologists just mentioned and reflect the content of the book rather poorly but I find attempts to correlate tone, colour, scale, frequency and flow phenomena into sequences of sorts by means of such and models irresistable, however irreconciliably idiosyncratic they are, this field is indeed as multifacetted as that of rare and common crystals. To me the mental giants are the least boring people in the world and the inconsistencies between them will prove to be the enigma's of the 21 century's teens and twenties, may they all shine and be revered and represented in the range of didactic tactics (other major influences will be found in the bibliography). Post script (june 99): meanwhile I managed to scan and display some pics; accesible via the index the lord up above and the lady down below: the lord of light levers and leaves the lady around he loves to use a hand to shine some light into her body so tightly earthbound for such blessings it lays in waiting down below patient yet ready and eager to grow. Proportionate share and surge for mind and muscle stimulates autonomy, selfsufficiency, voluntarity, attraction, vitality and choice.

ROCK, TREE, HUMAN AND OTHER BEING MINGLE PROGRAM THROUGH DISCERNMINT AND MIMIC OF TRULY NATURAL AND MOST COMMON CURRENT

A wondrous work of wasteless words which propagates melioration of priceless preciousness. ------- All the prose of every lesson formulates lack and reaches for what is missing, a truly merry song merely accompanies uninhibited twine up and sexhibitionistic mi- and macrocosmic mimic that mixes forces from below and above, within and without, scaled up and down to where we take considerable influence on provision of and for its reju-venerable requirements: musical rockcrushing.

"A book must be an axe for the frozen sea within us" (Kafka). ------ Nothing is impossible for those who don't have to do it themselves (Weiler). 'we owe > gravity coherent emotion', (Gurdjeff). ------- "The coming era can only be wholistic if we integrate the mineral stage of existence" (translated from "something in nothing" by Arnold Keyserling). ------- "The assembly and particular mix of minerals is like a cookie cutter code key that guides what develops from rock", (Dan Winter).

Young at heart ones loves to blow mud bubbles minds altered by an intentional peek at scores and spans of aeons can palpably perceive and see why: namely that there aint no conviction quite like a headstrong and stubborn one. (poetpiet). ------- Setting rock to flow and grow 'presievibly' helps receive radiation 'hospitiatably' whereever they set up a prefractory jubilation station. ------- Preamble on vertical viability versus speed and space: Everybody invariably talks of what they are and have inoculated themselves with or gravitated towards; the degree of projection, transference and alienation differs greatly though. ------- Once the main aim becomes bridging distance to digest space, our cycling assumes a restlessly linear pace, so those of birth, death and fertility suffer; sights set on heading through time lose credibility till their tangible titbit terminals are recognized and remembered to restore balance now and then when space is given into such frozen timespans so they can take place. ------- I got a stone to grow and feed to the crops I raise they 'll be so tasty, my friends will shower me with praise, rock is a more peaceful project when sent through time than a perfect projectile to hurl through or guard some space, it thus doesn't bring down any preys nor threatens this, that or the other race. I first flex some well when to dust I grind and wet that unlocked lifeclocking rock to feed the forerunners up of all that which feeds my fully lust and lovefilled mind. ------- If your idea of a race is to cleave space in yet against time at the highest possible pace, it removes and remotes you from life; an arms race even kills it outright unless it leads to collective meteor monitoring. A rocky time spacing race isn't really hip till it gets a grip on intimacy. ------- dustfree society: Freeing dust from rock helps ground cover incorporate it. ------- ------- I ain't a one trick pony and don't do'm equally well but let you be the judge about which one is or what ones are right on the money and worth the effort if any, many startred out as spifffily spluttered commendably harmonic audibles and so a younger audience will most likely lend an ear happily (verrukt). ------- ------- Born in a not quite sunken, but subsiding, subtitled and subsidized land I wasn't long kept out of touch yet longer than I wanted, with written brainfood other than in that which foreigners call Dutch, I was raised and subsisted on it 18 years straight but wrote only two thirds as much ....as this work in it (http://huizen.dds.nl/~poetpiet) on the same subjects, (due to extensive travelling) with even more poetic liberties taken, neologisms coined, wordwelds and longer winded phraseologies than here half the time (not to make up for smallish vocabulary or discourage plagiarism and so be unmistakably (in)comprehensible, but to escape censure, reveal secrets, and dig for the connections that got shredded and dumped on, all reflections on the difficulties of differentiation and crushing rock to make it come alive). English has been a second language most of the time since the late seventies, (my late teens), the third being German, in which I wrote nearly nothing but read some of the best (yet little known) works on religion and culture (Keyserling and Lessing), economics (Beckerath, Rittershausen) cosmology and agriculture (Hensel); it is obvious to me that these 'disciplines' as well as law and technology are ever such relatively relaying, parallel, perpendicular,....in short, multipolar partners, take for instance the analogous bloatings from monetary inflation and artificial fertilizers, life's pollution (modern and perverted sense, see Ernest Young) desecrated mental and physical current respectively (dealt with extensively in chapter 2: (p)restoring animation to momentum), not to mention endless evidence that man bites off more than he can chew or if he juicelessly chews on anyway, certainly cannot digest.

Technical peculiarities and implications: Text-segment are always indicated with a Capital letter at the start of a line, usually a different fontsize also and reflect grammatical complexity with macrocosmic maturity, which is sensitivity to celestial subtlety and timeliness according to Arnold Keyserling who even manages to correlate the periodic system with our planets, but it doesn't jive with the attempts by Walter Russel very well (concentric versus coil model and suspiciously 2 dimensional, Keyserling predictably correlates elemet valende groups with planets. Winter comes up with a platonic geometry link a la Secret Doctrine). Luckily (or unluckily, see the Auzzie journey digest) her*(m)*etics never have floated a collective boat very well. ------- The shorter pieces are relatively straight "up and down", they are much like slogans or aphorisms, eminently quotable in any company attending the deed I pine to start an army (which follows the armed tyrant disarming forces) for and sing those hymns of praise which rhythm and rhyme best. They take turns with the longer alineas which branch, twist, curve, slide and interlock to make for deeply revealing significance rather haphazardly. So the aphorism sizes also indicate complexity and/or continuous spurts of insight, the ingredients of which may have received due puzzling and patterning process, they suffered additions, roundouts, reshuffles and intrusions over as much as 10 years afterwards and the finished 'bites' are roughly rearranged by side swiping theme and derivative around the main issue, I try to make the most of paper, I use waste when I can, to me the amount of bites I can fit on a bit of biomass has the connotation of mineral content in produce, which is a major determinant for nutritive value and structural integrity and not purely a question of taste anymore but measurable with a little handheld 'brix' reader (see Acres, Philip Callahan recently started selling a more sophisticated (and 3 times as expensive) spectrometer). ------- I am a great fan and firm believer in the virtues of reread-worthyness thanks to dense and complex composition that challenges mental penetration, they are like the hard ones among woods grown in deep dark sheltering shades, yet try to differentiate as precisely as hard rock can be made to feel fine and feed multifarious fare fairly. ---[next 3 alineas tweaked a little in 2020, old version in chronotes] ---- Take a deep breath again, another 11 line sentence coming up: I often compound several emphases and meanings through strategic use of comma's and parentheses for instance, resulting in long lines, so that depending on where in your succesive (and I hope eventually successfull) attempts to read me you get flung from my roller-coaster trains of thought and drilled out of these worm squirm holes of high speed timeterrain gaining thought, failing to lean into their turns when your in*(clin)*tonation veers away from the next segment or conclusion (my multi-million micromiles worth of (dirt)biking speak here, not to mention falling off at 15 and losing my self-awareness for about 5 hours, which was betrayed when i kept asking what time it was, first huge scare i gave my long suffering parents) you must retrace, -read and -phrase to achieve the full flavor of closely correlated following; not an uncommon phenomenon when acquainting oneself with an unfamiliar and potent author's words thanks to the mental time border crossing exchange rates of phrasecoining which gradually substituted for sword crossing encounters over already animate and at certain times especially inviting, open*(ed)* physical space, those were in their turn the still earlier forms of conflict since they arose during the mating season (and lasted no longer initially).

Meantime most disputes are guided to peripheral excesses, hyped for mediawhoremouth mullah to not upset the structural cunning which compulsorily collects violence autonomy contributions to shore up the false and illusory flagging of centralizable security (a 'state' of undeath that can be prolonged by exporting roughies to colonies etcetera) besides other coinage rights and calls itself culture, even when it fails to broach, approach, reach nor teach the breaches and breaks, whether micrometerwise glacial wear or more hotheaded tear.. that actually do feed primal continuity, a day 1 trick from the coolheadedness rule book, predating the very rocks themselves as it were, perhaps even formalized by gaseous beings, who the hell really knows?

Likewise, wether this is driven by the same powers that make a school of fish swivel and turn, a flock of birds fly hither and thither or wether a pooled [culted and occulted] desire to dominate helps arms industry pipers call the tune with impunity i know not, yet even I myself often feel to have sometimes triggered, nudged and healed crowd directive qualities in some crystalizer thereof and/or other.

So, since there is no helping it, find your alpha, fall in love, join or start a sect, state or commune and prove not all charismatic leaders are secretive and become massmurderers or write a book in defense of dust as the ink for livelyer writs (see mother's milk in gaialogistics) to take the charge of being a significant other that follows like a shadow. ------- I hope this gives you, my dear reader, a sense of what it may mean to delegate and dispense autonomy which gives credit, namely: to muster help for quenching the most burning questions, like: how to trace and tend to our rarest blo*(ss)*oms as well as finding ways to juggle the dynamics between rewarding the most massive patience and punishing the most vast and momentous hoards. ------- -------

Enjoyment of this book will thus take a radical love of ling*(u)*ae: from pictography, poetry, etymology and dislexia all the way (back) to the origins of alphabets and treecalenders. ------- Unfortunately these and other matters of utmost con- and sequence, perspective and proportion devolved into more and more abstraction, some of which I still puzzle over myself (rhyming my favorite cosmologists, for instance, as alluded to earlier). The subtle shift of letters and meaning within words, which change (over) time, can be used as fit fun and joke cracking occasions to help *(r)*evolve language into vision. ------- In short: my multiple close call and correlate clarifications enhance flavors of contrast and show as much of the crosswordpuzzling wrangle and tangle as blamewordblock to famewordfun of dust to lust nameword sunlight must allow radically. ------- So this book contains a range of most simple and short to such extremely longwinded and convoluted (but not contradictory except when speaking about Jesus or other institutionalized personalities) formulations about laws of nature and culture, that I have trouble following my own associations sometimes, I corrected this book through at least 18 times, if you come across inaccesible formulations, just think of 'm as hard rocks thirsting for life and worth the effort of penetrant lag ald lead staggering rereads. ------- Some of these here my children are wrought well enough, others less luckily and in need of more attention and orientation, metaphor, emphasis, etc. ------- Could I get some feedback from people on what you thought the best and suggest how to improve the nearest misses? This would help me make the final and streamlined selection for a better lasting of this ode to our rocks of all ages. I'd like to offer a real audio version cause I find young people quick to convert as soon as they may pay attention to the sonic resonance of an otherwise apparently less obviously spellbinding piece.

prospects and predilections: Some of this here may be a bit much too concentrated for most people's mental stomach and I did not staffle my bits from easy to hard (toying with that idea, though), but I dare you to mix and stir it into a more conventional medium with the familiar blood, gore, flames and explosions all you want, the apparent dilution will yet escape its reactionary taint to enhance contrast and complete the human spectrum for once. I hope this is not my last claim to fame, but only a tease and taste, my role in a big epic script, which I part with freely (considering Internet dump to attract a publisher and make all souldiers look for a chance to desert and sign up with me, of course revocably..........well that's what your looking at ......still working on it.....) cause I can for the life of me never lose it, though it takes a 1000 years to roll in real time, (Zappa's babysnake style animators welcome), and its obscurity if not obscureness will last my lifetime I 'm afraid, though I hope to get quite old and pow*(d)*erful. I hope too, that my next work will be less finicki, more off the cuff and reely real or altogether unnecessary. My graphics, diagrams, cartoons, models and music making audience is welcome to help me flesh out these next needed (sorry, addicted to the childlike, I guess) dimensions before I muddle down that new to me road (by) myself, I am as stuck with my theme as with my birthday like so many of my rolemodels: M Toonder, a Dutch fairytale like comic artist (words written underneath miniature paintings, not in balloons), I dedicated my simultaneously appearing (quite untranslatable as explained above) Dutch book to him; B Fuller with reservations along the lines of Wendel Berry's (with whom I have (indian) reservations in turn (see Space Colonies)) and a good few others who never tire of bouncing their old selves off of yet another face of the earths current lives which can get back in some sort of better touch through them. I trust you will see and agree it suits not just me, which is all the reason it takes to perform the soon to be common human intellect rite with it or any such pointers: round the world at beck and call in no time flat for singularity support, entirely voluntary and cheap too. But not everyone wants to glimpse and glean the few most likeminded compatriots whom one can get close and even gravitate to physically, that is: with whom one may relocate, start, have and be a band of and with soil besides mere spirit, nor needs to when what they share is the autonomating talent for vertical traffic control, the only direction that counts beyond and between life or death itself (life's deadly and death's lively borders).

Esoteric twist: You are advised to read the remarks on Skeptical Enquirer's baby/bathwater confusion in the Gaean cosmology section of the bibiliography before proceeding. The playingcard deck which can spread over the year somewhat unevenly to allot everybody an impersonal birthcard shows my life's assignment, groundswell and theme this time around to be harmonious change through labour on the mineral stage (second spade, the earthy suit), I am skeptical enough to consider myself lucky I found this out long after I fell in love with most common and fresh dust. Its natural, cyclically segregated history, production, properties and early signs of a previabilitation revival, rivalling, redeeming thus possibly preventing or fending off an ice age (not just in, with and at the price of a diamondfuel forestalling, fossil fired fever as we do now) are my main themes, early intimations of this war obviating future music are extracted from, and after modification reapplied (see p 62 of "prophets without honour", where it is said of Freud (along who's introvert lines I look the other way in a sense) that he gave only too familiar formulas and concepts a slight twist so as to gain a brighter focus and better resolution on and for them, I know many people are struggling with and through similar phases in turn) to most classic categories and disciplines in both their secular and academic versions: philosophy, religion, psychosocial science, economics, music and physics, in short, both humanities and exact sciences which show the reach and range for simple directing of the min*(e)*d in the sense I came to understand it, refer, date up and reconvert to it. ------- Earth's water and dry oxide interweaving flux correlates closely with its precession wobble width when it comes to aging ill or well according to cosmic clock conceptualizer Walter Russell. ------- Taurus-Scorpio is one of the often depicted axis on the wheels Ezekiel saw way up in the milky middle of the sky pie, but if we leave the presently ending (in crisis) yet in hand and working order era of destruction without integration, along the axis Pisces-Virgo we would forgo a chance to shift this psychomechanical gearnotch consciously instead of burdening our already bulging unconscious even more; this is to say that if we forget to flex rocks as swell as reason, tension builds and tolerance goes. ------- History is resonant reminescence, not that which is finished, over and done with but that which has to be repeated cause and when it wasn't learned from nor digested without residue.

Main theme: The academic work done in the past on stone flour application and mineral *(pre)*cycling stimulation and mimicry has mostly been tainted with prejudice, imprecision and inaccuracy, some of it is reproduced by Remineralize the Earth, a global network and update forum of hobbygardeners (and ecovolunteers like me for whom nature lays down the law). Philip Callahan is the most promising and inspired scientist among these who is qualified and I expect him to come up with the next batch of secrets wrested and teased from nature's wonderful wristflicktricks and multiply mud, skin, bark and hide hidden suprises of gentlest power and pulse too, his work is available from Acres USA, see bibliography under Gaean cosmology. A questionaire (see flunked flyer, chapter 5) which I sent around to farmers and quarries elicited no direct response but 7 years later a USDA conference was held in Beltsville (videao's available from Dan Winter and the commendablinklist.htmhas some relevant sites) about the logistics and lore surrounding production, deployment and properties of fresh rock particles and dust. I have held on to a dream of travelling with a rockunravelling instrument for about twice as long now, perhaps I get to lead a battalion of them some day. ------- My main derivations get elaborately and somewhat systematically rephrased,

-cast and -molded to show the ramifications of my strategy for many walks of life and stains of thought with great care taken to vary the versions within my none too rigid- nor rigorously technical vocabulary. Though I can't pretend I profess a simple style for formulation, I dare say I succeeded more accesibly at that than B Fuller (triangulation, tensilities, inventive inventory taking) and more colourfully than W Russel (animate as well as inert gender polarities, divinity, space and spin) cause I am far less a left brainlobe cosmologist but what I call chaotically comprehensive, others will surely judge as distractive hairsplit-wit.

psycho*(self)*analysis: Knowledge being judged unfit for the faithful I was discouraged from acquiring it early on and goaded, lured, baited or pushed instead to play dynasty with papa while I in my turn thought to call his global erosion, overgrazing and meantime hormone craze causing meat industry to a much needed and timely halt. Cooperation the harder but more viable way was easy enough I thought, like any son of a success does, occasionally even still when finally realizing radical ones paradoxically but almost invariably get crucified. Beating my pride in an unfortunately physical rather than psychically (or was it physical also cause psychically incomplete and undone?) dissociative way was easier than me dads mental one, (in a simultaneously worked on Dutch manuscript I am up to 11 pages on him, barely 2 here). Yet, being somewhat waversome of character I expended a lot of energy resisting, fighting and figuring *(ab)*out these, what I came to feel were well intended but erring macho manipulations. ------- I am reminded of a Tarot card I pulled which showed a shepherd at an open gate, animals inside, bu who is to say he was not an animal liberation frontline fighter in disguise for whom blood ties are never enough? ------- The small s self serving man of action corrupts, cuts off and spills water, treesap and blood until he learns to respect the man of thought who traced his roots to humility and invests long term in seemingly worthless and rigid but nurturing death, not with passive sympathy only to recoil and retreat in a cynic's shell, but with passionate empathy which treats life well. ------- My mother taught me the only way she knew how to survive these: suffer in silence, skulk in a shell, perhaps hence my sym- and eventual empathy for almost equally mute and mystified (rather than mistified, unfortunately) rocks who carry our day yet. Despite or thanks to all this, my present life's talents, resources, goals and aims have been finding the pioneers of justice, cleanliness and inspiration, dead or alive, with a preference for the former at first, and all thanks to the faith of my parents in me. ------- A few more reasonable ways, whys and just how this book might matter most to people struggling to formulate and disseminate a similar sense of decency It should turn the tide and lead us back to laying up store in live leaves, shades and houses more than this dead, yet, thanks to organic inks on hempfibre, at least not clearcut derived printing paper, fully compostable and then rephotosynthetisizable ones. -------

Printing worries: I 'm a little worried about the printing consequences of an Internet appetizer posting, I fear they would mostly be single sided, so I beg, implore, beseech and otherwise urge, nay command you to run 20 copies double sided if you do download, or if that is impossible, wait till I, or help me find a publisher. Isn't that the least I am entitled to demand? ------- If this book is to be made from woodpulp, the trees must be horse drawn from and grown in a manually cared for mixed forest or a similarly maintained small scale hemp for fibre plantation, the employees own the permaculture embedded company-acommodation-orchard complex outright. Nice pipe dream eh? ------- This book is a bout about love as the golden mean measure, more universal and stable that the standards of lenght and weight along which I have tried to realign some of the most ancient, sacred yet simple, basic yet abused and persistently perverted perspectives, concepts and meanings about, for, in and of life. ------- I feel here is something for everyone, especially young, smart yet ballsy braves who wanna help feminine charm to run rampant, so wild and free that it turns entire war and time zone's into the voluntary fun variety of parties, give it a quick thumb and see for yourself, then let me know.

The slogan (in dutch) on this paper fruit bag reads: Veel mag, Fruit moet! Lots goes, (but) fruit is a must. If fruit is a must item (all selfimposed must proven to be everything from unharmful on up must be allowed . . . at the very least . . .asap), lots of it is not only not or not as much a must but may not be allowed/compatible at all! Leave (out) the choisest or be not left a wellwilling voice fed upon what empowers it to rejoice and read Joyce some more. :: :: :: :: I happen to think tis is the prettyest and greasyest fruitbag out of my around a hundred item collection of such from around Europe This little image is called: 'first fruit first', it is my first scanning a picture effort appropriately; hope you can see it; If this paper bag was the worst thing that happened to fruit besides being divided, and having to cross the gap between 'producer' and 'consumer' things wouldn't be so bad but still bad enough. A right to (need I add it? reciprocal!) privacy is not in the picture for Saddam Hussein and neither is a right to 'mutual orchard tending' for more innocent people, since we are breaking more and more less and less musical chairs.

The beginning of the following comment is not as relevant as it was before I made the orignally 569K version into the 89K downsized derivative you see here (and will have seen if you came by way of my Index and scrolled it all the way to the bottom):Sorry about the schizo-rift running right through that poor tiroler fruitpicker and the heart of Europe, following that old battered Bear line wall and the southwest coast of Africa, the bull ain't feeling all of a piece neither I you ask me; half an hour of frustrating photoshopping make me leave it in, so there. Can you live with it? Oops almost forgot, if I remember right, this postcard size painting is done by a Colombia University drawing instructor, a Jewish artist called Thomas Naegele if I recall correctly., but I could be wrong. I added the rainbow in any case. Naegele, by the way, always hides world continent morphologies, proportions and silhouettes in his art work.

An interpretation of Noah minus cargocult perversion of trees: It is said that Adam named everything, then started playing favorites, soon after that collected some, eventually mutated a lot and in the end destroyed most, he better learn to share what's left now. I have never heard told as clearly as I for one see it, that, when a balancing sway over some fractal arc within arc diversified and large enough neighbourly areas is kept, like the watershed one receives liquids from, your reward and blessing will be rain and shine in their proper proportions, even while the surrounding bioregions of your world can drown in sinful poison or die of thirst without touching these microclimes. Too bad fairy tales and fair laws were long so irrelevant as a rule. Numerous Noahs built so many boats that floods became something obviously immanent and concommitant. Making the reasonable supposition that a lot of bible characters like other mythical heros and gods stood for a way of life subscribed to by a load of individuals as there are always fewer scripts than actors, less innovation than repetition, we can carry on investigating if large scale boatbuilding has something to do with deforestation and subsequent flooding problems.
Noah again: The story of Noah shows the sweeping consequences of male rape and pillage; as we all know, the shipbuilding industry was made possible by the enormous store of immense trees just waiting to give up their lives and most likely end up washing onto some beach soon thereafter or be reduced to ashes after more unspeakable torture, rather than being left in peace preventing disastrous floods caused by erosion and while we are on that score, what to think of present day Rainbow practise? I don't mean the unnumbered paint producing or applying companies that can't even or don't want to even get the colours straight, but the ones with an ideological bend of mind, looking upon the apearance of a rainbow during one of their more like funfunding than freedom founding operations. Old beat and wired up vehicles spewing noxious fumes on their pilgrim path of gathering and festy trails where the sites once found are heavily im- and compacted, then left with imperfectly composted shitholes (too big and deep, no fresh dust mixed in) and ashes; mulch and soilbuilding dead wood left in peace a lot less.

finest f-words: What feelings broke away from icey packs and melted, which souls in these clouds, tiding to and fro more flavorsome favor and structurally beautiful animated moisture, which fiercely vertical traffic fuels who's filtering hairroots? Unite to diversify for fruit fostering fun, turdsturdying rock raise and soak for mudmoving sunny moisture hoist to help nurse trees and freight fruit!
Familytrees for fractal foliation affiliated beleaf systemics: Some of my favorite philosophers Lessing and Lyons maintain that man's thinking process is a feverish figuring we suffer due to frustrating loss of a feeling for the fruitfulness between the two (tectonic and solar) fires, most of which doesn't reach far beyond the scan, bescribble and scratch of the surface, now far out front and then lagging way behind in the form of a selfserving profit orientation, some source theories are alluded to further on. Lets turn the corner, add directions, axes, symmetries, selfreference, overlap, layering diversity and dimensions now. Acknowledge the essential status of thus far predominantly underdogged countercultural terminology of 'deep' and 'high', the latter referring neither to phallic architecture nor overdoses of drugs. :: :: :: ::

A comment on my consistently centered format: Most philosophers, especially French ones it seems, like to reason, if that's what you dare call their viciously virtual, wildly circumscriptionary and abstractly conceptual yet reactionary sweep of generalizions, from the mysterious status and standpoint of a rock: hold the body very still, perhaps to make the mind race and rev, keep feelings cool, focus on physical flows and blows to act out a few impulses without letting on if they ever act out any conclusions for a change and while. It seems like what they are insisting to find different ways of saying is this: GIMME A BREAK. :: :: :: ::

CENTRALITY vs RADIALITY (a title i didn't think of until the 26th of februari):

Somewhere in the sixties Deleuze, as I found out shortly after he jumped out the window to burst from his skin, late 95, was formulating fancy ways to up the status of and express his preference for disembodied flitflatter dreams (his co-author of many years was a psychologist) whe he said for instance: 'trees make me tired', attaching the metaphorical meaning of daytime, rigidly cramped style, mainframe centralized and extractive, reductionist reason and homogenizing logic no doubt, which due to my poor French and his time/space ratio distortions was extra hard to make out at first and also bycause when I feel like mentioning trees and tired in one sentence, the most pertinent perception is quite to the contrary one where fatique results from the lack of these, my kind of real, tangible and good vibe antennes, almost too perfect and even sacred to use as an abstraction at all, let alone a derogatory one. :: :: :: :: In '97 I spent a few more hours with 'Thousand plateaus' (almost as many pages and subjects) and found it ranged from the indeed most abstract to such relevant and timely gems as a comment on another important and late Frenchman's work: Pierre Clastres's Society without a state which argues that grueling initiations are an almost literal branding and imprint in service in service of classlessness and egalitarianism preempting statehood and warfare. I am afraid that we have to go all the way back to our monkey kin to find consistent evidence of enduring peaceableness (Wrangham, Waals, v/d)

The much more gloomy and eerie French guy called Baudrillard seems to try divergences and derivations that derail into anything goes (so nothing really does anymore besides idling and rev of melancholia) cerebrality, critiqued by Hakim Bey who shares a love for nomadism with all of us. :: :: :: :: Deleuze and Guattari call their rhizomatic reservoir of vitality something that offers 'smooth' chaos (a faint and mental flavor of course, not the moist mud kind), which he nevertheless glorifies as fertile without making the only such assertion justifying, concommitant and pragmatic splashy plunge into rock, not to mention the canopy cover under which soil isn't in the habit of accumulating very much let alone sustaining anything. Identifying with most inert, seclusionary and secret status is indeed as rampant and unquestioned as it has been throughout all of recorded historical of (f) course. :: :: :: :: The anthropomorphosized yet static view of the genus tree in question is taken as a principle which absurdly makes it sound as if there were only one kind of them or even just one of the only kind, or a single way they do business: by reduction, which is blamed for an indivisibility and lack of variety, that digests and therefore distorts everything, yet becomes more and more inpenetrable itself. Sticking to tangible materials as subjects for the socalled 'objective' metaphormating principles makes both of them look ridiculously distorted. He calls singular trunklike centralization a weak point which allows hyrarchy, but he doesn't point out or hint at a 2 way direction within living systems which trees are and definitely do have. Treelike referencing frames are judged not playful, flexible and fast enough, too local, static, vulnerable and territorial. A book has to distract. :: :: :: :: They like to honour night- and dreamtime of the unconscious and immanent so much that they command: do not reduce, they still mean mentally of course and I agree, but my point is this: why not emphasize where it does have its place, what about its physical preflection: that of oxides? I for one would outlaw such an unlifelike, from our own underpinnings distractive, rule. They go on to wish for the following: stop feeding of reductionist and thus disfigured and digestabilitated concepts to the voraciously imperialistic central reference uniformating transliterator. Trees imperialistic, the preconscious forerunners of voluntary eco- fascists? Well, yes and no. They conquered the world which would be a desert of irreducibles without them, but has this harmed other forms of life, less worthy ones, less productively oxide reducing and water transducting ones? Absurd! :: :: :: :: All this invective badmouths and distracts from real trees, misinforms about them and probably doesn't make people think of decentral diversity in terms of landscaping and extended familytrees even though that may have been aim and purpose of the excercise. Breaking and blocking the building of life with inertia rather than breaking inertia into building blocks of life is a perfect mirroring game, I must give them that, but before it makes any sense, one must turn these formulations over and inside out. A good rule to apply always when translating something from physical to mental realms and vica versa. :: :: :: :: Are these folks dreaming of the day one sees a tree only in a zoo with a sign in front saying: do not feed? :: :: :: :: :: :: They advize us to never sow, only to pick and be a nomad. plan live-love and work time/space planting projects :: :: :: :: Woods were once sacred, later fashioned into vessels for greed, then pulped to print lies, we will want of wonderful woods, when our feelings are froze, we can't see rock through, and through it justly for trees. :: :: :: :: True radi[c]als raise lofty trees to house healthnuts, who percrushion right ahead, knowing full well a tree is but a fluidized rock and sky flex, filter, fuser and fastener in slow motion which transpirates dignificently plantlike, upright, damn straight, erect and sprawling when given the care not left to chance for diversions or stopping short at mere good intentions. :: :: :: :: Lets grow limber timber further out for life in and from tree limbs. Love is respect for life and sets animals free, it vacuumcleans the life clogging mineralmass and spaces many a tree to encourage bioamassive provision and thus end scarcity. :: :: :: :: A conman smuggler balances his shades on his nose but an acquarian, you know the one, the 2 jug (might as well be cloud and rock) juggler, looking like he is pouring water from one (up) into the other at the water's edge, well, he is really miming a tree with 2 way rain and treesap traffic there, or a balance between wet and dry oxides, anyway, he plans to plant his (shadespenders) in the ground and grow 'm out overhead to sweat for him, these mild mellowing matrix filters restructure rain n shine (down) and water (up). :: :: :: :: Wood*(,)I like the shades you made for me, wood you give up your shades? :: :: :: :: A neighbourhood's sheltering grove and fruitful orchard is the only human right worth a chockablock rockfull filled hell of a fight, and after that just loafingly leave the leafy eaves in peacefully loving light. :: :: :: :: :: :: In my eyes a real stud crushes rock and grafts or nips buds here and there. :: :: :: :: We crackle, pop, crumble and bust the crust clumps to dust lustily, for credit emission of rhythmically breathdrawing soul tides to turn heartlights on up to snuff and fiercely funny enuf, this way rock goes green vertically rather than politically, thanks to grey piles and pools of life, poling lightprocessing pillars of stability skyward. :: :: :: :: Biomassive bonsai bounds beams bashfully: Some people need cigarettes, other drugs, attention or empire; I for one, like 2000 year old treehouses and so I found a way to get 'm started and if you and I can agreeably manpower life's plan, the planet will soon support such plants. :: :: :: :: Rock rubbers give polish, rockgrubbers leave loads of specks per shining beam and misty molecules in a neat and nifty bond they can use to tie water to and with. :: :: :: :: 2000 years hence the trees planted in the such span encompassing scope wholes will be alive and well and so will the people there in, those who will have dug through their heart hardening fear for and insulation from past, present and future. They will run a quite temperate regime in between the tweaky extreme stress of too hottish dry and frozen cold uneasyness. All categories of biomass will have max-multi-million-manifolded astronomically, inching deeper into more and more sensitized soilbankcredit, a very together practise to replace the symbolic surrogate ways which save, account, advertize, document and do or mean business less fruifully. :: :: :: :: Half a single sign precession time away maturely millenial treez demonstrate the exquisite stature of wisdom. Though now those skytickling and always in reason's season realtimepieces, are near enough to quite undone, just short of not even any left or at least some and that leaves us barely next to none. :: :: :: :: Trees are rocks and water, poured into the sky taking a ride on the aspir(al)*ing sunshine tripping around diconicomically. Light flows down and dark grows up to come clean and green in between. sex solitarily stalked yet socially steadied and sense of identity expanding, that is: ample foodchainlinking and exemplary sex, gene rations, matching fuses, handling vitality and steeling mettle vs AIDS, fiery versus fruitful flair
I shift emphasis of and extend sexual innuendo to life just below our feet and that growing well above our heads bycause it is before and after all an intergene rationing thing. :: :: :: :: :: Don't break love's mounting inner tension till you pry and screw a longing term loan out of a shyer and hardier, yet more pregnant femininannyhood than flesh and blood will bear out in generations without it: rock. :: :: :: :: :: Come delve into layers of its hidden meaning to provide surges of growth and flushes of pleasure. Call all that soilbanked credit a prepayment toward great grandkids. :: :: :: :: :: According to my definition of the marriage boat, it is the skinwinning heartrendering, rockcrushing and grovetending focal point of balance and lineage that provides an ample haven for kids and voluntarily rule abiding visitors or eager apprentices, kinda like an arch, alive and well, left to live in the shapes and shades of trees dotting a microclime (see Noah, page 20). :: :: :: :: :: :: Choice mate meat attracting strut, spectacle and circus is the orgiastic bonding mechanisms that males crave yet pervert with exclusive hunting and warlike mechanisms, fighting competition rather than providing for it. Us in, them out is OK as long as them is rocks and we go in to help them come out and up organically. :: :: :: :: :: Youthful fervor: I know where the kids are at, I feel for single celled organisms, tit for tat and that is that, break deadly gridlocked rock but don't cut our gene rations, don't splice 'm, feed and love 'm but do not dice 'm. How long can one take to live up to the thoughtful feeling of making one self comfortable and welcome with these here now and then those there too, grown up kids, how well can you handyman plan and lay away credits for your own next childhood? :: :: :: :: :: Youth has a sense of being a small island without souvenirs, in dire need of permission to touch, owning a paradoxical feeling of having nothing to hide in a secret world blocked by mere appearances, a self looking to mimic, meet and mirror itself, an onion hiding sweet nothings behind layers and peals of mirth ready to burst, wanting to send out missives, soak up replies, perpetually charged to seek the matching fuse, fond of finding foreignness to make itself welcome and at home. :: :: :: :: :: When a kid roughhouses and ignores commands to desist, it is usually bycause the commanders ignore the more primary and vital need of kinetic skillsharpening exertion at play with joust and parry in favor of a skill they importunely and prematurely try to instill, what is the point of having kids if you don't let 'm help you remember the anarchy of animal origin? :: :: :: :: :: Many a kid grows up to become a macho nitwit but it's never too late to teach the next ones how to start pulling their weight, let's nevertheless also tell all soul diers that presently sow death to hold their horses and split rock into fine growsome grit and feed every tiny titbit to the bottom and beleavable borders of organc life, this quintessential frontline is where these bare bones stick up and extrude from earth's body in wait for us to truely defend and extend 'm. Too much and too little mother's milk make for sore throats and distorted identity/immunity, it causes congestion and crying in the early stages, later jerk offs and rockstars attest their attachments to such youthful yet old white out habits. :: :: :: :: :: :: Gene ratio's are a kind of soul pretraction archives, from sex rated programs and memory ministering mammary membranes to hazardous and traumatic turns and returns. :: :: :: :: :: Youthful vitality of preposterous testos-terr*(a)*neous speed, jitter, nerve, strenght, force and balls comes and goes with calling for a deeply rooting place in our tall yet mostly subconscious hierarchy; namely to explore tensility and tolerance; raise inertia anchors of biomass setting sail in or milling the wind around giant, highly tensilated greenhouse bubbles, eggs, icosas and other organic shapes. :: :: :: :: :: In the beginning the world is whole and one, trust is boundless and frustration is absolute, as we slowly start differentiating between breaths, draughts, piss, food, bowel and other movements, life can be a hassle sometimes, but a real breeze compared to puberty when the family fire kicks in, there is no limit to the lenghts, widths, depths and strenghts of the eye's fire one can earn or burn, depending on the di- and erections one chooses, we are not animals cause we are trained to postpone and reflect on the merits of every satisfaction imaginable, desired and necessary. :: :: :: :: :: Deep waters still great balls of fire: Practice sexual restraint to fuel the fire of vision through time and build up a sense of selfless identity expanding evaporatio so that the *(p)*repro train for sex at the bottom of our life support pyramid shall not lack or miss the top's ourobourosian cycle and carry capacity connection strain. :: :: :: :: :: F-words, the flatly fateful version: The first and foremost forms of fire fill the family files with fickle fun. Fearfully frigid females follow from and forever invite the fiercest of forceful fires. :: :: :: :: :: Earth, water, air, and fire :: turds, milk, breath, and spermenses. :: :: :: :: :: Flames reduce growth to ashes, sunshine reduces rock and water reduces oxides to growth, so help water travel through rocks or pour rocks in water to help life turn its oldest trick. :: :: :: :: :: Fullblown photosynthesis through rapturous cause voluntary ecofirepower is inversely proportionate to the rupture, patch, plaster and proliferation of bullet, money and sperm. :: :: :: :: :: The per- and transmutative fire that reigns the earths inner energy store is contained and restrained by massive consistency control resembling our collective mentality, reflecting a social inertia that budges only when running, pushing and crossing critically viscous voltage thresholds, often with a jolt. :: :: :: :: :: a question of humility (humble humus): If playing with fire (womanaging heat, air and light) is widely held to be a most excitingly dangerous (malerule) or workcrowning (femalerule) thing, then for the bottom end of that ladder, where first forms of life still catch fireball-beams in wetted fresh ashlike starsatelite crustdust like they did and do in the very and every beginning, in principle, we may safely come up with the most sustainably Godfearing repeat,-pent,-deemable and dancelike jubilateous physical currency that any fine mourning with ashes could ever hope to put in gear. :: :: :: :: As early as ever since Aphra Behn, money and sex are shown to have become alienated, in- and perversely proportionate like the very parallel politics and theater, please bridge this doubly schizoid gap with prime protoplasmic sap. :: :: :: :: :: Narcissism all too soon escalates into white out and the white wash away of jaded consumption, exhaustive noncomposting expediency. May it expand organically and mellow like well composted, ripened and chewed food, twisted, squooze, dried and mobilized into tough massaging tickle turds, may you know your limits voluntarily and squeeze your lower diaphragm even at those critical times near the edge of involuntary or chasmic abandon to aid seed retention and fuel vital compos-t-ure. :: :: :: :: :: Noyes, the founder of Oneida Community highlighted the mental mechanics of natural crossgenerational foibles, differentiating between amative and procreative love; seedsaving and eugenics, then deciding in his own alpha favor remarkably often. In order for young men to learn the seedsaving business so that their inner fire could retain its vigor, force and focus needed for genecleansing and memory digestion before breeding with young women at a later age, they were advised to go serv*(ic)*e older women first, making it easier not to blow the fuse. Puritan morals and seedsaving put pressure on the kettle to serve expansive imperialist border-bend-busting purposes (see J D Unwin for elaboration), I wish those economies will be more vertical, feminine and implosive some day...once up on time... finest studs will sweat for these freshest muds, they pick and pluck the mighty stuck up off the ground to prick, prime and crack them into nitty gritty specks, next they soak and sop to fit 'm for fotosintettic time which leaves 'm rooted. :: :: :: :: :: Seed savers are not poor comers: Welcome the poor seed savers for they don't come poorly but with heirloom variety. Refugees, artists, craftsmen, soldiers, dropouts, farmers, streetmusicians, politicians and prisoners may all become muse missians on a ball and chain, hard core bang 'n link chore gang sailing in the never flagging purse suit of worm worship. We take any poor comers with gritty dignity to roll away the gravy stones and inspire 'm like any good grove stud should. :: :: :: :: :: All hobo's who want to can finally leave their rut and groove till they marble their muddy shack, hovel and hut, spread some fresh dust, see it grow and clean their garbled glut, quit treating life like just an occultable slut. :: :: :: :: :: You try to be a man, you try to go and get straight up on what there is to know how and what you can give up to get down and into sweet nothing nobody to care right about now-here. :: :: :: :: :: Touch and go, stop and show, stem the glow to feed the flow so credit creating crystal crunch needs never slow, that is the least we will ever need to know prevent the leak, that makes your inner tension weak and small don't just come to make a peak fall into an uninformed de*(e)p( )*endent peep hole without a justification, preferably prior to your celebration: match the patience of rock to turn it into a living clock which may keep you and your time too. Are we focussed even just barely enough quite yet though? So what are we waiting for, let us get on with the show!! Horny, charged, looking for sparkly twinkle with cleavage and magnetic juicyness? Good! Keep it that way, be on your toes like a woman without scaffolds, braces, simulation or overstimulation, learn to use childlike sublime perversity to leave the malicious variety undone, sex is a group gumption. :: :: :: :: :: Mint all mental will full swell, married to a sexual continence with no risk assumption but spill preventive policy till your match comes along (I am learning the hard way myself to be honest). :: :: :: :: :: :: Size up gene ratio and you 'll spell time out as you would the heavens, cause they are key to scale and range. :: :: :: :: :: Vert-I-call: Get and set the jolt volt age old fuse gage level at love's longest possible length and strongest strength to use it's scalehopping depth as vertically far as you can. The male should leave his fingers from politics and money and dabble with the vertical variety of the latter all the more forcefully, he needs all the time can get to invent and build toys that turn the more inanimate female mysterious yet measurable mechanisms on through fullfillment of minting conditions and mint conditionings. :: :: :: :: :: Further the fun our fires form: Fire forms are many, from fierce to gentle; those of the sun and tectonics have ours being male: (vision and provision or flaring flames fucking with fossil fuels and forests) or female: (fine, fun and fruitful or fearfully fickle and rockily reactionary) in between them as traffic controllers. :: :: :: :: :: Mankind has foolhardily substituted external fire and exothermic combustion for intimately inner and gentler forms. :: :: :: :: :: Quick fixers flaunt ashes the easy way to replace squandered inner warmth not only bemoaning prone and lost, but losing loaned priming time as well. :: :: :: :: :: Fossil fuels for people to idle, rev and rave, to groan, drone, stink and smell are robbing and wasting away our oxygen and prevents our future heritage to come of age: a diamond light concentered and refractometered time of merit, peopled by raw 'n rough, supply jointed, not just subtly wristed, and more thorough than fast, more treeclimbing than cross toting or motocrossing (dirty bi kings and queens), less racing than human, they will rectify these mishaps. Fire of coherent karmic viscosity often gets indecisively pointed hither and tither or burnt up in a blaze, rupturing and exploding the kettle without lasting bond, no watertight and constantly callibrated fire proof drip irrigation :: :: :: :: "Fuck you" says energy, "be nice" whispers inertia, "let there be focus, lets have a spark, come up with some greenery between bright light and solid dark." :: :: :: :: Thought may constitute the search for fertilizing, creative cocoonweaving pentvent-valve to tabulate and end torture of knotted feelings (fears and unloving acts like playing with flair and inflammation prone fire banished to and on hold in the subconscious) which in their turn are surrogates that poison the humours in absence of decisive medi*(t)*ation. :: :: :: :: :: When we truely understand the subconscious, we will see through fire manipulation and pollution with equal ease, conversely the Jesus mythology and the cabbalistic connections to the sun will someday teach us the jump from vision to provision and the acknowledgments of "super- or obconsciousness". Personifying the inert as well as inner fires has given rise to many a myth, fact is that we are not all equally pro- and efficient, apt and adept at or inclined to providing and processing fuel; that goes for loving, fruit growing and campfirestarting, as well as for rocketlaunching (see chapter 3L for more fiery stories). :: :: :: :: :: Be gentle, do not force your hand; stimulate and fan but contain the inner fire, you need it to transmute and steel your mettle to grow; do not masturbate in a no importa if I aborta mode. Weather gets driven by and to extremes (Schauberger thought our deva- and deforestating evidence of civilization actually makes us lose a lot of water out to space). Finally the oxide fronts are segregated, rigid and tensed up as the clear and murky siblings get ready to meet, clash, grind and crash, fract and gnash rough- and rowdily though exceedingly slow and long before all mingle mellowly again, coming back together in colours and scents thanks to this inherently freeing friction mechanism... :: :: Banking secrets, subsoil secretions and subconscious (see 2L also): Meanwhile our idea of credit creation is bleak poppycock, expedient greed, nothing but bloat, leach and hot air biomassively speaking, failing or at best falling far behind in the sustaining mimicry game even while getting ahead with the debt dependence creed and blame, it extorts and -horts fresh wage slaves to hustle bustle after a runaway *(bio)*time we owe to an often not even hypothetically abundant future. What diabolic synchronic display of reactionariness in fast and slow, animate and relatively lifeless, both stark contrast servicing status quos of mineral and mental inertia, speaking of which, lets go on excursion upriver a bit; well, we never were good anticipaters nor keepers of time in our stuck up western world, not even and actually if and when you, or I rather, think about it, especially not in Switzerland, another western country of schizoid symbolism covering up and keeping secret illegal and speculation profits, which also produces more bio- and lifetime killing than such keeping devices, besides, even the mere production waste of these body and soul damaging substances keeps the grim reaper busy and Nether Lands washed up, out and in none too clean trouble, presumably to try contrast, flout and put to rout primordial. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: Secretive secretions like most life threatening chemicals for junkies and sprayplanes to load up on are in service and thrall to monopolies of all sorts except the kind that is costing the perpetraitors themselves only. This is an in- and externalized reflection and residue of the runaway senselessness and unassociability of a signifyer potency that surpasses its own and employer's good. Such is the status of hardly ever well enough considered and even less understood (except by Beckerath et al) monopoly money (Ask a Dutchman and he will answer: "isn't that the most popular game after ousting the one called: humans, do not aggravate thyself"?, a simple treadmillgame with 0 choices). All this accompanied, covered for and mirrored by a worldwide first aid organization that mops up ensueing bloodfloods, preferably caused by natural calamities like war. :: :: All our abstract*(ing)* genius acts as lid and varnish pressurizing our tectonic subconscious into grotesque mani-festering; we have come up with an arsenal which is useless and far off the mark, beyond the pale, scale and scope needed to manipulate minerals in the very same old simple natural way they seem once again due to be, as one can gather from not entirely no non-*(con)*sensual and questionably quirky if not quaint quarternarian geologists. :: :: Rockbottom tool and toy around: There is no rush like a crush for shelterbelter homesteadying fun, not till then has it been good and well done begun. Time to forge the keys that clue into the crux of the matter, find all fallen angel fugitives that never gunrun themselves down, with the mercifull and justification searching light of the sun under who's rays every softened surfacial rock can become sentient instead of remaining rigidified dampers of tensile globulacrity, so do be rough enough and leave much space where there was none before your redeeming depenthousing heaves and cleaves. :: :: We strain the never yet seen dust right quick and most just through ever finer and finally finest screen, in due rainbow time 't will turn to the fruitful flex from bubbly slime to carefully coat and cover the crust, paralelling reanimation of dried, brittle and frozen emotion when we find the pain and push ''n lose it along with frazzling from 'insults' and isolation from secrets for the bounce lively fluster that are war-raw's, time-emit's and evil-live their reversalized regreening, wages wrenched from the depths of death's inner and outer bluster. :: :: Buoyant '58 buckyball made with kevlar: Command plus resolve minus means makes a cry for help. Screwing air right through earth's solid crust is traffic right side up. :: :: Earthy, orange and mercurial, i o w: Dutch at its very best: A certain custom of commercial and emotional traffic in danger of extinction can be measured by the degree of popularity the Dutch touch enjoys; "kijke, nie kope" (they look, but seldom buy) a characterization decided upon by the whole of the third world with eager hopes of sales and tips skimmed from the obvious affluence, where this perhaps merely Dutch, but there as well as otherwhere ailing ethic is yet observed and practised. :: :: As far as tipping is concerned quite the opposite has its ritualized evaluation also: the generosity is frequently and fondly accompanied by the comment: "for the child stroller", if the sales or service person is responding with: "ah, now I can even order another one", the meaning can be stretched to one or the other end of the gratitude spectrum depending on the mocking or grateful feelings put out and registered or failing that, imagined. :: :: The Dutch don't have the touching tact to conduct themselves reductable, even in the midst of plenty potentially jubilateous, well rounded nearly polished gravel; their wonderful watershed rock mothered virgin soils must have been some of the lushest known to their fore family, hence they carried a heritage of vitality the world over, not always with an attitude of civility but unconsciously one of significantly magnetic magnificence, perhaps we helped tempt the Germans to cross borders so boldly with our bad example in SA and Indonesia, etc. :: :: Extreme relativism and commercial de*(e)pend(tend)*ency of an average Dutchman dictates: Environmental problems, what are those and who says? Hell, I have molecular nor mammory memoryblock, I know the profit margins of all big corporations by heart and allow the best of them to make headway in my country. :: :: Heavily traumatized Jews went to America, the worst ones are coming to Holland where worst means sausage. :: :: :: I am one of Holland's citizens, a country born with the Virgo blessings of hospitality, fertility, industry, communication and tolerance, and will attempt to revive our stalled leadership in these virtues that have long since been disrupted by criminal excesses, tolerating the intolerant for instance (which is too general and ambiguous a statement to make before backing it upfront but I am sure everybody from Zjirinofski to the most peaceloving friend of nature will be able to illustrate this with examples of their own). mix and multiply time schedules, seasonability and cultures without fearful force which would fray and frazzle or even blend incompatibles, (of course everything else mingles nicely if an early enough start is made, that is the whole point of and in this book) with the help of voluntarization at all levels, especially since my dad gave me some government bonds of this cradled and babied citizen courting country in crazy times. :: ::

Lovely Amsterdam acoustics: All around and up against the Dam Palace, speckle coated sparrows parly, peck, whistle, pipe and peep like a modern Russians rather than an old fashioned Prussian proletarian parliament. :: :: Reason Season: Reason's radiance outlasts, outblasts, outflashes and -smashes earlier efforts, but upon maturation meets the emotional needs and metaphors of levity and gravity (in economics for example) head on to also outash even volcano's and glaciers easily and profitably, spending time to mend and bend some with a torrent to dewdrop type range. Stone does choke till it is broke, so use some clout till it puts out. Little freedom to grow, room to move to, place in the sun, this goes more or less as much for both men and minerals, besides wombs, wonders, and women, no less than for trees, cultures and omen. :: :: :: Come punction come punity: Rock, tree and man symbiosis requires perpetual and persistent propensity to penetrate to the uttermost secret of e-, re- and prevolviable geometry, a truely reciprocating project to preprisalize rapproachment of appreciopearance. (see the SET bits, ch 4). :: :: Sacred geometry; earthly trials or root my tree? :: :: :: Closely packed rocks choke minerals, cities clotclutster people and trees crowd forests. here we go

Parable: Top down information, open central, free and accesible as sunlight, augmented by bottom up growth from inanimate crystaline per-for*(m)*ated formation thanks to pulling your weight imperatively and :: the parallel, equally decentralizing money emission commitments spell spirit and spunk, without these, there frankly and in all fairness can be no free trade and certainly no free migration, let alone full fertility restoration and mutual sustenance on par. :: :: :: Credits: My studies in search of a juster economics started with my already mentioned frustrations concerning the causes for the relative and as I found out very much related general ignorance about the less verbally admitted and proclaimed than pronounced 'misted mineral emission' meaning of mother earth's do it herself help for fertility, but first I encountered efforts by the likes of Kitson, Soddy and Gesell with sideway glances at conspiracy theorists who habitually point the apathetic scape goating finger and look at personal causes for long since institutionalized principles, all of whom make no bones about centralized emissions however, just wanting a go at the controls themselves I guess. I still have a debt owing to the Swiss "freiwirtschaftler, Rohkoestler und Steinmehlstreuer" besides the in this respect sideways related work of Arnold Keyserling for the lesson that material and spiritual heritage seek to reflect and help each other out to achieve balance in the mediating soul. Next came Wilken's parity pitch (still adhered to in Acres USA which celebrated its 25th anniversary in 95), he maintained that monetization measures must not exceed seven times the price fetched for raw materials, which leaves one seventh of all wealth in the hands of landworkers who ideally enhance its beauty through diversification (he doesn't say this in so many words but the homestead as arc concept was still very much alive in his day). Finally, work by Rittershausen (Unemployment as a problem of turnover credit, etc.), a popular professor, befriended and mentored by Ulrich von Beckerath (Bth) fell into my lap as a stroke of good fortune to crown my efforts. Bth had the knack of presenting his readership with facts that allowed 'm to draw and come to conclusions instead of giving them the customary feeling of having to try translate some perscriptively alien formula into their own circumstances; he was an unknown insurance mathematician (some of his work was published in the thirties crisis: "does job creation take money?", by Edgar Milhaud in his Annals of Common Economy, Geneva, but his manuscripts and library burned up in the war), his thousands of pages worth, personal letter collection constitutes the core, inspiration, main attraction and best reason to merit more attention for the worlds largest and cheapest source of monetary freedom, libertarian and constructive anarchist documents made available on cheap fiches called Peace Plans by Beckerath's trustee John Zube, who runs LMP, Libertarian Microfiche Publishing from 35, Oxley st, lot 7, Berrima (near Sydney) NSW2577 Australia. I have little dispute carrying command over the substance but hope to mend that by going through closer study. I believe the rockdust saga (mineral cycle awareness) is not going to make much headway into consciouness til the more mental currencies are exposed, humbled and literally brought back and put in their proper place. What one cannot visualize with all its springing points, returns to chip away at, and/or break through the cracks of our reactionary dealings with reality til we get it right. Keynes versus Beckerath is as Jesus vs Cernunnos (see ch 6)

Democracy featuring crazy demons: Beckerath relates a story about a vote for or against restrictions of some kind, it turned out everybody was for applying these, but to except themselves, voila the birth of a collectivism and an individualism all at one and the same time, receiving equal amounts of votes. :: :: :: Mock the vote, clock quadrannual politics out with your own daily businesscard/ad/valuestandard/moneymint- and minding. :: :: :: Here is my attempt at giving you the gist of what stuck after glancing through 4000 pages worth of Bth inimitable style of drily conveying information:We don't need: stampede mood making and breaking, anonymous manipulators who bribe, tax and dictate the mindless stage pageantry aidience from behind its theatrical buzzword patchwork facade (roughly with astrologically signature like newspaperarticle-sequences sometimes, no doubt, but in the big and wild blanding moneymixer nothing gets out alive), votes for these however much charisma possesing but almost invariably to active or passive pissing post degrading figureheads give the sheepishly silent majorities the all too rare, illusionary and ineffective chance to influence the course of e-vents, all this keeps us lumped into un- or at most reactionarily criticalherd mechanisms of imposition. :: :: :: But we do need: diversified monies as truely specific, daily ballot tickets passing through all hands, cause they originate from our extent of and capacity for bonding at basic and bare necessity levels, not from volatile speculative bubble scum on top, (and make no mistake about it, when a centralized issue is at stake, the meanest and most ruthless will show off or cover up their fancyest elbow work depending on how blatantly fashistic they hold power at this front if we let them) bycause all projects need to have the support and permission of all the ones entitled to a say (in proportion to the extent they would be affected by it) about the matter before it ever gets to be, however local to start with, common currency. This doesn't mean we lose the equitable equating, balancing, liberating libra quality of a standard of value as reckoning unit, just as long as nobody can hoard, hog and accumulate it physically by force or finnageling, that is refuse compensation and demand the real thing however scarce; by analogy nobody owns the sun, but all can use their share of light as usuriously as they like and are able to process and grow away with it, buying and selling the results.

Orderly, transparant and public tabulating and accounting hubs and centers can and must be kept (a wakeful (round the clock) eye on) and held in check by responsible peripheries. :: :: :: Diversity and decentralization stimulate noncompetitive competence and dispersion of surplus. Shortage calls for balancing with subsequent avoidance resulting in abundance.Centralization must become open, honest and simply registering, accessible thoroughfare, nonencrypted, cooperative, nonsecretive and undistorting. :: :: :: Fusing the libraries, parlaments, congresses departments, ministries, media and banks together frees up the spectacle, socialization and various types of theatrical spaces for more playful functionality. :: :: :: :: Communism (state capitalism) turns to secretive and private yet nontheless centralized capitalism which in its turn should give the almighty manipulated means of payment the slip to let its constituents free for the next step also, if it wants to get and stay ahead again. Which it does, right?. Logo, no? A move that goes beyond democracy, dropping majority rule dictates for systemically diversified (alphabetized) to and fro each all their own hitlists choosings of ads, plans, businesscards, vouchers, voting slips and every other kind current above board, on the ledgers, in the papers, through the fibers, all neatly categorized, indexed and dated, tying emotions to tangibles, which only emitters and associates must redeem at face value if returned to be cashed back in while valid, starts with the freedom to emit such money. :: :: :: :: Personalized money (vouchers) were once called promissory notes,in an open competition of potty training olympics, choosing and championing from amongst many causes by confidently circulating their specific bills unanimously rather than anonymously is a colourful, ongoing and therefore decidedly undecidable but exact score keeping event to which the anonymous yet exclusive black out and white wash blind, blend and bland, admini- and demon-stratively crazy democracy, imposing on minorities and nonvoters alike, as they do in our essentially secretive society, compares unflavor- and -savorly. :: :: :: :: Visit your card upon the world, show off how well equipt and fit out you wiz.

Do humans have free will or must they cultivate it?:
Greenpeace and other semi sub- or countercultural denominations slowly form voluntary armies and the following is my feeling about their best claim to fame for future references. We don't send fewer freedomfighting bullets than the requisite seed and fresh dustmakers to soak up blood and send survivors on their way help fresh start up vitality *(re)gain ground, autonomy and magnetism. Aim the force of muscles and machines to mince and mind minerals, no need for mere verbal lipservice any longer. Whereas we must offer and leave the mental kind choices, we may force physically frozen and inert forms of energy not yet endowed with free will although most obstinate and cramped, they both are indispensable for inform-mental influence on willpow(d)*er and sharing capacity. The ethical questions for those who (already) have free will: how, where, when, etc. can one free (more) will. Do humans have free will already or must they attain it, merely learn to use it or even mobilize and free it from a form and state of being where it is held back, in check and reserve? The latter paradoxically turns out to be the case of and in the very substance one would least suspect in an age of flashy mobility, this raw material in the waiting mode which harbours and holds out a promise to will freely one day and we are needed for the transvelopment and implementation of such ethics. The temptation to generate, form or deploy armies could mimic nature's critical concentration build ups a bit better cause unlike these, ours frequently cut the naturally dispersive and growth attracting ELF's circuit out and/or short. Take for instance the telltale often in conjunction with ice ages occurances and outbreaks of equally fertile volcanism fueling pressures attained to trigger natural nuclear power and compare its results with those of army activity..needless to say..no resemblance. So I hesitate to describe what may not turn out as the unmixed blessing it seems bound to become in my surely biased eyes, although I myself barely practice this what I have perhaps all too rigidly set my hopes on: to see grow into common sense routine. I'll soon get sick of my unhappy megalomaniac outlook on life. All but the hands on and off kinds of knowledge are a curse it seems. At least the principle is valid, its execution ongoing, as undying as the earth itself and I daresay on all similar and/or possible planets, it will outlive all ignorant jibes and maligning vibes that the unmixed grabby claws with which exclessively male clamorers put their bid up against life's grain. Getting hardware to serve the greening quest is for the most part like doing a complete cornerturn which seems necessary in the after all primary mental reaches of existence first: focus on physical friction for mental calm and don't let a warmongering unkind of taxman catch you in his conveniently reactionary blame-game conveyance while you are at it. S-M-Arthumans take up, break out and untie minerals from their dark recess to receive and structure water which ties the bright light down. If we all became aware of the fact that love is infinitely sharable (Winter) the pentagon and all other businesses should practise such open house to give and keep score of happynings; twinkling eyes to lead all senses through the heart and to the head before we start handling anything, let alone battle over or about something. For the next section to make sense one must be a fault with formulations of ones past selves finder, a projection, exile, isolation and abstraction tracker with some degree of succes and resulting enlargement of identity so that gravity and growth personally concern you more than speed and profit, so they find their bearings on, in and through you without which fun is fiction but with it the full force of a connected will, phantasy, motive and intention can unleash. Despite the present potential promise of all swells and subsides in changing circumstances and influences recorded on the thus truely current and vouchsaving ID; this kind of poli-testicklish visiting card can specify individual choices of rights, duties, and pleasures but has been felt as an invasion of privacy even though most of us poor slaves have practically nothing to hide compared to the true culprits of our mutually insu- and isolating suspicion and secrecy. Cruel nondenominational and inflammatory compulsory tender compounding bleeds, blends, saps, and sucks. Bordering order or ordering border?: Ideal horizontal plane borders must become voluntary ones, they will bring in orders when they are exactingly spaced and specifi-quantifinely timed business, pleasure, visiting and creditcardlike chipper tenders flowing hither and thither. The involuntarily rockbottom vertical and primary plantlife borders will become the preferred front once we are well into the age of acquarius (air squares up with water, earth and fire, easily the most common artistic frame of the west), ending scarcity of basics driven wars altogether. Will the arms industry feel forlorn when forced to leave treelimbs be, in dust reborn? -------- Fearfed defense industry fosters global war*(m)*shipping hardware production; it is high time (hoog tijd=Dutch) to get it turned into a wor*(m)*shipping kind, so hard rock is softened and grown out toutly tensile. --------- Bullets or fruit, a- or progression: The arms industry is here to stay and keep on trying to serve and protect, let's help 'm out a little; the collective armies aim to stop and/or prevent fights, right? When these are over a tangible scarcity rather than some supposedly singular principle we can use the following fore- and insight: all hands on the table to deck it good, the most sustainable food grows on trees and they grow in deep dirt, so we need a rockcrushing cross between a vacuum cleaner, a veggie steamer, a drill, a mortar pestle and maybe a guitar thrown in for fun and good measure. Such a drastically mastic robusticator cannot fail to come up with rockwrenched tokens of wealth and health, but so far, our ballistic experts can't seem to catch what they themselves throw up. So, does the name of the game stay the same: bigotry cops rather than fresher riper and more varied tree crops? Reactionary violence strikes out to put life to death, constructive force brings death to life and makes it bear on vitality. New avenues for defense spending and conversion. My scholarshipping leads me to true beleaf with par-positioned rapturous promises of hollow peace drums and equally off the mark, all too rigid punc- and rupturing "defense" masquerades. I hope heavy industry finally finds my kind of innovatively flirtable fertility fostering fledgling version robust enough to boost investment in a true to life ice flow, rock flex, mudfling and sundressing businesslike show with all out, none barred empathy for soil organisms, our most numerous consumers and hansomely returning lending customers. Intention: to familiarize and benefit all taxpayers with the conscious application of God's own fertilizer: freshly ground glacial gravel; exposure of which to our blessings from above turns its rigid inertness to a softened sensitizing joy for the swirlds of new growth sprouting from riddled rock and unravelled gravel. Our motivation is to rid the world of polluting, unnatural monopolies that foster skewed dependencies, drudgery and illth to supplant them with abundance by means of the simple and at the same time profound practise of milling paramagnetic rock and feeding this thus decentralized capital in to time's circulating tides, sustained and vitalized by such a full natural spectrum possesing palette of trace elements, iow know and set aflow those limiting factors that literally weigh in heavyest for even the tiniest lives and counts equally much for all other sentient forms of being. Mobile units will be employed to fill local orders on the spot providing suitable sources are present. From missile to music industry: We would love to tailor keyboards to our single drone units, so no hard fund driving church organist can match the organizing aftereffects of our music nor remain truer to the injunction that built the bride of Christ but left her a lurchchurch in the first place. Actually, Jesus tried to tickle Peter out of his stubbornly mundane and blusteringly inflammatory stance by linchpinning deconsistentatively funny metaphors on him about an oddly novel sacrament, a (right) rite site or (right) site rite called a church (on rock), much like this name (Peter) was his invention. A walled in, empty space is built on solid rock, yes, but nature is built on, through and with, mellowly mingling and dilute consistencies of it (see ch 6 and app 2). P.S. We cater to radiant exponents of progressive communities. Heart current deficits leave and deposit residues that fuel, foster and fan the fires of fear, grief, pain, etc. into energy spent on superficiality, shallow appearance, restrictive objectivity, deceptive surfaces, metaphysical ballistics and breathtaking distractions like a defense industry which certainly doesn't dust the tree. Schwartzkopf is black tecno man who looks like a sausage and whose organic upward mobility charisma was sorely lacking; when will generals fame be measured by the degree they manage to regreen the deserts? Rubble rabble turned soul diers learn to love firearms, loving arms prefer blubber rubbers. Farmers favor amorous armor far more fervently than soul diers. Sportsy cavortsy: Less narcissistic, rivalrous, symbolic and juvenile, more completely sublimated sports, fused with less scarcity and fear thereof ruled defense efforts would shift focus from feint to thoroughness, from chronotime to lifespans and -cycles divided into biomass lushing leagues. Sports are worthy precursors of fairest game rules; constitutions with criteria that organize and liberate, stratified all the way to the highest tec categories for the top divisions of what can be called competition only to the extent copycat efforts are involved. The following 3 pages (6 columns) are especially for the heavy duty philosophers amongst you my dear readership and probably not very appetizing for any other kinds Punishment or 'pollution' (see p. 4) from the consistent purity of patience: If there is a legitimate quest for purity with an equally justified and even justifying field of force, as viability of ferociousness from sporting fun to inspirers of fanatic fashism seems to suggest, then simply miming ice ages may be the perfectly grounding orientation adjustment to global values it lacks. By the same token the aeons old complex of religious mystification which motivates mimicry of shamanistic magic of all placebo and prosthetic stripe and type, can come to the same conclusion; this kind of (in Theodor Lessing's terms) wellhead signifies to sail under the same flag, use the same gage of scale, or blow up in the same eruption or drain the same inflamed sore as willful way to fit the conscious focus valve in its proper place after all errant blustering, iow, welcome it home, which would lay worries to rest; Klages, a one time close friend of his claims these concepts were stolen from him but I wouldn't be suprised if it was the other way around, between them they came very close to formulating what I am about to explain (again) but they merely got so terrifically flustered over it in a schizoid fashion. 'White' western, monotheistic religion of dominantly darwinistic democracy and fashism were and will stay close, both made the mistake of massification, overshooting personable levels to attain and gain economies of overwrought scale, personifying forces of light and dark, losing the faith in people's capacity to, of and for change and making a life or death difference which needs only be one of consistency; happy mineralmine-grind-minding, ending detention of inanimate mass to metabolize it. Did you know testily triggered teeth of time: many a rock's dusts may neutralize poisoned and polluted soils, even overcome contamination from fall out and radiation? Get the nitty gritty from Abermann, salesman at Sanvita of this: Biolit, product of the biggest quarrie in Austra's speedwise no less legendary Kitzbuehel.

Interlude: From unkind cannibalistic via capitalistic coercion to a fairer fight for and from co-operatively corporate ecology: Please evolve the bulk of high finance, elitist, racism, fashism and war amalgamation with the hermeticism, secrecy, aristocracy, royalty, esoterics and late arrival or latest revival and rival: ecology, all of which seems to have been strung and hung together, an inextricable and gradually incremental progressions of causes which attempt to cast controlling, coercive and circumscripting nets and filters around the balancebooks accounting for inter- and exchange between the not, the very and less obviously orders of globally applying and appealing borders: the lateral and vertical ones, which results in a blockage of dance abounding and abundance that we humans have begun to be aware of and at the same time influence, though agriculture barely scratches the surface (bare) compared to what we punchliners propose, but I can narrow down the scope without distorting the perspective when showing similar extremes to have existed side by side like day and night or pa and ma ever since the world began; hounding *(un)*settlements and/or scar-city building, even way back when man hunted for instance, he, like most predators, had to make do with sickly and/or weaker specimen though he craved to overcome (thereby perhaps causally e- and provoking his own hardship and high stakes match) the strongest while woman gathered the most vital, young, juicy, tender and ripe by choice all along to begin with. So the far off dream of purity and choosing only the and from among the best of the best which in turn are from the best ad infinitum has its ineradicable basis in feminine feeding methods and so may become sustainable when helped to their feet. Ecology is the latest and therefore choicest of attempts at justified and justifiably imperial forms of forceful yet fascism obsolescing voluntaryhood for stimulation of the biggest most common, easiest to agree to denominators, since photosynthesis maximization merits to be prepared for, deliberated on and made to happen, in other words enforced, globally, not to balance, but bulge and beleavably blow and grow the budgets up with loot from across the righteously budged border, help it raise itself into live whistlers and orbs on the branch. Harness levity and therewith *(app)*raise gravity, all this in a primarily vertical, that is radial manner (pleasingly pleached treedirection) of course. Call it nonsecretive, voluntary and anal (figuravely, though the sphincter tickle is topdog's damn good digestion dance and dignity) choice endowment if you like. I believe things like stopping dust from entering lungs large and small both is a way past humanitarian type task every person who has evolved beyond selfserving religion, however slightly, could, would and should agree with universally. Lately I have read a lot of Theodor Lessing, he was caught in the whirlwinds of antisemitism and demanded open centralization as a cure and a halt to war besides protection for nature, each of which was probably a capital offence by itself, not just ahead of its, but even our time as well, unfortunately, Nazis killed him in 1933 as one of the first major, militaristic mob sentiment manifestations and barely budding but blatantly brutal atrocities committed against celebrity peacemakers. Fashism is a form of impatience (inability to deal with patience) and misplaced, unfreeing coercion which nevertheless reserves impunity for itself. Funny enough, in 1917, the book 'Das deutsche volk in schwerer zeit' (Bartsch) shows Excalibur on its cover sitting in the sun and in a rock, a plant has grown from where this most famous sword disappears into (and/or emerges from) the glowing spot on top of it. The whole faintly reminiscent of cross on Gogoltha pictures; it is the gem of symbolism since it shows a cycle of life that is a whole lot less cryptic than the Yin-Yang sign. Could some art student retrieve the artist and study him and his juncture in time at least a little further please? This image not only tells the story of what it takes to get metal out of rock, but also what this metal can do to justify its existence, namely balance the accounts and help plantgrowth, cause rock may not only contain forgable melted metal ore which once extracted and concentrated can turn around and make more such rock 'bleed' but at the same time his 'Nachschub', an inorganic line of descent is secured, use the 'offal' to feed life, by piercing and crumbling it; a crusher/spreader is a /broomstick/caduceus/torqued coil/strainer, a kind of femininely modified sword just like a football is a benign cross between fruit and cannonball. On the picture in question the sword evidently sat in the movingly stirred, freed and loosened loot material, like a lover reluctant to withdraw, long enough for a vine, growing from the redhot (signifying metal's origin more than result of its use) spot where the sword emerged from the rock, to have meantime gratefully absorbed sustenance (thanks to the such enabling grate-mate metal movements of and as rock's own concentrated force, come as focussed son to free and predeem his widely dispersed organic ancestry and inorganic progeny at once). Plant and sword entwine, for the vine has climbed the sword like a child around its father's now resting leg. So the slightly sequence garbled and conflated message of the book's cover seems to be: rigid and strong yet dynamic sword (the one Jesus hoped for and was merely symbolized by the cross) crossbred, insexually fucking with slightly less rigid and immobile death (in the guise of rock) equals life. The paradox of the flag which doesn't cover (except physically) what the cargo constitutes is a particularly blunt and blatant one cause over against, or rather, contained under the confusing and already contradictious and miragelike depiction of a plant growing from fresh, red hot (reminds me of Hensel's theory that the sun is a ball of glowing..) ashes we find an eyewitness report of forced labour in prisoner of war camps complete with philosophy of making life richer, cleaner, happier and more productive, in short, livelyer at the writers (a visiting officer from Austria who wrote a novel describing the Jews their undying ambition as well) 'good' side of the front, almost the very absolute opposite, dualistic deamon and mirror image of what concentration camps are famous for, almost, cause not exactly voluntary either, (though sounding like it for and from the captured yet converted nationals, amongst whom the English were the most incorrigible and ungrateful of course). So although the (to me mesmerizing) cover doesn't incorporate or embody the obvious, simple and symbolic essences which Arthurian romance with all its connotations of the King and the land being one (Hermann Keyserling used to say that the entire west attempts to conquer inertia; lawfully flawless logos trying to pre- and represent subjects cap- and objectivatingly), subscribe to, it nevertheless displays them conspicuously on the surface, rather than spun and strung out in and from its substance. We 've had fights about metal more than anything, fights with metal seem on their way out, and fights about water probably are an all time favorite to come if social inertia decides: steady as we go. The book mentions well kept and nutritious gardens, good wages are a theme as well but the connections and true causes of lethal friction, the perverted and symbolicized currencies for instance, are passed over in silence. A few funny and tragic things happened last summer which give me evidence of (and hope for the worthwileness of a struggle with), my influence on the desired direction; more superficial and shallow penetration here (rub rocks for fresh faces), profounder absorption there (chew vitalized and -ing fruit). I used to sing upon entering the park, happy to see green rather than a computer screen, and when I saw the tramp who stuck it out under a so often graffitied and lit up overpass that it must be the most totally toxified spot in the park, all through 2 winters now, it went something like this at the top of my voice (to take advantage of the bridge acoustics): a satire song I sing, it's about the undercover king, he's going for the steadyest thing, one with the land is the king. Later that summer I found that the rumour had been misinterpreted and spread, making it all the way into the paper The Vondel monument proves propitious for publicity cause in '97 a Herald Tribune journalist caught me throwing an empty clean labelless coke bottle high and straight up into the air before screaming while catching it again and letting it down to the ground: " What's coming down to us here? Ha, that's not a coke bottle, it's a beam of light, an emissary of redeeming mercy, come to fondle, fetch and frame some specks of dust a little closer to homey heaven (not in so many words though). He wrote a blurb for their weekly supplement called the Netherlander where he made me out to be an American exorcising the evil spirits from the coke bottle. The other evidence was my first Net published poem (on page two) ending on tell, well, spell, hell, shell, etc. The trouble Shell oil got into that fall was something I flattered myself with by claiming at least catalytic synchronicity presence, wavecrest and whipcrack credit for it. It motivated me to go ahead and dump all of my work on the net, it took me at least a year to get to a point where the text looked reasonably coherent but it always does that for a little while at least (and most) after a bout of painstaking correction marathons. Finally opportunity knocked in the shape of my second apple freaky acquaintance, he worked at the drugspeace house, a dreadful place with Eagle Bill overdosing everyone with a hairdryer pushing the THC out without burning the stuff, it smelled awful and the mood was an opium den one, which I know only from photographs though. I learned the HTML tricks and in fear of famosity I decided I would go and see if Joern Zube couldn't be helped to get famous instead, it would not bother him as much anymore as it might me and he deserves it. You may read about that formerly called New Holland and the great South land encounter in the fourth appendix. The book 'Taming the great south land' got me very depressed for a while but at least it made me realize that the burnings as cultivation by the Aboriginals did a lot of ecological damage and pushed back the rainforest awfully but of course not as bad as we whites did. Just to round out the page saga or bring you up to date anyway: something went wrong with the indexation of search engines, it took months instead of the at that time regular 6 weeks and then they did only the first page, not the actual index although my mentor insisted the first page be called that. Anyway, it flopped; I'd love to do an audio version next for people to play different music to or mix with battlefront, whorehouse or rockquarry sound recordings (see the sections on John Ray and Harold Cosand, they inspired this piece).

From rain to blood and all points in between both ways: Is it a sin to cloud our blue sky eyes a greyish hue and so show tissue deposited protein overdoses or a blessing when you can trade pigment for shade? Is it cause we forgot to take the tooth fairy's truth berries to the bone troll's lie briary? Is deep blue, lively and clean unfashionable for rivers, lakes, eyes and skies alike? Immune system showdowns tear and wear us up and down. Cleanse the windows of souls, the irises with the lushly flushed fruit that can flush us, growing on 'm living filters, recruit some bottom rung, boney, and parched lone stone, help we at her weather of bleary vision to become what we with her might look like, as well and better than hell would when left inanimated, I bet. Dabblers in cute powder crack the encumberments of all not yet animate classes and categories to open perspectives for such cases yet closed to sunny news and public scrutiny. Marionet politicians lipserve people but actually cover for and distract from conservative agenda's with pumped and trumped up stakes and stages with, of and for formulations of army enforced law which profit the pretentious pontifactotum plotters of crippling power on all essential scores, worst of which is the way money and therefore ligitimacy is emitted and allocated. They should allow their thus challenged subjects the same weapons of secessionist encryption or even coercion if they were up for proportionality and interested in fair fighting for the monopoly extension of uniformly regimented collective violence and complementary rivalry banned beyond their borders while having voluntarism, unfortunately merely lipserviced as healthy competition (and they don't understand that to mean diversification either) on a thus far from free market, within them, give or take an exception or two in cases of civil disobedience and 'posse comitatis', another term for local autonomy. Talk about exceptions let me phrase that over again: .... fair fight among many monopolies can only raise the price of a place in the sun when fought with pluriformally individual, regimented or instituted forms of violence and concommittant rivalry when given a fruitful field of exercise and priority which is sunk in sink, banned to the bottom line in a real, not a sacriligiously subverted sense, beyond and below any inhabited borders and to recruit the beginnings of mobility and voluntarism there,....... people involved would avoids use as colonizationfuel or population for prisons as the two extremes of expulsion prone marginalization. But in a top down struggle for territorial autonomy the underdog merely manages to blow off steam spasmodically, much like the tectonic and more or less animated semi-consciously informed bulk of fractionated factions afflicted with that finest of addictions: the friction of affection every now and then. If on the other hand we would see fit to try live up to a doctrine of 'disclosure' which demands equally voluntary participation from all willing to enlist time, effort and resources for such a cause, at their own expense of couse, the world would whirl better yet and still. This evolutionary attempt to somehow harness expansionary tendencies of disciplined males as the earthly personification of pressurized space (blaze trail through, and this way quite to the contrary of insensitivity to them case closures I 've hinted at in the title), so it becomes of service to the natural progression from relatively involuntary and lifeless phenomena toward more sensitivity, diversity and choice by means of creative emulation. Should our feel for provisioning in this sense lack (and it does apart from some kind of homeopathic presence: most enlightened hedonistic elites versus a bulky survival of the fittest for drudgery; capitalist versus proletarian; this contrast is somewhat reconciled in Gilder's views on wealth and entrepreneurship but we may as easily and along the line of my thinking about truthfulness content of concepts equate the former formulas with the lucky few stinking rich versus institutionally, that is slavedriver driven masses) for a goodly stretch of evolutionary time, we will surely go the way of insects, (not even the useful pollination and recycling business prevented this for them), and become more and more rigid and rationing with the ultimate cause of our peculiar ways when overrunning precious resouces, namely female charm and intelligence. The frightful progress speed of feminine charm harming can be illustrated by the different ways public women of the middle ages and now are worshipped; defending a castle princess her free will with chivalrous combat versus elevating her to the lonely sterile heights of riches condemned to live out the common sentiments of struggle she as it turns out, preliminarily lent her artistic talent for stage interpretation and charm to (Madonna). Similarly, survival of the fittest to ration and meter her, turns into the homogenizing, equalizing instinct of living within your specialized means, no matter how aloof and eltist the short term status of power play perpetrators; if nothing else, inbreeding has seen to that. No set of rules so far formulated to aim at a clean break with cycle stopping suppression of the less dominant partakers of life has had any better degree of success than a homeopathic one can be granted, a poor man's small comfort, lucky the mechanism is as potent as it is. Long live the ineradicable though merely homeopathic survival of purse suasionists convictions, from the common sense of the dispossesed to the bravery of our future frigid fright brightening inertia fighters at the sentience liberation front! I am not really familiar with traditional native ways, in that sense my journeys to almost a hundred nationstates, maybe thousand counties, provinces and surely thousands of formerly tribal territories on 4 different continents were a failure but the rainbowfamily (more than 10 big gatherings), the organic ag (followed closely for 10 years) and German hippy movement from the turn of the century should account for something. The reason rationing, resources overrunning, giver of life abusing...no sorry let me start over. So the reason for rationing, the resources overrunning cause and biological enabler of massive patrist 'success' called femininity come to (c)harm (witness a foreshadowing of this formal form of feminine charm in chivalrous society or look at present popstarstatus) was not survival of the fittest but its flipside: cycle stopping supression of the less dominant partakers of life. So far, so good but we are quite unlike other animals and like to dispense with and dispose of things we figure unnecessary, in other words, we not only use things till so severely pruned that it in turn checks us, but even pride ourselves on our ability to use things up, jump the sinking ships and burning bridges to other territories and/or resources, though never quite complete, smooth and diversified enough to shake the drags, prevent fads and stampedes or raging war over ever again diminishing spoils which in their kind and nature are not only changed more thoroughly and permanently but have to be abandoned cause exhausted (good to the last drop), for other innocent target substance to undergo the same process. To this extent and in this respect dominant humans are very much unlike (and -able?) alpha-animals. I for one was more perturbed by the spectre of space filling with floating debris, (which I still consider a valid, thought- and insightful outlook on human 'development', so confident a popular postmodernism postulated and ' in perdicamental science affliction) than by garbage in my neighbourhood (after all, that can be empoweringly sweated which is more rewarding than conveting control overnaughty fellow humans). Even an avid 'earth as is' lover like myself can imagine a sun or even comet shielding garbage dump while maggoty mutants feed on tectonic fire in our ever, of course as much down- (falling) as upward spiraling magnet magnificence, in the blink of an eye, and this is the main reason I hesitate to publish a book that may tie humankind over hard times comfortably enough to pick up the cheek and go ahead fullfilling these my worst dreads as well as and even after realizing my best dreams; but here they come in that sequence. My guesstimate of the likelyhood we will collectively put all nuclear weapons to miraculously good use by blasting a collision course oncoming comet out of our way is a lay one but I think it unlikely. So far the occluding occurrence would sooner be dead certain to end fearful and expectant preparation till the next way and goal/chicken and egg/noah and flood/lowly muddwellers and fruit cleavers manage to confuse their compatriots with excusations of oncoming hardships. Pulverized rock populating is a way of pushing back secrecy and borders, honouring the greatest grandparents to make us feel needed, useful, present, incarnate and on call. The justifying effect of great solid uniformity relaxing forces will come when some beings as far further ahead from us as we are from rocks take pity on us and themselves at the same time.... golly..... I just stumbled on a reason for the alien hype, didn't I? But so far they probably won't consider us worthwile yet either. I really think it is the other way around though; when we help rocks, they in turn help plants inform all burgeoning buxom buoyancy between them and that includes us.Flush ill with what what becomes well, lest a lack of touch, contact and exchange becomes the petulant postulation that pets, pays and bets on a pest prone projectile to end perp as we know it.

Real devil's advocate description of a symbolic one: One swims, one squeezes, grovels, gravels, travels, digs, shoots, flies and floats till the lights fade cause mutant messengers administered mercurial madness. "Hey its quicker to the golden shine, gang membership betokening status chains, babes and fillings that way", cried the would be slivvery sliding wonders whirled wide growshow usurping clownclone and dug his centrifugal heels in till all of earth was clean gone, every last speck shot into an alluring and beckoning space, levity reigns, the queen flies out, she is not alone but the only one of her sex and homestead*(y)*ing privacy or romance a faded memory. While hitchhiking I once met a man named Harold Cosand, who claims he actually was Elijah, he challenged wellknown politicians of the Arab and American world to acknowledge this, being willing to prove it in court with a call for fire from heaven to consume the imposters as prophecied, he told me his exwifes took his legendary wealth in mining shares twice over. His letterhead proclaims his Phd in mason-jew-cabalist cloak 'n robe of darkness discloser and unmantler, in other words expert relevant revealer of some sort. I forget the other vituperatives he chose for power, poison and unfair fight brokers. He sure had a house full of the first extremist and militant conspiracy convert literature I ever saw, the whole mindboggling range at that, covered in greasy pipetobaccco, it blew my mind, those things hadn't come to my attention in Holland while I grew up, (see Jesus, Jewish Jesus and Jews in ch. 6 and bibliography). Accusing new age of fascism (as is the reactionary fashion in the German speaking world of the early nineties), cause a former version of the latter lipserviced rather than grew from (but sorely perverted) a similar back to nature sentiment which has its biggest need meeting political clout market ratings thereabouts rising again. Some call the Greenpeace campaigns no less deceitful opinion manipulation than the fascist kinds, but what comes first, physical or mental poisons, which kind deserves priority, are they even seperable? White pow*(d)*er suspends us: The relation between snow, sugar, pills, the white west coming abreast and frozen feelings has yet to be academi-sized up for shapely measure. A power trip has such unhandy grip and pains give it the slip for later, many are overdue, plenty of warning lights ablink, it mocks mama's gutmost work with what is foremost at hand under- and afoot to provide overhead of tree and fruit for woman and child from marble and mud. The diagnose of an illness called supremely white imperium and ice age fueled eugenics calls for a radicallly ripened lubricant to fill the gaping schizorift between biospherically friendly home bowning rites and hostile warfare rates. The despair of noble north-earners, bravers or thence bled and/or banished must be repaired to win the periodically worsening war on cold permafrost. Heart and head must meet in the handy land of wheeling skies once their strategic talents are invested with loud and clear enough dignity to dissolve the white frozen watery kin barrier, the white tout water frozen skin. I intend to one day write or dictate a fleshed out version of the Sitchin/Maerth idea complex wherein a black brother chases his comparatively cowering one out of the tropic cradle (or maybe the more venturesome one leaves it voluntarily) into the invention mothering frigid cold of bare necessity but their karma ricochets once they meet again, both hardship hardened, though differently; one has lost his tan, the other his greenery to gain one, they found some smarts, culture comforts and ways with fire carved out of primal woods, thereby complicating their consciousness and obscuring a formerly noble savage bestiality. Two waves meet, crossfertilize and bear Europe. Ape turns blond, nomad turns trader, now what will happen next.....fashist capitalism turns a voluntarizing trick and goes green? We, that is monopolistic Eurasians especially suffer from the mercenary and passive violence of less than fully feeling based on alpha rules and restrictions concerning loving touch and intimacy which laid waste the cradle of high density culture in the middle east, (see ch 6, James Demeo's forthcoming 'Desertification of the patrist heartland' and Philip Callahan on likely causes for and effects of deserts) starting with the very food we eat and animals we keep to exploit. Who wants to wait for the next wave of selfinflicted thin and spread out necessity victims that neglect to actively take rock untens- and postdensifying into their thus fruitful own hands and so suffer the consequences of such neglect? Steadily compounding acceleration of inflation, hunger, thirst, erosion, besides poison, war implement production and other scarcity symptoms are admittedly manmade and seem to fall in step and shift gears in harmony with worsening weather, appearing *(un)*natural to the extent it becomes *(im)*perceptible like a true addiction, I am equating white powers and powders, isolation, supremacy sentiment with other preconditions of rock soup ice ages; imperial mechanisms with the US (as champ stockpiler of arms besides dumb and docile enough soulkillers) in the lead at the moment seems to work with and for the white *(t)*out side that always threatens to gain and attain normality status, even sober biologists say so besides the many fairy tales that dish this story up (G G Kay, Tolkien), massive combustion seems to provoke the refreshing mineral grind or hold it at feverish bay at best, but for how long? For a true technocrat the inclement weather is only another opportunity to show off the prowess that is described in: "The American replacements of nature' by William Irwin Thompson, a bitter satire and horribly realistic projection of how capitalism will swallow ecology whole; he goes on about Disney a lot, as does Lawrence Rickels, the world's cleverest and most promising mundane psychologist revealing Walt's highranking skeleton-closet and reading between the psychoanalytic lines to illustrate the traumatic inspirations of media technologies, which proves once again that that there is such a thing as fear of reduction-seduction if I may modify at times masterful Baudrillard somewhat (who's bubble is burst brilliantly by Douglas Kellner, he unmasks and debunks this distracting version of bloatment which won't float any kind of life boat). Gardening has been going extinct*(ive)* since paradise with negligible atavistic efforts excepted; magnetic places make you feel very good and the memory of them even more desperately at a loss for a fair fight with matching media fire power that reduces from, not to ashes. Callahan correlates high fertility and biomass rates with measurably more peaceful dispositions of the population. Time to tune in, gear up and turn on full blown constructive "agression", no longer competing for scarceness but providing abundance, not putting life to death but bringing death (rock) up to life's defence, impact on compact death takes vehement co-i-m-plo-propul-sion to *(p)*release potential baby body's inner fire locked in rockrigid hell. Mass murder and civil war implements are invented, produced, paraded and pawned off to let some gullible runner up do their worst with it while the faster masterminds move on to the next generation of death dealing stuff, at the same time conveniently discussing and outlawing them in the name of peace, taking or creating the slightest rumours of smuggle in nuclear bombs to drown out the horrid sound of equally real but very simple suffering. A vertically magnetic civil service teaching a touch that tries to prime (and) time tradition shows the way to notice the plethora of poor people's charms like the shape of the wind, the sound of the cloud and the aura of the homeland trees harbouring in heads that take heart. Star globe, city lights, fibre switches, web a way, frontline circus. Time has come for flex and volition to sweep through fibres, war zones, mineral molecules, prisons and erosion, poverty or hunger stricken areas by acknowledging the sun's central mercy bestowing *(b)*anchor in center stage position. Voluntary autonomy outlives and prevents extremes of despotic authority and lawless anarchy. The sperm spew, bullet blast and fossil fuel firing smog acts were smuggled and jerked thru various types of "congress" rather more grue- than growsomely, cause selfpossesed professors of proliferating of encryption, lockgrid, traumatized experience, inaccesible memory and untapped credit willed it so. ---------- The media nowadays attempt to close the leaks in coverage of public life personalities, digging for the dirt hidden in 'm to defuse their overblown magnitude, experience topple-pride and ensure turnover, which is good, the taxes ticket offices too are gonna have to give good theatrocratic acount of their coin's worth till everything to the last soldier is privatized in the sense of voluntarized, that is when you may choose and indulge your idiosyncrasies and fullfill the free will of god mimickingly (not mockingly) at the same time, so that will be when all is well with the cloister pearled. A bravo for the UN, they rushed in like true fools, mostly without weapons that is and therefore didn't escalate the war, neither did they end it though. To do that so thoroughly it winds up making the weapon industry look foolish (stand revealed, exposed and rid of delusionary secrets), we have to first terminate tyranny by treading a path to its stockpiling mechanisms (see Beckerath for a surefire strategy). How would you like to neutralize the poison you picked, and become upper echelons of eco-gaia's hotshot forces for fertile future? Take for instance W I Thompson worst case yet realistic scenario and trade it for the seemingly more fairly airy Tom Pawlicki and Dan Winter coherence material or Joern Zube's steady gentleness in writing which fleshed out the hotheadedly eager and early selfdefense militia ideas that catapulted him halfway around the world from the reaction when they appeared in a '45 newspaper. Even Australia wasn't safe for communists-cautiousness after the second worldwar. Everybody knows nowadays the KGB is rechristened as Maffia. Comes a time it is dangerous to speak of and/or face men yet alive and/or mechanisms they set in motion, but wait you bloody assholes, I have this pill of a pile of partly billious bill of *(p)light-righting writs to settle everything with everybody, and if you dare me, I'll materialize an instant and simple example of liberated subjects from right under your very own feet to sink you in think sink, reciprocate coming over you, but nicer: water, bestow and grow you. Imagine a better world, take a walk with me through history, cross index and categorize starting with things that appeal to thee, take your images from nature, steer clear of sterile logic, techno- and bureaucracy, reenact life's most ancient beginnings from soil organisms on up to us, harness agression to turn death to a life of tolerances and differentiation for sus through an open version of central intelligence. Inert resistances, be they rock or ill will of a scarcity mindset can be reorganized toward abundance. ------------ Will the world's biggest and most universal standard of value ever exceed the reputation of gold, so conveniently associatable with the golden mean and sunshine? Will the smallest most humble living substance; COMPOST ever become the largest totem. ---------- Arms that harm will be outdated by arms that hug, toys will be tools, voices musical and life extaticly easy g(r)*owing. (more insipid ire) upon reading La Rouche: Are we here to "convert heathenish devils"? If rocks are what you mean my friend "the rough, wraf, roche, rock" then I can agree to help. Your ire stems from ignorance concerning homebrewed humility of the truthful church on the rock foundation you claim to stand on, in and for. So my lovely liebriary clench trencher, better start turning your passably topleague powerhungry meticulpa-ferocity around and try bring death to life, put a d in pow er, it might be too big a concept but meditate on rootfood, you have some (confinement) time don't you?

subjective feelings and heartmolds; Somewhat introverted autobiographical fragments on close family, early impressions, reading credentials and cryptic abstracts with faultconfessing focus in first person. Fleshed out stories in and about good taste are sorely lacking here, so no live action either. My most feeb-and listlessly fended for feelings front.

Scaling the hurdles of identity: I want to clear from the start that I know good will and feelings can be extended to far and well beyond your immediate reach; fire, air, water and earth have always carried away and presented detritus or delivered tokens of our goings on elsewhere. One starts out as a warm droplet, pollywog, wigly embryo, child, family-, clan- and neighbourhood-, a community-, village- or metropolismember, as a citizen of a country and inhabitant of a bioregion with more or less deeply but in any and all cases shallowly registered racial roots progressing from very personal to global, from sub- to superconscious participation. The latter is more powerful and influential yet draining when isolating and devildefying dominance rather than friendly and reverent curiosity fueled the expansion. :: :: :: :: Early influences: I am the grandson of a butcher who raised one more (went foam at the mouth type babbling batty), one meatwholesaler and one who made froze meat go intercontinental (my father). I'm his only son but have many (20) mostly butchering nieces and nephews on his side; the overgrazing boom in a nutshell, proving itself worldwide as a cutthroat shortterm exploit. :: :: I was to have a funny exposure of psychically weak spots through an overdose of some supposedly boil ripening homeopathic remedy made of rotting flesh later on, come to a head it did and not just one, my skin was crater country in 3 places (see Neysa). My deeper and less burdensome heritage took a while to surface from my timid gullibility prone dairy drowned and sedated to avoid paternal clashes, semi conscious beginnings. :: :: Lack of mom's assertiveness stunted my courage too. Sins redeemable and sinners damned not withstanding I broke down many times to the point of wanting to die when I was twelve but found solace in bed with an Old Shatterhand or Tarzan book as effective medicine for and later cause of this condition. :: :: :: :: :: :: So, my reading career started out as passive escapism. It seems I fell on and into warhardened ground with complimentary gloom tinted dredge, drudge and work some more ethics, smack in the middle of the most fertile riverdelta of northern Europe, 15 miles west of Rotterdam, peopled or should I say cowed with dairy industry and some pretty famous shipbuilders all along one of the canal and rivers two and a half miles away each in 3 directions. :: :: All in all a far cry from the lighthearted and clowning acrobatics, wilderness, song and dance which had me spellbound when I saw some on tele. Picking apples with a part African French woman named Chantal who sparked me up to spiral away from the dynasty aspirations that had weighed me down, I found trees a haven of limbs for more freely animated ones to work with during the first strike out on my own. :: :: The association pathblazing and therefore blessed (tho not unmixed, due to drying effect on all mucus membranes and slimey secretions, including joints), contact with the plant once held sacred and very useful nearly planetwide, may have helped considerably to free the flow of soulsearching associations and extricate myself from them thar bloody serious ties too. :: :: A job in Saudi Arabia was the springboard to extensive travelling, preferably on two wheels with as many dances and chances as I could find to squeeze in on my erratic individualistic way. I tasted the serenity of the Himalayas and the immobilization from cannabis indulgence (eye juice and other slimey secretions impaired) and then having overdone and done with life in the east I turned around and struck out west where while in the state of Washington, my first reading of Robert Graves clinched my dislike for patriarchy (though through mother's intercession, father's funding fueled my for this reason modest needs by then), cranked my barely budding fancy for verbalization and further focused my venus in taurus inclination to love treelore. His historical grammar of poetical myth in 'The white goddess' filled with agespanning treecalenders and -alphabets, blood, omen and animals contrasted nicely with present day wilt, pulp and erosion and its high, surpassing merely Olympian drama, it was just the thing to ease my transition from a routine of rolling thousands of miles through high country, desert and arid territory to confrontations with sneeky bastards like American versions of lawenforcers and weird Seattle population; he conveys a sense of life during climax climate before the leached crumb of interglacial aftermath; now we are down to sedation and lies subsequent to the horror and magic he described. :: :: :: :: Let me name some more of my credentials, so you know better what is talking at you: I grew up in the fully cultivated yet still fertile river delta of the Rhine in a village butchery, some of the early states of being that molded me are apple trees viewed from a stroller in the bakery's backyard next door, my boxer dog, loneliness, baby cow food overdosing, boring school, psychosomatic bellyaching which got me cut up to loose my healthy appendix, I got good nosetraining, sniffing at all sorts of scenes, delivering meat from door to door (and later selling vouchers that way in Colorado), but I didn't realize how often Holland's illmanaged cowshit masses make the place smell bad till after returning from travels to other climes. I protested against the protestants and butcherschool, I watched Hollywood romance (Gene Kelly and Errol Flynn), Catweazle, Monty Python, Bertrand and his St Bernard, Thierry the slingman, nature programs, acrobats and listened to the musical clown Herman van Veen, Freek de Jonge, folk and symphonic or jazzy rock with relish, smoked cannabis on weekends, had a long virginal (except for a heystack orgasm across the belly of my next door neighbour's daughter who had been covering me in equally premature kisses for a while, which stopped abruptly after this incident) cerebral love affair and a motocross passion, I read Asterix and Erik (Bomans), van Eeden's: "De kleine Johannes" (little john), a book about a man interrupting the preacher indignantly to hold a more in- or enflaming sermon himself instead) and Jean Dulieu's Paulus de boskabouter made a huge impression, he worked with his wife and daughter to populate a stretch of forest with speaking animals. I started in on Toonder's to my mind most magical comic in the world much later as home away from home, taking a few 3 story pockets overseas with me to supplement the pile of NRC foreign weekeditions which one finds in good libraries, as I did at least twice a year; other highlights were B C a comic that was staple in a paper my dad used to read, it got superseded by the likes of Calvin and Hobbes. I found besmirched porno in the only sparse woods found 10 minutes walking from home along a 'provincial road', (forerunner of what they call the truckroute disease in Africa?), Krishnamurti, Alan Watts, Rashneesj, Tolkien, William Blake and Kalil Gibran, all the later finds and fondnesses are mentioned in the bibliography, like Tom Robbins, his work is so good that I read it out loud to myself!! Something I had once the privilege to do in front of my school class every friday from adventure stories set in the Dutch Golden Century. :: :: :: :: Mom: Mama's memorable mammary ministrations kept me docile, its bovine follow up kept me sedated. She says; "Don't touch that dirt", yet she clutches the hurt already. Pain is taboo and the light meetmate matching keeps losing ground (blijft in gebreke, ontbreekt=breaks not). Mom has two idiots on her hands, complementary halfwits, a king and his fool. I had a rerun in with Body Electronics (see ch 3L) via Habiba's Megatripolis just before mother succumbed to the next installment of Dik (real name is Dirk but his partner called him Dik in a saintly sort of way) the dadheads knife literally disjointing her (for a new hip), I thought it was time to shout him down and put him in his place (see below). Mama's strategy is silence and minimalistic modesty, utterly in accord with inanimate , yet very feminine, (cause) all life bearing rock, she even seems to harden up like it physically, but it taught me respect for the equally hidden, heavy and humble participants of celestial and generational tone setting in our terrestrial ghetto of the milky way. Why feel grateful for my mothers policy of shielding me from involvement in mere worldly affairs? :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: Pop Pafka: Why do I make my dad pay for sluicing me through to this less etherealming underwhelm? Cause he did not do it good enough? To punish him for reminding me of my own lobsidedness and for his lack of surreally spiritual subtlety? One way or another we seem wedgelocked into this willy nilly crosspurposed succor searching from each other. Why did he not see the child that came to rumble the rocks with musical tools that toll-tell the birthbell right of a new way of life for us and a wholed hell of lots more for our recurr*(ent)*ing forerunners and -bears? He sold a metalmolding factory called Arma the same year I was born for Christ sake! -------- Need I be suprised at my fascination with an insurance mathematician? Before I could get away from lonely bad habit ruled rhythms and routines to try look for a voice, a stage and an audience to make myself heard, earn a dynamic pulpit pedestal and have an impact, I made do with rolemodels such as Tarzan swinging on his ropes, Flynn raising his sails and Robin Hood twanging his bowstring. I wish my voice and fingers could keep up with my thought, but they got censored, and so lost much control and confidence, meanwhile papa pushes in my eyesperverse sermon tapes and has a big infection in his ear from a removed wart (for not ever listening to his godgiven sun perhaps?) When he did, quickly getting upset and me that way too rather, but even when and though he feels weighed down with guilt, this thought doesn't seem to occur to him, though mama tells me he is preoccupied with me a lot when I am gone (well could he ever use an education there! He means well though and that keeps me out of trouble - wether his or my kind I haven't found out yet). His birthcard challenge is skepticism. :: :: :: :: Always check if your confronters and fatherfigures can fathom and comprehend a turn for the better, try to argue simple definitions and etymology first, do not get upset or angry, try hard not to give them that pleasure and proof of having mixed with a proof of wanting power over you. :: :: :: :: :: :: Daddy rants and brave him much as I tried, retort wasn't welcome and so constructed quietly after hiccoughing, regurgitating, retching and barfing up later what I was forced to swallow, not easy considering the force with which he rammed (aries) his emphatic imprecarcerations home, I found 'm so hard to take lightly or easily. When all is in the balance though, we are no doubt on equal terms of stand off endearment. :: :: :: :: :: :: Too bad he seems to see less to be thankful for about our exchange than I have good reason to be; how many fathers can and will offer the purchase of a territory for their brood, never mind allowing no say in or over his. The well intended christian split between blood ties and merit hasn't panned out so good yet :: :: :: :: :: :: Malicious male issues (see 9L): In the spring of 1990 I finally realize dad's motives: he is jealous of the skills displayed by his challenged sun, on who's choice of battlefield he feels incompetent, so he rules it out as irrelevant, feels challenged instead and pays me a bribe to swallow my tongue which I assbackwardly allowed to take the wind out of my sails, (one reason why I could believe Marina's story of her being my mother back when I was the unfortunate Crownprince Rudolf who broke off the Habsburg dynasty with his not so gentle retreat, he took a lover into death with him) he seduces me into apathetic betrayal cause that is what he himself feels for a second whenever I start on an enthused roll. What percentage of parents really provides for their kids and blind spots anyway? Thus the realizations of my motives are stunted from the christian taint which promotes sacrificial sell out of autonomy to a judgment I despise, loathe, abhor, deplore and found depraved in return for the comfort of money. Do I take my mothers lead? Anyway, as I said earlier, she kept pouring the babyfood to avoid the confrontation and later I masturbated to take the edge off of me some more though at the time I only felt it took his edge (in me) off instead (see confashion towards the end for the ultimate Freudian twist and squeeze dynamics concerning coherent come ons, pick ups, put offs and/or let downs). I also felt my folks should have used the lull in bottom line depravities of war which occured in my formative years to feed my info and movement hunger to taste; instead, they stuck to the crisis mentality which shaped them besides the belief that their periodic recurrence is inevitable, even a fina one is soon to come, and followed bloody circumstance of less likable kin to a more superficial but all the same perpetually propagating version of the past preliminaries, such as was the protestant gloomdoom and thus never perceived it (the lull), yet kept the myth of spoiling me alive, OK they did give me an expensive gift now and then but... didn't know how blessed they were and neither did I manage to make 'm understand. :: :: Dear father, there are things in which I have started from a relatively more advanced *(dis)*position; in other words, where you look childish and I look grown. Dad is an accomplished man in terms of the sexist, racist and colonialist cutting edge of the institutionalized greed establishment made to appear respectable from hard work, but in a larger context and better (longer term) league he is a novice, awkward, shortsighted and heartless. :: :: :: :: :: :: Dad figures I kick him and the west in the nuts but he is projecting the truth, apparently purporting to suffer what he pepetrates, when his attempts at overriding and bending my deepest characteristics fail, he abuses and belittles them anyway, he would like to set me little task after little task to reel me back in. He once wanted a tree dismembered and got very upset with my transplant proposal. I argued that what was useless to him might still be good for someone else but "it is mine to do with as I please!", just as he once thought I was too. The king screams: "I do with that tree what I want, it is mine" (pass the scapegoat please, I'll pretend its your spirit), better to have it slaughtered than me, but he made me cut it up, which gave me a tough time not to identify with the poor scapegoat, we challenged each other to change, let it be optional hence forthwith from my side (at least or too? I had more expectations from him all along perhaps, rather than the other way around). :: :: :: :: :: :: Two dreams: "Money, the fuel of adolescent productivity and extension as in Germany and California on the virge of losing virginity, leaving the burning ship to step into soft tec flying gestapo gest a pose or gestation, postpones the oedipalization". :: :: :: :: In a dream mightily fueled by my first cold and lonely topleague writing ambition in the shape of a margin scrawl I did at second reading of this section about agression and preparing for difference, in the 'Case of California' by Lawrence Rickels quoted above, I went to my mother saying I had to kill dad or leave since he had aggravated his devilish projections upon me and was publicly, pubicly and prayerfully grateful for the confirmation of his suspicion, neither did he conceal his rummage for evidence, I was very mad at absent fatherhood, censure, patronizing and mighty ungrateful for substitutes and surrogates but even more upset for forbidden low-golem-logo modeling (he once stopped me when I was using an 18 pound pestle on gravel in a metal mortar on his asphalted driveway) in any but flesh and blood versions: "let pregnancy make a man of you the hard way" He had dumped my oevre in the water and now started eating it, after which a violent wrangle ensued. :: :: :: :: :: :: I dreamt of a rainbow regiment improv I was in on only halfheartedly, it turned out to take place in dad's backyard; I didn't get the work done, he wasn't happy, bottomline is not to be a traveller without pride of place, let's weather before we wither. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: Story truthfully told: :: :: A kid born from the precipitous union of a faintly and fractionwise Jewish looking sickly sort a gal and a blue-eyed darkhaired go-getter who turned butchering into a thriving meat im- and export business directed from a shack at the abbatoir, became what was fended off yet feared it would: an intellectual, interested in others (besides everything else) of the sort a war was weirdly ostensible enough, begun and done over, that is to say those who saw the ultimate consequences of reactionary tendencies, could think 'm through and spell them out satirically in defiance of horrible consequences and yet however mockingly, still help 'm along with perspicaceously descriptive lip giving services, thus provoking the reactionary wrath of others while not defusing or escaping but exercising their own (T Lessing for instance) Such writs usually pre- and proscribe, hint at, allude to and picture their adversary's inhumanity, turning into their own demise when thinking tendencies through to absurdity, even when intended to defuse them, a Jewish mother effect of warning and deterrence is a myth and does not function any better than vaccination as I said before, besides, after a certain point the hunger for effective action makes you restrict your comment to, if not replace it altogether with 'taking to' direct spheres of influence, and yet, there is a time and place for everything, so it is not always a complete waste to spend them pointing at what is wrong and predict a steady state, on course worsening and acceleration of status quota unless no alternatives are suggested. :: :: :: :: Once upon a nobler time those who were challenged could choose the weapons, we need to dig a little deeper and even design some. This spectator 'versus' spectacle type tragedy has seen its umpteenth heyday and will not much longer make for such a taken in stride sort of indifference I hope, so that clear heads which discern all sorts of impersonal tendencies are not quite so helpless about their own influence on and stimulances for the shaping of immediately affecting events taking place across these in practical respect interpenetrable fences. This sort of dark legacy hangs over the violet deaths of Theodor Lessing and Keko-Siwa-like hero's from Nomansland to Nigeria. Hordes of other Hebrew hybrids in Hollywood seem to go on suffering such scenarios and settings. :: :: :: :: Real life is always within reach if stakes claimed are modest enough, if one owns up to ones pow*(d)*ers of pronouncement (see the anecdotes just above rain and blood). :: :: Think twice about leading the way in a direction quite opposite to the one feared. Feel as unfettered, free and in charge as you really are, were it not for your own apathy. The misunderstood genius is a dramatic theme daring us from behind every baby crying to let it grow up to one, dying to let us know, and women who so often are at the receiving end of no longer childlike polymorphous but poisonously prolonged perversity well into great grand motherhood rarely face the risk of transference squarely. Incarnations of best and biggest brother besides jesuslike freedomfighters converge endlessly rather than finally, perhaps...I guess...... :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: But back to our story now; the little fellow had an aversion to, plus the luxury of avoiding, paperwastage for such descripting and commentary of merely human affairs from and by birth as it were, and if it wasn't that, his parents had embraced the protestant work ethic and tried to convey it and their instinctive sense of dangerous accursedness resting on 'stof doen opwaaien'= make the dust blow meaning: having a social spotlight impact much beyond the pulpit or shopcounter. He says: But I can't betray my best talents just cause I need to work on my lesser ones to not lose sight of humility, these are the holy days for division of labour, cocksure arrogance and Jewish brands of Nazism, Walter Zanders notwithstanding, besides I don't mean dust to blow but grow up and around and that can't by any means lead to arrogance, can it? He tried to find fresh starts that tied in to ancient beginnings and going ons. Despite many hard feelings and near miss declinations of death wishes which cost him a healthy appendix, this son of a modern god grew up with a faith he and his dad could "move mountains", one of the few forcefed Bible texts to impress him. In a very conventional sense of not boat rocking success. everything had been going for him but once escape from its unbearable pressure through speed, one of the ballsy staples he had enjoyed riding with daddy along with chocolatehail on buttered bread, it whisked him through relatively unrelated rigours; he decided to look for the most common denominators and deepest sweeping generalizations that yet had practical value, or actually he found them and maybe they found him before he realized he had been looking for fairytale magic formulas that would not lose charm in sobering real life. :: :: :: :: :: :: Pollution is a measure of inefficiency, a people for being's profitloss telltale Thus he and the extreme, femininely passive, capacity questioning cornerstone quandary foreshadowed In the very name he carried 21 years already, stumbled on each other in the shape of his reading an Acres USA article and he found it worthy of all the effort he could muster and invest. Rock flour can be used to every little bit of household organic waste with, this absorbs all volatile energy and leaves the freeing way of life that treats even each plastic bag gently, like a wanted and wished for baby, holding most things in equal wastelessly recycling reverence and comes to feel strongly about the need to leave fossil fueling in the peace of the highly esteemed diamonds shaping and water heating powers, so that offending even the best noses, kept as far away from pollution as possible would come to a stop. This evolutionary development set him right with the Gods of Oxygen and Carbon (two down and a hundred to go). The freshly pulverized percolation power of powdered and thus potentized rock would see to firmly rewarded faith in photosynthesis fostering to follow up on delivering performance of promise, adding scrumptious scruples to help own up and rule out pollution causing nonsense. :: :: :: :: It can't be an altogether unsensual act of sheer will to start avoiding and phasing out down time for focused mind through muscle mastery on edge preventing premature orgasms or postpartem exhaust fumes, not only from competitors in a race but altogether. :: :: :: :: :: :: So many people have extended a warm favorable love to me, just like my mother did, but as dad was the hardener, toughener, resistance, obstacle and occupying force that prevented true conscious contact for which me and my mother made him pay (too late of course to prevent traumatic habit) damages and repair quotas to none but obverse avail, bycause I became more independent and detached with money than I already was at the homesteadying base where I had to follow orders like a slave to prevent exile, but the two feet shackeled to the weedfree ground grew up to become an out of step shame to be bought off; the anchorchain to loca-and reality turned into a lifeline for freedom of mind. "Your mother is mine, oedipushy pal", he said subliminally. :: :: :: : Dad and me were as will versus thought, Gordian knot cutter and coaxer; in some respects dad is like the Africans he scolds for being lazy and dependent on their children :: :: :: fit the molds and fall in line; the wait is for that sword to come between authority and childlike improvisualization to playfully circumnavigate, symbolically frolic, clang, joust and parry with true stakes, but until then precipitous clout rules his small world with a short fuse, being an aries, his temper snaps as easy as elderwood, even so nothing is ever bad enough to stop deserving a dab of good. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: Singletrack minds like his scorn contrast and crave action. :: :: : :: I know I share a basic dream with Keyserling but he throws me back to face my source of income, my voodoo baby coo and woo. Must my dad refuse my kind a kindness cause I did his or was it the other way round, are we voluntarily accepting what is worst for us, do we gargoyle and turmoil away at each other? :: :: : :: I am a bribed clown, I travel too light, as if destitute, I make a bloodbound offence taker pay, I project, he is justified. :: ::: :: Dad praises god for sacrificing and crushing the paradoxically only thus redeeming sun son... maybe to give the sinner a sense of pride, a crack at becoming a respectable receptacle to gain a respite and win some time or something. When I tried to make myself at home, I was haunted, when I worked for my welcome, I was held in thrall. :: :: ::: :: Dad stands his ground, he may be on his way back down but mentally he still stomps around, though his legs be weak and feet flat, his voice still booms like a weapon, he may have had nothing but the same sort of denial contact he displays for me, with his own father and accuses me of what he himself acts out in order to help recognize himself in his father for the sake of continuity perhaps, but it seems to sanction his passing of judgment and rather than identification in love with nostalgia more secretly than I am. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: Avanti vascilanti, *(s)*wallow no more but focus!: I cannot sleep, I must be awake, there is a war on death going on in my head, it tries to span the globe entire to tie all in time matin' loose ends and loosening all too tight ties with dedoubt cloutish and voracious appetite for veracity in refrac-city. Here we go with a brandnew intro (...well.....it moved here from my commendablinklist where it has been sitting since early 99):
I call it mutual, voluntary, nonreactionary and/or reciprocal racism. Is it on the rise, already approaching just right lube tolerance/tempermenture for voluntarizing? In the sense of autonomizing and freeing people suffering beyond ones borders from coercion perpetrated by other beyond theirs in a noncondonable way. For more go see my /list_posts/
The Dutch expression: 'soort zoekt soort' means 'kind seeks kind'.
It is tempting to call out: "rot op" when ethnic overlap and mixing pressures finally hit home on the rebound and econological squeezes lower tolerances and raise tempers and temperatures (my dad was outraged I thought this a logical consequence of our colonial and seafaring history; not to mention the greed for cheap labour). Ironically 'rot op' (get lost) is just what a typical 'problem youth' (apparently beaten all during his childhood years and already with a large petty criminal record) claims to have thought when he pulled the knife and used it to injure the bicycle repair man who had sold this person a tire earlier, the buyer had come back to 'ask' for help mounting it but apparently lost patience waiting his turn (a clear sign the world was out to blow his fuse he must have thought; well they were welcome, he would oblige). The wounded bicycle shop man ran back to his succesor/apprentice who came out with a raised bicycle stand (they are usually flimsy aluminum things, not sure if it was in this case though) but he ran right into the already blooded knife in the doorway and died later; he was to be married soon and a dedicated artisanlike crafter (sentence: symbolic restitution: one guilder and 10 years in prison). :: :: :: :: :: :: :: "rot op" maybe a schizo reflection of what someone wearing a thundercloud upon their brow reads in their audience's faces; praps it was premeditated tried and true 'self defence' (I have a right to do unto other as they do unto me; another mirror inversion, this one of the reciprocity principle; how burdensome one's rights thus become). Most probably his claim is 'true' and he merely registers his involuntary reactionary reflexes. Either way I think it is time to reinstate the death penalty for people who think they have to use arms for other purposes than stopping those who do with all dangers of an ad infinitum spin out countered with crystal clarity and openness in the communication of public affairs. :: :: :: :: :: :: :::: Apart from the atrocious colonial history, Holland itself had been 'spared' (and still can't seem to face; I would feel obliged to send the entire Dutch army to Indonesia to help fire fighting for instance) most migrant problems until cleaning jobs were considered below ones dignity by a generation of idealists who saw the need and fought for big time investments in ecology and pollution combatment. They caused the wrath of peers and employers who pulled in cheap labor from areas where life had been a whole lot tougher than for the unsuspecting swaddled, cradled, rocked and pampered Dutch populace. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: : One of the most hyper productive champions of the 'first nation''s causes (Jim Craven) is horrified by the terms savage and barbarian applied to tribal stone age societies, even when the utterer is a fellow fendant for fair cross-territorial and -ethnic play; a buddy of his (Louis Proyect) can't seem to face the fact that many peoples have provably practiced cannibalism at some time or other in the past (I happen to side with O K Maerth who believes that is what clinched and culminated our transition from ape- to manhood. I feel the terms savage and barbarian need not automatically lead into degrading associations nor am I in the least offended by books like 'Demonic males', on the contrary, I think books like those offer a sobering perspective, especially to those envisioning bloody revolution). Sure Mel Gibson as the scot William Wallace and the hero in the Spanish book ("el nino....") Robert Graves translated are stuff dreams hero's and myths, even religious are made of, based and stooled on but we must remember ways which did not only keep the powder dry but prevented it from forming No male banding together, high standard selective birth rights (and all related issues like territories, etc) in the hands of women. There are so few bits on and by Rickels on the net that I have rescued one of the few now retrievable: univie.ac.at/Wissenschaftstheorie /srb/cyber/gen3.html#rickels2 (part of the Cyber Semiotic Institute home page with Gary Genosko as instructor):

> Both Lacan and McLuhan appeared on 'primal time television', to use a phrase coined by Lawrence Rickels, broadcasts in France in the early 1970s. While Lacan's appearance may have alarmed certain bookish Lacanians who feared that by massaging the masses psychoanalysis said nothing at all, Lacan himself spoke in the name of 'non-idiots' (analysts) and, presumably, 'idiots' (non-analysts) as well. If it didn't make a difference to Lacan that he spoke in the name of the 'public' before the blackboard in his seminar or the couch potatoes - no pun intended! - glued to their television screens, it was because he addressed neither of their gazes, which he claimed were really only one. But this is just the sort of difference upon which McLuhan's theory of media rested. To be fair to Lacan, he recognized that the mass media had psychical effects linked to technological developments, a lesson he learned and adapted brillantly by appeals to a variety of media, not from McLuhan, but from 'Freud's analogical hook-up of technology and the unconscious' (Rickels 1990: 43). For Lacan, McLuhan's mediatic extensions of man could not account for what was more than themselves. :: :: :: :: ::

Excerpts from "The rules are no game, the strategy of communication"with: "women in production: the chorus line"; and introduced by "the naming of parts and the 20th century war", written by Anthony Wilden, 1987, Routledge and Kegan; This is an odd book to say the least; it starts with an indepth, hardhitting account and enumeration of all casualties, dirty and stupid tricks in the latest wars (65 pages worth of it). The extreme male side of the game. Then follows the main work from towards the end of which the simple diagrammatic excerpts below are taken (the substance is extremely complex and at times a touch too abstract to my taste; at other times illuminating; as when he speaks of the contrast between village/band/semi-'matrick' societies their reciprocity and the exaction practices of expansive ones for example); and finally the book offers the chapter concerning exploitation of women. Whereas funnily and oddly enough he never mentions that all the intervening work about brain-hemisphere function could be characterized as illustrations of the physi- and psychologically gendered divisions in existence (which Hensel even manages to find all the way down into the elements of the periodic table; his numerological speculations upon how hard one must hit hydrogen to form heavier elements was an as far as I know but suspect unacknowledged eyeopener for less blessed cosmologists of his days - late turn of the last century); it is an account of the showing of a video made up of cuts from movies containing the masses of females configurating in all sorts of regimented and cutely geometric flower patterns alternatively. He comments that up until the time of writing (87) he had had no 'neutral response' (p 298) to its contiuous showing (since 81) yet. Well, my site is one big such response when it claims (as it does) that rocks, oxides and mineral formation which are (compared to more lively lifeforms) besides being quite symmetrical one the one hand, also epitomously feminine in their conservative and restraining (no less than reservative and constraining) ways. It is no wonder the chorus lines call and conjure forth strong feelings one way or another. As a last preambling aside/comment I'd like to point to his top down/bottom up distinction. I think it neglects to qualify the circumstances under and realms in which this formula might hold true. The bottom up approach in search of and searching for universal building blocks in chemistry and physics is indeed a typical left brain bias but when we look at the social sides of interactions I prefer to rank the bottom up line with the holistic/superstitious side of the fence.

His nor herstory:

No spirals, no cycles, just a line that ends in an eternity after judgment, yet started in and with the moment of mercy characterizes the ambitious projects of Taoism, monotheism and macho fanaticism, groping and hoping for, griping and hyping about a lasting erection, a tree of life, a tower of Babel, a new earth, Walhalla, Elysiae, happy hunting ground or a Messiah. This cannot be now, wasn't before and will not be anything but a shame to the humility of well com- and disposed compost as long as dominant dogma's discount body and its wisdom to wield some awkward doctrines intending to save them from humbling temporality.

.Genesis revisited:

According to Oskar Kiss Maerth the alpha male Adam, who disapprobativable attained and proved to have maintained status by means of cannibalism mainlined for many a millenium, as commemorated in the religious imagery of Tibet who's inhabitants did not supress this memory of our diet directed leave from apedom, was described as tempted to eat the fruit of the tree of knowledge (malebrain) which gave him the troopstud*(might)*rights to more of his victim fellow'man' 's tempting females perhaps. The parable dressed in an orchard metaphor must be a typically Jewish, satirical way to joke, a melancholic sense of (and or banned by) humour which (nevertheless) shines through in their frequent commemoration of greenery and seediness while roaming the deserts.

The story of Cain is evidence of success for the related territorial instincts, the domains that were large and exploited smartly enough to develop a semblance of inner security and means to expand, boot out all misfits and losers who congregated in the cities which were for the most part repositories of slaves and their labour (see ch 7 and the inthrow for my take on Noahs takings; condemnation of leaves 'n twigs 'n branch 'n trunktaking). :: :: :: :: :: Abraham started buying and selling of land but supposedly substituted animal for human *(pr)*offering, a 'progression' pioneered by Jews, for which they earned praise from Graves, who may or may not have known that those to start first are soonest satest? Had these 3 names really stood for only 3 people, the damages and improvements would not have been so extensive nor would they have been so famous cause they as certainly as regrettably didn't remain unique and ignored as rolemodels and trailblazers not to say desertifyers; rolling stones becoming badly bleached bones. One of the arguments touted by white supremacist religious freaks and righteous scolders of mass society to impress me most went as follows: Jewish genes are dominant and can afford high dilution mongrelifying. If that is true though the holocaustic containment came about a multimillion years to late, give or take a few ice ages. I love 'm though, such lively ones sometimes, and how they pester each other pathetically, worse than the Japs I bet, maybe I'll have to go see how well ra is down there. :: :: :: :: :: Some men will celebrate, no matter how little he has or how much his scope, hide, hair, tip and toe are tested and tried in the attempt to keep heaven and hell apart. :: :: :: :: :: Picking off stragglers is like pruning for plumper peaches..oops bad example, you prune peach nor plum trees, you cull and thin the young fruitset. If sex was the last ditch and line of selfdefence, value and proof of recklessly hedonistic archaism, then repressive hoarding, herding and settling itself is up for the revenge of free will and natural selection, the only thing guaranteeing vitality. :: :: :: :: :: Labouring to divide and depend may be the road to socialism and capitalism but it sprung its variety in- and ensuring bounds no matter how and/or cause deeply desired by workers and/or planners respectively, the latter had to take a few steps back from personable intimacy on equal terms each time they came up with something bigger, better and faster to raise the rape stake, just to get a little perspective, but only God doesn't abuse that kind of distance, making sure he hides in everything at the same time. Be like Dan Winter and my mother for that matter, make the weather your living, main topic in life and reason to live. :: :: :: :: :: Repression pits dependence and division against fruitharvesting nomads, sowing farmers and crushing miners; most dirtphobic administrators become traitors, roadblocks tollgates and rationers all too soon and none too reasonable, I fear they dare to hold their own breath along with every body elses. Clutching at the symbol for frantic identity: repetition and escalation, perverting organic growth, they resist dispersion fiercely with their contageously cramped consciousness. Yore cult's ambiguities (their) con sequences: I function well as a concept engineer and word mechanic, in effect an enthusiasm inoculator advocate for genuine patriarchy which came to balance matriarchy, not the overhype only apparently shiny, clean formula 1 ball and brash nose offender, uninformative and coercively commercial suc*(k)*tion tender vendor version, but a brotherly spirit bond that applies its inherent force to open the layaway border bound abutments and helps 'm meet the till then strayed, waylayed light of logo-law for freedom to grow to and fro gravity which witches and weaves the wood up and down with these thus repentable prevents pursuing for trade traffic on the vertical route that has us hit the road a different way, namely to crunch and crumble christenable crystals. Would you like a comfy hitec armor to hit your road with too, jesus? Hints of such potency were at my ear all through childhood when I heard my fathers presence flow away through the phonewire to far off parts of the world, I learned to think big that way. :: :: :: :: :: Harsh, uncooperative and rigid, scheming to tame, subvert, -ject and -due are the male monomaladies of false fatherhood; first animals were allotted pictographic delegates to rehearse capture and taming, then specialization introduced culture and division of labour which scarred and scarcified beauty so ensuing socialization and monopoly could march hand in hand amidst powerplay and rottenness. Armies were formed as a first vicious circle to aid targetting, but got out of control due to overwhelming success which sustained exclusion and shortage, sons were yoked and harnessed to servitude, the invincible, unapproachable and unrepresentable father myth began spilling over into economics and unleashed dominance wars over mental ideologies as well as physical currencies which institutionalized secrecy and lies besides monetizing resource rape.The constitutionalization of respect for life springs eternal locally, but so far it soon yields to much less sustainable yet massive onslaught of unneighbourly encroachment forces, just because they are more aggresively disciplined, less endowed and ambitious mentally, nor are they so much upwardly mobilizing as laterally subversifying. In a just society the people unable to follow an argument without feeling they are losing it, instead of it them, who try to bend it to their will by breaking its back with intimidation, force and guilt trips will not be allowed to carry on as if they owned their sphere of influence, not even and better yet: especially not their own children who may be at some disadvantage with a lack of animate objects for affection around. Once restrained and monitored they will be allowed to vent their violence on rocks or if they insist on animate outlets: at most on themselves and maybe similarly disposed consenting adults. Penetration potent enough to pack the punch that parts the veils of inertia cluttering her space will get us back in the ter-ra-ce. :: :: :: :: :: Collective responsability and herdlike identity must be measured mostly by the degree enforced laws embody them, not by the virulence of its sentiment and popularity among peoples and individuals. Proper lawmaking and voluntary freedom forces are needed. :: :: :: :: :: Does anybody have the life story of Walter Zander? He worked alongside Beckerath but became engrossed in Zionism where his former focus found no welcome as far as we can tell from here, for now. I ran into a book arguing for making Jerusalem an ecumenical elbowrubbing location. Seemed a bit unrealistic to me. Life's leafy lairs lay and leave the laws lying down behind the dusty dotted dead letter lines. Only cowards are honest, let women rule politics. :: :: :: :: :: Wizfully *(l)*inking: I sink into a sea of ink to precord what she may think about my shrewd love story of clunky clink softening incling that can truely link. Once more I wish I knew a wife and her men so I need not tell you a here nor there, a his nor her but a truely dary story about how one fine day they made a clean dry dusty pile of money, it was coin of the realm itself. Here is how they would grow it tout after working water in to get it perked straight up right back out of their home somewhere in the yards and megamiles of eco-guerrilla woeman's landfolds. They reasoned or rather preseasoned as follows: H2O is the first foremost marriage made ever (Hensel), two parts male to one part female. Oxygen exists freestyle and tethered, the former serves internal oxidation and seems to favor animate mobility; and the latter sports volcanism: exothermal reactions flashing only briefly with lots of down time in between which results in substance akin to more stolid forms on longer cycles, catching the very big waves only. :: :: :: :: :: They decide to reverse the preponderance of the last mentioned fireform and therewith the directions biomass book balances take and so try to move mobility upscale a bit. They started to pounce on the punchable and polishable wealth of rock under the soles of their feet, hopping some through a gratefilled tool they toted, a toy they ployed, an instrument they played and a cross they bore all at the same time. They just loved the versatile choker poking with zinging spring and twanging spoke of the crackpottily musical rockdrum steelgrinder. Their wistful exercutions soon yield some fluffy and until subjected to their close relative, frightfully flighty natural currency, since they work this devilishly airtight gravel in a matching same yet besting and bettering way, so their vertical border broaching accomplished with strategic hardware the design of which proves mentally to be as watertightly continent as the rocks are physically until subjected to this object with its objective of desirabilitation which works at peace for once. :: :: :: :: :: Now they have a soil bankable and tree barkable mineral money to show for their churn and give to their honey who shows it in her turn all the ways of organiclimate zone accountability by floccumating it with the clear and phlegmaticly flowing oxides, which suspends this flour on its way up to cloudfill the sky, it is indispensable for a good mudbath and compost while showing up shiney marbles in a solar polish and chime dish made of glass. So the whirly girlish rock is opened to be filled with water and warmth empathetically, thus suspended it will in time provide framework and woven skin for all from fast to loosely fitting kin, now that she is not from any longer lacking means longingly dumb but got laid in the sun so her shades of gray start organizing their way back to colour in the light of time. Thus they fund and mate, found and date the shine and rain to marry sun and moon. All fuels, solid, soft and intangible, yes, even thus far elusive fresh air appears, reduced from basic bulk and trace element exposure to just newly arriving beams from the very old selfsame sun grow and show up, thus greening the trailblazed way with quintessentialization of the four elements evoked from the top end of the food chain ladder. Wetted dust grows up over the crust in the shapessuch shade, shelter, food and fun livelyhood provisions will shed, a demand and monstration which meets the sun's supply and stands us in good stead with and within our-sex is-tense citations if anybody cares for proper book keeping.

William Irwin Thompson in: The american replacement of nature: Two profoundly true but opposed males: one is immanental, and sees divinity within the pattern of connectiveness of Earth, animals and women. The other is transcendental and sees earth, animals and women as an imprisonment of spirit and cosmic mind. One wants in, the other wants out. One is a wave, which bycause of its own infolded order, feels itself to be in resonance with everything. The other is a particle, which bycause of its limited selfdefinition feels alienated and alone and wishes to have power over the others that impinge on its self inflicted boundaries. For the sake of a working distinction, let's call these two types of human males the poet and the engineer. The poet loves ambiguity, complexity and the lingual, erotic play with words: the engineer loves logic, manual system of control and computational machine codes of one meaning only. Small wonder that the kind of smart scientific adolescent, the kind that rarely gets the girl but often does get beaten up in school for his good grades, has turned his intelligence in the direction of getting rid of the embarrasment of sex and the insult of death. From the Greek Oristaea, modeled after the Babylonian Enuma Elish to Moby Dick, women's wet biology doesn't often carry the day against warrior's steel, but in Gilgamesh the poetic revenge is outstanding.

SET as seen through the eyes of Punchline Pioneer Piet the Prose Poet, PP the PP for short, the world's first grippy. Mazdan prayers attempt to maximize the number of syllables squeezed into one breath. A star doesn't shine unless there is a sun of a bitchin butcher around, throwing light on, not to say into many a subject which, once smote and shattered, matters much to roads of life growing ways.

8th and final crack traction corrected draft of a piece started the 30th/11/95 in Etzenbach near Freiburg in the country of my favorite monetary germinations: Germany Dedicated to the 8th birthday issue of Z Magazine which pulled me through yet another confrontation with the deeply sociable eco-know-no-stow-below left's lyric activist front and their driving me to desparation due to deficient intellectual prowess (not to mention my absconded rainbow display which proved hard to replace, I didn't realize I had only one copy and/or rather too much faith in the ability to learn from someone older and wiser; all young uns wanna enjoy the pleasure of commiting mistakes themselves), without losing faith completely. Or should I say it distracted me from my own lack of social skills to come across with mine own star studded astuteness? Whichever, here is my *(pro)*vision of: The purpose and message of SET (Sustainable Europe Tour) prelimberaries. *(P)*redefining the 'rafinesse' of direct action

Reactionary and apathetic fingerpointing may fill a needy niche in the disempowerment due to delegation pro*(?)*testing campaigns where emotions flair up free rein, yet rarely a start is made to disengage, turn ourselves and our world away and around, though the festival/pageant spirit often prevails and spins good as well as perpetually polarizing confrontational kinds off, but activists are a minority cause most of us are too busy making ends meet, patching and plastering in small change and that is fine bycause nobody ever bothered much about the day after a succesful revolution anyway (except J Zube).

We need long term visions that show radical difference and offer alternatives even if they seem far off pipedreams like 1321 year old trees in a world wide backyard or '58 BuckyBalls floating off into the sunSET just above the clouds and other far and widely implementable ecotopological policies too (mobile musical rockgrinders and libraries have been die-hard dreams of mine).

At the instants we glimpse honour and catch those dreams, they impell and endow us with willingness and ability to take the next tiny steps in the right direction.

Dreamgenerated images make you feel like ignoring or appreciating them, they are 'all roundings' helping not to delegate, but carry out and embody your rules, orders, directives, suggestions and intuitions yourself, they don't come to you for no reason, luckily we're still much more than a workstation. I myself am trying to take this to heart, lest I spend my life in the foolfilled realm of those Potent Peter Pan Possibilities. But I hope you too may cherish cosmology, yet humour the metanoid guru's and help outdate, avoid and outgrow the world's most dangerous safety in number sects: nation states alltogether lest we go the divide and rule way of ants even more and mostly suffer instead of harness miniaturizing mechanisms and the likes which characterize uniform*(ed)* societies.

Faith in visions stems from understanding of principle, but that takes more leisurely as well as systemic thinking in between fighting against various currents, spells and inundations, iow it requires a no less vigorous than rigorous swimming instinct against increasingly torrential floods of disinformation.

My perception of SET's use is learning to scout and pioneer formation of voluntarily disciplined `wassailor' bands which start to mime and master the humble yet musical crush on and of rocks to fend for and feed humus which in turn feeds trees, providing food, fibre fuel and shelter, while aspiring to eventually even crush all mentally imposed inertia and secretively poisonous tyranny by means of more modest mental currencies also (see J Zube's excellent LMP; Libertarian Microfiche Publishing, 7 Oxley st, NSW 2577, Berrima, Australia, featuring rare yet cheap freedom literature, half a million mostly out of print but nevertheless very and if you ask me, some of the most worthwile pages on human rights, constructive anarchism and economic freedom), all of which is a wide open field of opportunity for tight and hi-tec thinking about local, mental and social currencies right alongside the physical ones.

SET's impact or any other similarly well intended one for that matter is, as far as I can tell, most effectively attracting the radiance of magnetic spin when primarily vertical, reaching in before reaching up, around, out and about, lest we'll be reduced to mere symbolic acts and rather than aid oxide reduction, or otherwise injustifyably join the ratrace of cheap steady as she goes, not really boatrocking, habitual roadmusic street-tripping entertainment, costing the earth a burden of taken away breath through fossil fueled inflammatory acts of impatience perpetrations which I define as bad lateral road travelling without dab vert-tickle d*(r)*ead rock unravelling.

Now, let me, again cryptically as is ever my wont, explain the mental constituent of this intergenerational and -specie act, bycause by the same token LETS or other 'schemes' will not fulfill their earth's vitality reawakening potential of open non-secret society stimulation if the specs aren't up to snuff enough to show how good drives out bad under so far only lipserviced conditions, that is to say: those under and with which we make ourselves known and accountable through moneylike businesscard bait which serves as a means of payment when quantities, and duration of validity are specified, then pay supplyers with and /or wait for such eminently ascertainable commitment-emission welcoming and appreciating takers and/or receivers who in their turn ensure a timely 'cash out' (redeeming return) for intake of goods and/or services (when turning this money as specific goods receipts back in while valid, no telling where it's been but it is damn clear where and till when it delivers its nominal (under flexible market prices though) money's worth) which gives us a chance to come through on and with very personal and/or collective responsibility challenging and endowing, promissory notes!

Do you start to see how inflation is society's lifeblood sucking result of abusive centralized sneekonomics? Instead of literally making the money, we are expected to put value behind lipserviced good intentions of powerful and therefore corrupt, supposedly faith inspiring figureheads who are often long since dead and in who's name the issuers count on you (more successfully than they let you count on them) through taxes, to run the unfun global amok gun pragma-trickery.

To sum up: use a combination of multi- and even sub-, that is trans-sensory props and paraphernalia, diagrams, documentation, drama, music and mime to help lastingly impress and entice the audience to participate , so they can not only depict, then put in perspective and eventually distinguish between, but at the same time also encompass and harmonize the various complementary, multiple polarities, such as we and they will ever find within and around us and them more or less as follows:

SET according to a *(g)*astrological strategy orientation; that is one which helps vent rock's pretrospectively not perceived as opressed border closure but prudent provision valving flour-powder fulfilledness with certain flow-better-go-getterships that SET sail direction organic momentum so it turns and churns out into tum-yummy fruitfilled curriculae of sorts.

I have had money and idea's for roadshows ever since I wanted to pull the STOPs (Secession Tasks (and teaches) Overt Principulations) myself from merely personal hedonism and expand into evulvalutionary, least effort, greatest assortment mode with well designed vertical trickle traffic tickling arsenal and after much thought I will aim for organizing direct clean up action as fund- and fundriving concerts held at ailing or upstart communities (directories like Diggers and Dreamers; Eurotopia and some Rainbow projectlists (still hunting myself) are useful to start with). Riddledy rock This was written in december of 95 As my first published poem I had my picture on the cover of some sort of Rolling Stone (Soil Remineralization, a purely pragmatic Hedonism advocating type newsletter, see the bibliography) and this poem inside:
The fresh mud fling and flying dust sprinkle, spray and anchoring man picks up the reverbrating part of the rock search, shatter, scatter, sow and grow show, where the mobilizing percrushionist, the abominable deglaciator, the dark 'n dense tickle trickler: Bam Bam, pitched a potent pile of tensile torque sprung such songseed from playing his windchime steeldrummilling thing which turned hard rock into dust and inverted aggressively idling guitars into friendly shovels, eminently suited to the practise of heavily meddlesome metal manipulating some dense present tense.
We can do worse than give some music back to nature, broadcasting the foundations of sustainable orgasniczations -neath lovely rainbows.
So any which when gentle fireworking walksways toward sound and sensible transportability of water for the breath of life from and into inertia, softened fluffily to dashes of ashes with rough, hardy bashes and smashes at the relay tingle-tactic-tockle station which stays and keeps on steadily destinging deaths bluster lurking in omenlike declima-x-tizations will do.
The global freeze and flair show of the seasons rhythmic rain and shine sow is just itching for that godgiven tensile presence at our mindsearched, heartfelt fingertips which undoes complacency and swaps our outermost reactionary infectiousness for innermost discerning choice. Mythic, religious, military and shamanic, evolutionary, commercial and ideal traffic with death can be harmonized to stand the testing tooth of time; mount bearings and all other moving parts necessary to harmonize, fuse and flex the muscle of assorted ancient and mystic symbols like crosses, enneagrams, cornucopias, caduceuses and even swastikas, load and set 'm plumb on course, then rock and spin the mineral milling arms. Discernment concerning concerts: Most of todays morose or merely musical bottom- and basslines are bullets and other poisonoise spewing or hollow blastsounds made by and with at worst torturing and killing or at most momentarily marvelous yet by and with non renewable and few renovating means and effects. When will rock concert goers become full time professionals to unfirl their true colours and leave groves in their concerted freeing effort wake rather than leaving this at a glimpse of revolutions that last little longer than a good orgiastic fuck and costs more juice and fuel than they provide. I don't know, but to me it seems to be a matter of turning pacifist hippy fire fibbers into militant grippy fibre slibbers, the latter's rockslicing and dicing subversatilizer budges the balance a bit better.
Bring up the stumble-blocked bluster-store and locked lack-lustre stow .. not yet optimally supporting us just below our feet, pass it to next and nearest moving percrushionist who gets on with the show, have this your carried weight played upon into currentability nice and slow, to become depositable at the bank of life, solvent and set to grow like a light loving liquid crystal, which when taken home again to feed the in their turn informing and unfolding seed of a more concentratedly differentiated complex kind, rises all together on cloudforming flow riding up on wet rays a ways, steadily accrueing the revenue from the solv-salv-slivvering salvos into a servable and reservable saldo of sound, sight, scent, tactility and taste (see also Piet B route).

Apropo rock's finest ground;
it greens up your growth astoundingly sound,
you 'll hear it when your music truly touches ground
Can you hear that future music sound, hailing from high or shallow parts of our grand round,
will you remember your descendants coming around?
to ease their deepest and profound
Can you feel that subaudible sound, to ease their coming from way deep down in the ground,
destined to never quit bouncing around,
as long as pure desire recalls it,
so dormant memory can arrive and rebound,
to come back alive for the world to astound.

Rockbottom tool- and toying around enables a diversely formated proportionate lifespanner olympics to bio amass wealth which comes and goes around from rockbottom on up, so build some multirimmed orbs laced with stretch cords and tapered hollow springs. I am using mortar and pestle type hardware much like an inverted churchbell and knobbed rod for the moment, spinning the plans to span many more miraculously simple,
af-, ef,- and infective ways.
I cradle and stretch the crackable crocky cramp vamps to take and give personally, miss universalize and size select for an amply ubiquitous eclect.
Unstrap tensest tensility slighter, preflex it in a crystalmighty tool with rubberized valves, this recording implement is all but a shambling. It breaks the chained formation open for infoflow entry and all the world to see and vice versa. I gather rocks to jig n juggle 'm into the hopper. Soon after I have punched the keys to stretch the strings and work the ropes like a spiderman to get the sails rigged right for catching the winds which power the rock disarming beat the dust gets washed down with rain and grown up in shine; breaking and entering as an inviolate life saver. Be a bit batty, be a giddy kid, play this benevolent deploy toy, it lifts, hops, pushes and rolls, squeezes and rubs, hones and scrapes, swings, shoots and polishes some multicoloured marble down its clean clear pregreen channels. Grok and hack this demonocultivatable rock with water splicer which mints and dices, springs and de-ices, sings and slices, wrings and slivers to start a slither and growth. Crushing rock as a key concept for biomass-age and betterment wholes our earth in a pinch at each turn of a timely curn trick by a shrewd screw coming soon to the aid of a rock near you.
I imagine spiralwisely spun which is to say: vortexturalized marblous mud made in egglike or pearshaped woven or braided cablenets which twist, squeez and churn like whirlywise cornucopias from wire wraught to destrict with stringent strenuous stridency. Or I imagine an on wicked platonic shape modeled, mobile, metal, steeldrumlike, shake, rattle and roll ballmill-buster that would reciprocate locking around rocks through rot- and flexegrity hinged strainers which squeeze and crunch, then reverse direction.
It should have rock and water inlets and primal cell soup outputs and could have a twin but superlight version raised on an axlemast to function as a windmill/solar panel power source.
Help light and water flow into starkest dark to grow spongy and up to become fruitful shade of a park;
dig, drill, carve, scrape, curve and polish rock, soak, spray and pitch its dust with rhythmelodiously tactful tensegritty mills for tactile technology tactics of big and small moves by emotivated grown and little children, these lovely new tooltoys geometrize and tumbletime your scope to touch on monies dirty yet clean with the sun's local current as standard of value, the ephemeral golden meanwise spiralling light, of which so much goes to waste, so much sent, so little well received (many are called, but few listen), so please adapt and fit your crunching crush to meet its bite, unbridle a scoop of stone to elicit its full arc flavor of finest organismic biospherical potential.
I need a 9 foot diameter transparant bubble with a lense bulls-eyeing sun into a mudbath and another one to put all different size and spiralling trigger cone-keys throughout it, some connected with netted straps (according with Keyserling's aspect and music correlation perhaps), a third one to plant a mini orchard in and the main, mean, heavy yet intensely kind one to go along with the remote control kickpot: the steeldrum/rockgrinder for the deep, angly tangly molecular "tissue" work/play integritty and the afore lyrisized fresh drafts of oxygen drawing, given reductive bio time.
Rock rubbings and polish triggered from the spherical cockpit remotely controlling the grindminding minter, which does its clean and sound bashes on rock's timestore stashes, just join this clockknocking to have some promethean fussy sissy fun.
I quarry and query some all too exposed yet impervious to rain and shine hoardy-hardy squarish rock, my friends come round to see and carry the promise of flirtility a way with it and new found glee.
Sloterdijk: come in to the world, find your tongue, mount the stage.
I sport most*(ly)* western approaches to the universal wheel of poetic yet systemic philosophy.
Present purses and bulging budgets dispense curses with a fat chance to escape being cashed in or pursuing reimbursement; my curing current dispersion fresh from the mint on the other hand affords the sure fire proof way for wormship from feet on up and footsole on down as a full reach around which will thoroughly thrill sentience.
Shock a rock right soft enough and slake its dusty thirst, then leave it quenched and cozily basking in the sun at first.

Between dust to dust lust comes to pay prespect to the crust, when such rockraising is understood as organic principle and a must. Let us help out with the plumbing between heaven and earth, that vertical traffic which lets the biosphere give birth. Mudbubble blowing at the hospitably radiation receiving jubilation prefractory (preferable act factoring) station, to set ready rock aflow-go-growing.
Inmost and outmost fire may meet at intro-pre- and reduction of simultaneously no longer locked up and magically movable mineral molecules (a tree is fluid rock and solid air in motion) to the consciouly conceived protoplasmic e-vent.

it gets right through to the heart of darkness

There is a karmic need to forge a metallic membrained figurehead with sound mettle and incling for (that takes note of and gives credit to all life with unjarring jingle, untangling tingle and twinkling sprinkle) air, water and rock mixing spread, spray, sow, flow and grow; a heartfelt hand-

Guitarz and gaia, symbolz and substance

A guitar can be understood and provisionarily seen as an arche-prototype of a more and most thoroughly touching rock wrench-tumble-wring-flex, quench geo matrix-tricktriggering, bearing-spun, valve-pressured, wind, water, sun and muscle driven box body with (and why not more) a taper-torsion-spin-twist-axle-necks, in other words a music founding hi-horse power mental strew-minting strum-drum.

A conventional guitar only symbolizes, mimes and mimicks true ministry, the breach of and breaks beyond merely personal body consciousness and charisma; true execution of such wind-waving rockmills with stainless steel, tapered from light and tight to hollow and heavy webbing, wound vortexically around the tensile spin sporting and rotegritously reciprocating wring neck, the torquey trunk of the metal treelike whirligig. Once it grows out of that and up it will be a birthright suction device that changes conventional rockmusic and the mute substance that goes by that name loosely into foodfinds for sizewise minority species but the our *(un)*kind far outnumbering and
-weighing majorities up and down the spiralling foodchain hierarchy.
Roaming with these humble growth's locked building block crumbling biomass betricklers (literal translation for the Dutch word: bedruipen meaning faring well, caring for) is to start trouble with a clean green finish cause this boombox content welcomes our beamball's challenges right quick.
The millwilling march of militant guitars on the move going twang, clang, squeeze and crunch, makes it easy to sculpt, mine gravity ore with high polish groove .. leaving leaf likings for life livers to munch, it helps grow some up right off the ground floor store with a punch, cause it soaks this fresh flour down and the sun raises the troubled muddle resulting up through representatives from the population of every particular evolutionary stage up and down its timescale.
So this flex-twist-tensilarating-squeeze and pump-kin kind of thing lends sighnz of life's cycling and breath wrested from death's cling as minute traces to thus mobilized marble's smile cracking and mud washed off its shine tracking faces, it grits, frits and spins life from rocks, wittingly recycling and breaking up the relatively collective same into the more individual and minute momentae of a multigeared game which speeds naked inertia's pent up clocks on a return to spirited nonracist, asexist and intimate contact without shame.
Patients and sports, partyers and prisoners take their ire

Exterritorialhood preempts the fight.

All good prayers have highest and lowest notes which remain resonant for very long after the basic, simple sounds went their way.

A minute missive from the towncryerlike rocky mist ministering messenger about the concluding preparatory plenary of the Sustainable Europe Tour: SET

The grand debate featured a unanimous consensus right at the start, which in itself is inside out and rare enough, but it was even on 'nonremembrance'. With this cleaned slate cleared out of the way we proceeded to define the targetgroups worthy of support on the proposed tour such as the local environmental organizations although earlier in the seminar there was much talk of expecting help from and depending on them rather than offering it, secondary ones are children and general public.

The list of willing speakers on what was to prove a hot and lengthy issue started of with a triangular show of hands in our circle, me included, but wasn't adhered to as rigorously as later on. The subject was: who picks people, one of the quick responders was joking earlier about picking on people to give this bottle neck a twist. Here I will insert my passed up turn to spew a view of the formal selection structure which was promised by the third early pontifactress but turned into a simple postponement of the issue till the next seminar which is good enough I guess cause the problem probably dissipates by then, but if not, here is the most democratic matching process:

mutual selection success ranking achieved through tallied, turfed and averaged lists of favorites; kinda works the same way as the only value standardization with a potential for globally equitable currencies, not to mention information and music flow of rock flowering; iow kinda like mechanical size selection: rock and shake to help commensurate, compatible vitality and affinity eclection fall into place.

The next bottle neck type question was the threat to be tough on the Freiburger candidates (Freiburg, the eco-capital of Germany had had a tough time that week already: police protected workers stripped and ripped down, scrapped and pitched a childrens farm in front of a squat complex nursery in a cotainer to cart it off; I yelled at the top of my lungs: "Heroin dealers pop up even faster than you can find them if you waste your time to ruin a child's selfempowering pride and joy"; 2 days later 2 young women were shot, one dead, when coming out of the showcase eco house in a park surrounded by student development, a week later there was a poster in all trams with a copy of the anonymous note found, saying: "revenge to the aids infected dealers of the eco-home", requesting tips adding to this, their only lead).

Sabotage happens in the best circles (witness my exhibits that went missing there) cause never consciously questioned accurately enough and this warning/threat was just an attempt to protect established privileges of alcohol loving paperwork peers.

The final surge of urge to drive out the irreversible, decisive, irrevocable and mystifactual deadlock enacted by people reluctant to relinquish the reins of censorship susceptible authority once and for all may be countered as follows: repent, invent rock, not the drainbow. It reminded me of the ASEED policy not to let me add to their Email ammunition, afraid to be washed up and out from feedbackwash I quess. A last advice to heed: nobody is afraid of anybody more than they are of projected vices, iow themselves writ small.

Two more of my passed up speaking turns (in order to work out this more lastingly articulate precise) made good next.

A succesful quest for consciousness inevitably ends up stirring Excalibur like the heart of my little show tries to crossrefer you to (a picture of excalibur resting in the stone (the king and the land are one) but after churning out enough waterwelcoming tolerance in its rock now allows a vinerank to grow around it from the flour fitted for life, see page 47).

Rock shaviours need the minimally mobile mentality and skill to form flexible partnerships amongst participants to avoid charge leaking emotional friction and be able to go after and for the physical kinds avidly.

Sounding sound to go around

Young people from single family communities especially seek out sonic resonance as a way to help take the hurdle of their own skin when going after expansion and elud*(ec)*ibles for their sense of identity, but that also means playing (or being played by) verbal chess with logics which can be lifelike as well as unfriendly to it. Most songs are love songs at best which state an intent or situation to reflect this stage; cramming cosmology and strategy into them while showing simple beginnings of life, is indeed my sense of future music (Nazi propaganda pageants were so winning bycause participants (executers to be) were armed with giant flags only). The effects of a customary quick fix version of sonic tonic will never last as long as the ones from rockmusic which imitates real rock's mineral hoard crunch and crush into the type of biocredit like ice ages afford us, do.

Anybody out there wanna compete with weathermaking which doles out just desserts one way or another? We human and other beings can do each others bidding like drops of rain for specks of dust and schools of fish for fish of schools. The next big issue was the need for diversity; (editorial aside: I believe international legitimacy starts at resolutions endorsed by participants from at least 21 countries, not that these laws are ever implemented, imagine the UN coming to the rescue of the Rashneesj community in Oregon)

Green machine gene, a con-on-drum

A drum that sounds like peace from miles away, it primes and sounds vitality's flow and a hi hi di hoo with who, where, what with, why and how so when and what we make our next break through rock for breath with.
So make a way and save the day and LSD, of the same age, take note, belongs up in and throughout all the spirit heavens, meanwhile mama gaia's thin and thinning film of life coverage has much to teach and reach us so we learn and earn, rear and hear, lead and read, beat and eat our spin off springlike sprite.

This imperturbably reciprocating gadget goes down with a venue vengance, a vent dance, a rent prance and rift stance;
the ridge gapping issue hop and wet border brim lancer brings up shading leaves for the sun to feed, dark for light to meet and dry with wet to feel, a wishy wash sheenery that slices ices and invests our titbit credit clout most profitably. We squeeze the angles till they curve, crush the tangles and moisten 'm till they swell all swirly and swerve to catch and harness the bouncy cool speeding light they unfirl and trade in elusive tangibility for illustrious animation. The ingredients needed: skates, bikes, kites, chimes, mills, spheres, vortex and spiral seashell shaped pipe frames of both light and giant steeldrumlike, strong, stainless steel basins, whirling springs, rubber flexplasts and superlight white water tight material, all this for a groovy rhythm from thoroughly thrilling percrushion perfor-at-mance through to the core of ancestral rock's very own magic music itself.

And now (first few lines free after) Martin Carthy:
we are never too low to stoop and scoop so we can send the droop for a loop.

Low low we are so low on them, bow woe why are we so slow to bow to them, bend your back, mend your ways, fun your fears, grow, grow, why dont we flow with them, into our future generations.

We are not too low to delve the stow, nor to touch and uncoil the spoil, but prostrate we fall in the rich man's hall or cringe low from our toil.

We plow, we sow, we are so low that we delve in the dirty glade, we bless the plain for the fragrant grain, but our pain becomes our lord his gain. A place we know to make in the stow, so slow to give us way. We are not too low the bread to grow, too low the bread to eat. We are rabble we know, but we are not too low to build a wall, too low to tread the floor, yet from our fingers glide the silken flow, all for to fit round the limbs of the sons of pride, what we get is not what we give, but still we know our share.

We are not too low the cloth to weave, too low the cloth to wear.

An effective rock song routine would sing it (rock) to pieces for green practice rather than displaying the idling vanity from a sense of self that hasn't grown very far beyond the individual spouting leaky philosophical lipservice or pure egotism, but the faultier the formulas, the more frenzied vocal vibrancy is allowed to make up for it in a Devil may care for Darwin type of way.

I am indebted to my friend Manuel Franco, a brilliantly moving guitarist for giving me the book "Noise, a political economy of music " by Jacques Attali, U of Mn press. (Yes the same guy that got his reputation dragged through the mud so bad it cost him his job at the East European Bank for Development, ironically, he had spent too much money on marble and jet fuel !) Here are some relevant highlights (with comments):

Music and intuition are battlefields of knowledge.

Poverty is subjugated by lent and transgressed by carnival (maybe to be transposed by rooted music). Music is only in the light, near a tabernacle, the masked simulacrum of the pagan altar. There, it abuts (perverted revelatory) dice, and playing cards: music is the fragile order of ritual and prayer, an unstable order on the border of chance, harmony on the border of violence. Elsewhere silence,.... music fashions sound matter.... social meaning ....systems of power it serves....music is economic status.., ..pulverizer of the past... noise is a weapon and music an imitation ..a simile, substitute and transformer; weeping turned to healing, stone cold turned to life... sounds have no hyrarchy ...... Noise is a weapon, fire is a threat, music and love are sublimations, channelings of violence, they organize, affirm and take root as society and religion, replacing sacrifice with entrance fees, new inventions create money and open content, diffuse authority.....(unfinished, many more clues in it).

This scheme, like many other work by WIT rings fairly true and classic to me but leaves out a lot of things easily incorporated here as well as having a deserved presence in the text. I refer to his observation that we use more and more of our later technologies to counter and fight the effects of earlier bright ideas for instance. Now in diagrams like this I would reserve most of the inner parts of these circles for women, children and assorted forms of biomass to keep such chains of beings sane enough to even keep linking in a happyning way. The circle in the middle would show a wide green/grey between black and white bands to represent soil, its covers, contents and weathers. These bands dwindle drastically as we (one) go*(es)* further out and away. It's time to turn inwards, curl up and unfold like our what's left of it still faithful foliage.

Dan Winter: It seems like Dan Winter wants to internalize symbolically what I, unless my understanding and intuition are not subtle enough, wish to manifest matter of fact materially also in order to reach the same objective; I say: internalize macrocosmic glowspeckstars figuratively all you want, but don't forget to translate, -port, -mute and -form sucker-subjectivity underfoot into nourishing objects overhead literally. The good news: I scanned and uploaded some fine stuff stemming from the 30ties mostly for starters, they are called guest appearances here is the first installment about the UN, militias, revolutions, peace, etc And here is another one: 'A way out of the monetary chaos' by Walter Zander, who survived the war in exile [England] from Germany and proceeded to become a Zionist thereafter, probably not before being disillusioned with currency issues. But his work is once again if not still a hot current issue, go see for yourself even though: 'Zander verzandde in het hebreews woestijnzand' meaning: Zander bogged and mired down (got stuck) in dry desert sand

PYRAMIDS, OCTAHEDRONS, HEIGHTS AND DEPTHS

If pyramids try to suggest, give us a measure, hint at or allow shrewd guesses and wild hunches about the hight of the habitably biologizable part of our crust, what would a double one, otherwise known as an octahedron, bottom to base, base to bottom, inducate? The depth to which we shall give roots right of way, lead ocean water to circulate and burrow? Where they built in a consensual or slavedriven social atmosphere?
The resistance offered to the repeated pleas of and by Jews to secede suggests the latter was the case. Matter of fact, the amount of trouble it took before these people succeeded is as considerable as the piramids were sizable or vica versa rather since Bauval's star struck supposition, which for all the truth they may contain cannot hint at and even distracts from other aspects. He has added a most ironic polarity to the many facetted story: the stake of hopeful and far off claims made by 'pharaodiots' blinded 'm for disasters hitting close to home and these were the main reasons and ultimate causes for the defections and slip away of the accurate diagnosticians, their' jews.
This bit needs some more attention, don't read yet. :) : in a '42 book edited by H S Commager somebody maintains that pure chance games were very taboo in America at that time though gambling on intelligence has been an all time fav.
On the balkans and farther East pyramid enchainment has built many a house of cards fluttering to ground zero from incomplete reciprocity, not to use more damning terms. Edging toward hyper hedging makes more and more desperate deals, quiks on the draw draw on the quicks of time/space in unstabilizing frenzies, rending precious fabric.

old dreams die hard this bit is about the belated realization of a very old dream of mine; to visit the major organic orchards and set up rockdust experiments for them, iow, to become a hybrid (polygrafted stocky rooter):

Add to that a later addition to such a campaign itinerary: communities; there is a new book in German listing 300 such projects in Europe called: 'Eurotopia, leben in gemeinschaft', it can be ordered from: oekodorf (meaning eco village) buch-versand, Dorfst. 4, D-29416 Gross Chueden, Duitsland.
As preliminary examples of the places which appealed to me I will list some features of the italian project descriptions that caught my attention. When I find time I shall add some French, German and English ones.

'No plurality without equality', Hannah Arendt A focus on the most minimally different affords maximum effects, plurality and equality are guaranteed when mixing traditional with modern methods to yield clean air, water and foodsources are tending to do so quicker, using less space, labour and energy.

reflections on daemonic demography and terror, being quips and quotes by Robert Cheatham at the perforation site: http://noel.pd.org/topos/perforations.htm surveys focus on crises and stopgap allocations for them. Their frequencies preempt nonreactionary initiatives. Big money without a big plan at least reaching if not just simply starting at the obliviously blissfull and/or long suffering bottom is gonna help nobody but big bizz. Rupture the rupturers! RC's big idea seems to be: never mind nonabstracted physicalities; I mean, this could count as the accurate caption to many headstrong rants at this site. This terro*(a)*r bit skirts and flirts with action in a particularly voluptuous and breathtaking way. Sometimes I can not decide if they are a rapid fire of perfect and playful inversions or incriminatable intelligence and stubborn denial. Let me give you an example: ....'yes there are many promises to keep and break'. No mention of which kind would be best and good enough to keep us..... :: .....the (apocalyptic) Turn consists of a leave taking (leave making would have been more realistic here I feel) from the revenge of mute matter and the refutations of death, arrival of completions of matter and the effacing of the boundary of life/death (is it merely osmotic/two way porous, uncanny?)

Euro tictacs: Most banks have adressed their clients with a great deal of propaganda spiel, spouting it and spilling an already traditional kind of beans bumper to bumper; hybrid of course, so that 'dependensing', given fancy names implying service like klantbinding and evoking brandloyalty spells comfort for a tiny top tier but turns out to be all too literally catching for all those whose assets and identities get caught in the one way squeeze of bottlenecking upward draughts; only the worthy shall harden their hearts.
The upshorings and assurances the crafty bastards give themselves that way is so much easier to come by than that way too precious and principally irremunerative commodity: care and sensitivity, dialogue and polyfocability, the kinds of monies /seeds which are viable, potent and sprout happy like a truly humble people's powderability power.

rant a la Max Nordau: This is a continuation of a piece written on the first functional day of the new and unified stockland yard sexchange in Amsterdam, uniting 3 (in principle probably very disparate) types of trading. I mean stuff that should not be traded in the way it is.
But what the hay, who would decline a well hedged and hoisted zit popping position on top of a pretty fierily bubbling scumbag operation the likes of J P Morgan have inspired the mythical fame out of; if he wasn't already dead yet, I would clamour as follows: 'assasinate JP Morgan please, another sumbugged grabbag puff pill pull from farherners. This year there were 4 active tornado's at once, a first since over a century. Is there a tie to the fibre fired capital spinning around the globe in frantic attempts to prevent, co-opt, fib, simulate and substitute the o so necessary surplus of wet oxide 'adjoinment' with it's dry siblings 'supersurfeiture' to make every body a happy hippy and a hoppy grippy? Mebbe. Read Eric Wolf if you don't believe me. Capitalism lipservicefully windowdresses terms like consent and majority rule but most polls result in ties and impasses illustrating the patpositions prefigured in the sexes and so taken for granted, the only people who actually enter contracts voluntarily and eagerly are the bribable bullies who can pull off keeping the populace down with the occasional show of barbarism.

Thoughts inspired by Beckerath, Weatherford, Deloria
What larger proof positive of Hollywood's, the CIA's and various other secretion servicing agent, nongent and ungent payrolling (cronily capitalized, immunized and protected)

panderers' spiritual bankruptcy do you want besides the nonstopped spectacle of slaughter, genocide, arson and other atrocities perpertrated in the Balkan by one among so many miserable but trained and standing armies? Speciously genderbiassed delivery at the edge of the less and less deep green world, the heart of which was but recently cured of such horror (even though megalomaniacal ressurerection of another 'Bearlunge' (where my hero U v Beckerath once lived) for problematic and blinding emblem blending seems to wend its ways without wanting to see wither and how such willfulness ended umpteen times before: battlefields, deserts)? Historically speaking homo heroicus is turning into a mass tearful type of terminal homo erodus. Jack Weatherford is a good example of someone showing the more or less busy and/or changing ways of tribal savages reaching civilization and vice versa, leading to a type of wrangle-tangle tide so irreversibly different from the ones where, say: scurrying and crawly critters besides pollens, roots and seeds where providing a lively buffering burgeoning of that spice of live: diversity.

He highlights the fructifying aspects of culture mixing as well as the abrasive aspects, which are often obliterative to what existed and went before. The UN is still not ready to protect or restore, stimulate and establish autonomy wherever it is wished and wanting or under threat, etc.

Watch out, one of my famously breathless sentences: Perhaps because the long 'evoluaddition' during which the friendly, cooperative and lucrative ways of 'progressive' culture contact (which nevertheless had many inadvertent and devastating effects in the form of epidemics and disease to rival the ones which spread from close contact with even more remote species during earlier domestication phases of animals for instance) often attracted and had to buy off the threatening attention of warmongers and rulers and became like them due to defensive immunization and callousness; ever since financiers are just as quick to feel challenged to (the) choice (of) weapons rather than learning; martial or virtual quick fix sleighs of hands and brutality work out to the same thing as long as nobody has the acumen, courage and succeeds to set out on an examplarily different course.

I'll say the same thing once differently once again: barbarism infected and crept into the thus less and less transforming fire power of (what started out for its amazing flights of fancy as real) IOUz which were, once watered down to mere (flounted) moral account calls on/of vague and rarely optimizable promises and holders/emitters of which were more often than not left no choice but a challenge to carelessly imitate, collude with and sell out to (rather than emerging victorious from having come to grappling grips with) more definitely exclusionary, sharper, more ancient, physical, primitive, potent and penetrant ammunition; the *(especially in a real or supposed pinch)*proliferating, inventive mimic and mastery of short term self preservative, deranging into abstract self indulgent destruction of, among and boosted by monies which nowadays as ever need not merely symbolize freedom or appeal to reason, force of arms or symbiosis, etc, once (its?) hardware is aimed at it......

Why save the latter for later?

Karmic law versus tarmac wall, a thought is but a bluff that flattens tender Love to leave be [leaf] and let blossom

Meritriciously made money turned to selfdefense will work. Speculatively made money spent on philantrop*(h)*y will not. Why would money remember its roots of gentility and truth if it can make it (a reel world) the rough way too? More spectacular power concentrations are what the girls will bid their busts and bottom up for and gullet-gobble gullibly..... Gobble.....kkkgglggll sllffffllssk kfffllslllall lddalalaaaah ahahahh ahaaaaha haahaha

I suppose I am trying to say that self preservation doesn't always make it across the yellow brick bridge of golden mean logic to respect for others and so, the two were not always entering the books in a balanced manner. Vine Deloria is all for restoration of ethnic borders and leaving the few still respected ones in peace. He uses the sort of awkward language you see an exxagerated version of here (I'm still under the influence) to deride and ridicule Christianity.

If you learn to love death and your ancestors as well as your own life you may live it in a fuller but more detached way. He admires Jews (funny enough) cause of their supposed egalitarian outlooks in the same breath (or spirit I guess) he seems to applaud natives for claiming they are 'the people'. But we have to keep in mind that what he admires most of all is the (unmentionable selfevident) rootedness of the latter: the (right) people in their (right) place. Isn't that a tacit and implied condemnation of Jews? Wether they learned to like what is so loathsome to most and permutations thereof, or not (one need not like ones ineradicable habits to decide on trying to limit the damage). Who can, and how can one say such a thing of people swarming wildly? Weatherford claims it is something all races have had to learn to like and/or put up with, wether due to imposed or emerging custom, climate or catastrophy. I suspect that if Jews got displaced and pushed around a lot first and earliest, therefor longest of us all, it toned and honed them to the point where they got accustomed maybe even learnt to enjoy (turning the tables on) it. It is understandable if they also grew vengeful to compensate for feelings of inferiority resulting from the disrespect a people considered incomplete or in some whatever sense lacking; any partial loss has the loser scheming incessantly; memories of beauty turn cruel, the lot of some many and even more and more native peoples. Their long suffering certainly gave Jews a jump on their more barbaric and traditional, in the sense of local, neighbours and trading partners in as much as these were not becoming fatally and terminally threatening from a too violently and impatient sort of stirred up greed. The dosing and doling out of which is a wild science of desire naive gaiting the cataclysmates. Their former neighbours are still there and the havoc caused by a few centuries of roaming and routing has the most arrogant of 'm all backing them from sheer gratitude yet and well they should but how a fellow who knew the sober and simple causes for and solutions to ethnic confrontation way before the second world war which caused him to flee from Germany to England, should abandon them and later become a Zionist advocating the transformation of Jerusalem into some kind of interfaithcenter for the world

The ruthlessly selfish versions of profit motives and profitably motivated masses has co-opted both the tools of self defence and self expression into a bind and bond of mutual decimation and slavery that no opportune natural disaster can sever in a fortunate enough way to be taken for divine intervention. If that is what it took to free a brick baking tribe from rubbing shoulders involuntary with pyramid builders it certainly left 'm with a chip on it in the very act of liberated leaving; perhaps their skills were simply obsolete and they got the boot, there is no telling what aspects where buried and/or added to anything that ancient. Does the word pyramid occur in the bible? Why not? A case of rigorously editing out irrelevancies?

Jesus saved....(us all...from)....his hopeless and hard headed self...no trouble about snipers, snappers and 'immudonation'

I just finished reading Paul Biro's 1927 dissertation about Weininger. It gave me a lot to chew on: 1) the re- and precursion play on word possibilities of a sentence such as for instance: Ich sehe es als meine Aufgabe das Gegebene nicht auf zu geben (I see it as my task to not give up on the given - circumstance of reality). Below you can read my version of linking a 'fallen' creation to the fruitful falls of it, to giving up on it and them on- and into the tensions of, tides and gradations between universal and specific, intent and motive. I ain't no world saviour cause I can't be guilty of it all, so how could I have the faith, urge or need to work such a release (verlossing, erloesung = birth), nobody needs to shoulder the whole world's debts. Nor am I gonna pretend to posses an ability to save the world (can't even get to know it all nor describe it anywhere as good as my favorite authors, latest of which J Weatherford does a good job) any other way than from instead of by myself. I mean,...even that is (if not understood as a joke, perhaps misintepretable as) a boast worthy of megalomaniac fameclaimers; in reality most people cannot miss you cause only few really do get to know you, even if only from hearsay, never mind we live in an age of optic fibre and satellite power. I used to be fascinated with the saying that the world can't end till all people have had a chance to get to know the Gospel. I broke my head trying to get it around such a thought.

But what I can volunteer to do is this (I am even begging yall): strap me into some ultralight camcorder gear to point in every direction around me (I promise not to back up against the wall unless someone is there to hoist me up on it), hand me enough cartridges for continuous rolling, give me the most convincing access credentials available: a modestly sized, superiorly selfdefensive force (big enough to hold it's own at any roadblock .. back up option available even without massive backup) let alone while backroading or bushwacking it if it comes to a dare, which maybe the case in the beginning before our reputation (for perspicacious inquisitiveness benefitting aidtargeting) is established. If such eyes of, on and for the world rich enough to afford themselves a perceptive conscience proves robust enough to bear looking their bad egg ega's and Frankensteinian pawns in the eye we will see ingenuity win out, thanks to prudent over merely violent force. The ever ailing and trailing leg of the succes formula for Atlas Shrugged will finally bear weight in reality as much as in myth, and the repellantly parted poles of respectable prowess and hide out hippies will flip into attraction. Covert dissemination of sound self help principles, by the no longer too distant, cold and unfeeling richready to help others in need for and of a change full tilt will work all the better when in possesion of promise and mandate which both do not bear empty hopes and threats. I for one want to earn gratitude and respect from succesfully liberated and defected, formerly subdued, subjected, subducted and subordinated populaces and make their world a gentler place; it will take no more than a few scrapes (or crews at most) lost to belatedly 'loyal' blockblokes along the way to a final face to face fire and interview of a faulty principle personifying tyrant. I for one am willing to make a start forming one such motley crew cause we can't have private or national armies anymore if we wanna keep up on, let alone with and stay abreast of batches and globs of 'mogulowmiserly' monies and/or battalions sucked onto the miserablest forms of socialization and assorted effects thereof gone haywire and where necessary confront it and them with some (pre-, re- and) presentable alternatives.

Vofelita = Voluntarily federated liberation taskforces

And so, I urgently call upon all even if only the sites listed in my alternative economics category to amalgamate, pool, co-ordinate, allign and harmonize their programs into a neat DIY package translated into Russian, Albanian, Palestinian and a host of African languages, equip stealth and mobile broadcasters and go for it. To such purposes I can pledge my text and time free of charge other than optimal food, sufficient clothing and minimal shelter.

If snob tops are out of reach and Soroses are not willing to come out and play media guerilla (aiming at the worst with monies made in worrying ways is perhaps the horse cure way to redemption), let's appeal to the armies, they should not have lost touch with ground zero levels completely yet but hurry before wars have turned into video games completely. How long since

Mao prevented war by sending the opponent army home, each soldier with a clump of gold clutched in his hand? (Read Beckerath on that one) So, to recapitulate: To declare war on democrapitalism effectively one must back up the cheekyest (bij de hand=D) yet peaceloving press with a small but real force to tokenpresent and scout for, its own massive backup which in turn must be versatile and resourceful enough to handle and hand out handtools, seeds and such stuff no less handily than modern yet small arms to protect wealth of health in the making Milosevic, here I come!

Let's formulate, debate, legalize and implement the blabsabsolutely guaranteed perfor*(man)*ce preventing ethnic violence The promise of America and the Hopi Indians: The rainbow army, all races agreeing and co-operating on some minimal basic action (why does Russell Means object to the term: native?....maybe I'll come back to that)

Simply offer all refugees a job working with each other taking care to steer 'm into equal part mixes with every body pursuing his strongest talents wherever possible. Thus we will have superior enough forces to demand surrender and charm most people into incorporating. the http://www.gn.apc.org/nattytrust effort? Their 98 summer gathering has been and gone meanwhile; they are still short a few thousand pounds to claim outright ownership for 'their' 23 acres partly hardpanned and sometimes practically waterless (at least till a few sensible ponds are dug). This gathering reminded me much of a (small, there were between 100 and 200 people during the 3rd week of their month long event) rainbow one with all proz and conz thereof: a + = easy access, a - = late risers, a + = big on faith, a - = small on works, etc but at least intentionally Natty is a giant leap forward. It has been speculated about many times before: smoking could be related to an oral fixation stemming from disturbances during breastfeeding and echoing anxieties. Here is an easy way to test this tale and put it to rest: What if women got together to eradicate smoking by way of offering the greater attraction: their nipples; in the time it takes to ruin your lungs, endurance, stamina, etc, just to benefit from the socalled 'calming' effect, which is more like a queer indulgence in frusty anestheticism or a horse cure for sluggish bowels at best, one could get a whole arsenal of different juices flowing and dissolving barriers to ready up for real;

the trick of course is to use those precious minutes as a springboard, legup and boost to reach out for the weightless purity of well a while off yet goals, a shiver rippling salivation which bestows optimism and humility instead of an opportune base short circuit and cut. Will we be able to tacitly agree on it, install it stilzwijgend as the beautiful Dutch word has it? How will people match up voluntarily without taking children as inspiration?

coming soon: lauter geklaute klabouter Lyricist and expounder looking for a flexunbounder. Quadrupled the park visitor numbers here, it's time to move.

A bit of deconstruction style size reducing thanks to Hannah Arendt: The German word 'Urteil' means judgment, literally 'Ur' means ancient, 'teil' means part, 'Urgestein' means hard rock; conclusion: an ancient, grounding and pragmatic meaning of 'Urteil' could just happen to have been rock grinding maybe? Especially in view of the 'standard' by which one judges: a 'maatstaf' (D), 'massstab' (G) is easily associated with a handtool of sorts and the connotations to mother and mass make the whole thing more obvious to me still. The Dutch word 'beoordeling' means judgment 'veroordeling' means sentence,

'Beurteilung' is not used much is German (Verurteilung is) but 'beuren' means lifting in Dutch (beurs means sharemarket: paradoxical polarization requires these places to be frequented by greedy bastards; beurs is a fruit which fell and bruised itself, kept from hungry mouths and strong winds to live a sheltered life into the ripe old age of uselessness).

Judgements are often across the board, once and for all stake offs and outs, precluding closer critical and fresh looks, let alone line draws, parting particulates and fracture cleaves, once they degenerate into prejudices (Vorurteil) instead of vegetative erections and high standards....

What shall we have Clinton do?: I think he should be sent to a whore house (regularly) under the watchfull eye of the public: into a rigged up space, covering the multiple angles from which it will then be possible to detect, divine and decide just how exactly his movements defuse the danger of conflagrations involving those mere surrogates and simulators of male potency: rockets, to wit, the plentiful plethora which the american public places into his pockets. He too leaves a mark, trace, wake and weird record Why on earth and how did he do what?

We know where: Ireland to be exact. It had something to do with encryption and him signing with/in and/or using it,

It is epiphanous irony to me he should go to Ireland of all places to premiere such a ponderous move all the while never needing to try personify and play out the now turning out to be (to the T) quite prophetic performance of an earlier celebrity: HCE (Here Comes Everybody), who's acts were tough to follow in the tangled thickets of feelings public and private, and the fact that they were strewn amongst various collections of cluttering irrelevancies makes it hard to believe they were all to do with a 'single' man, let alone concocted by (another just) one. I speak of the mongrel and hybrid Irishman James Joyce of course who could not have thought of a better flesh out for his acronym HCE than:

Here Clinton Ejaculates me thinks. Meanwhile, what would we do without such a great scopegate?

We could be lost. Heaven forbid we should lead our lives at cost. Or....better yet, see what happens when we ease his testosterone pressures by feeding him perfectly ripened fresh fruit mostly, under the even more closely watchful eye of people of course, won't his plodding plop-ploef-plop-ploef pace not pick up and become a bit more pouncy, perhaps even a thunderous pound; his sight sharper, his nose clearer? Of course. Take it from a man who has been there, done that. Perhaps tis time for a NA council of elders to run this country and not the bribed and bought out kind either, some of them are only human after all.

There is a gateway to help you navigate my site and clicks to external linklists at the bottom of this file or lop off the last part of the adress to see the upload-dates and sizes for all of them.

In most of the correspondence and list post files I added pertinent fractions of the reponses and dialogue in the appropriate places so chrono and resonance timing trade tidbits for easier comprehension, expediency and to prevent repetitions.

Many of these entries begin with the colour white wherein I denote the dates, subjects, adressees and characterizations if and when provided.

Most of this got written straight off the cuff and must (therefore) be easier to follow than the ornament*(at)*ed, longer and longer winding, more and more winding, multiply in-, con- and evoluted material elsewhere at this site.

Mary Lehmann is a died through the wool kind a lady knowledgable about Land Trusts and their stabilizing effect if and when the other leg to stand on: proper monetization (author of a book on Islamic banking) her parts of this dialogue will be in white throughout our interaction (taking more than half of this file).

Mary dear, have you writ upon the subject of islamic banking? a maneshake of yours perhaps? (namesake= samely named) I'd love you to send me some, any or all of that work if so. all I found on the net were a few posts from a conference. I saw your stuff along with a bathc of land trust material without getting a chance to copy it, being on the verge of getting thrown out of the wonderful archive in Auzzie land run and owned by John Zube LMP = Libertarian Microfiche Publishing, he was planning to be 'film master minding' you (or the other mary) soon. find me on the net searching for my name and have fun. all the best

> She wrote: Meanwhile, since you are Dutch, please tell me about the Netherlands, especially anything to do with ideas on everyone getting basic income,relations with the European Union, tax system and moves for reform, etc.--and anything else you think of interest.

Dear Mary, thanks for your warm and speeedy reproply. I am afraid I can't be the best source possible for you on the above subjects, since I have had such an aversion for (dismal results of) the kiltower Dutch seem bound to intensify till hell freezes over (though it will rain a good deal more here than it should) in places visited by (patriarchal aspects of) Dutch cultivation that I ran away and have only now turned my thoughts to settling somewhere (Holland, Denmark, Germany, England are candidates) recently. I promise I'll hunt up some sources but I can tell you that I don't know of any off hand....Aktie strohalm is an activist organization I dabbled with a few years ago, leaving an 'aktentas' (=documentcase) about lmp material with them but they lagged a few steps behind and didn't want to skip a step just to keep up with me so they are still digging Gesellian dogma, pretty much a dead horse, even in Germany. Aktie strohalm (main office in Utrecht along with other cool orgo'z in one building, organic store 5 doors away, right downtown) is a good place to start for you though, they may have a lot of appropriate english language material for you and a web site to boot, hang on I'll check......1.8 minutes later: www.intouch.nl/strohalm/stroe.htm is a site they wanna upgrade to include another 4 lingo version, S, F, G, E by the end of july, they were very helpful if not leading in the popularization of the ecotax concepts.

> Also if you are familiar with Amsterdam, do you know of any place that might take someone for three or four nights in return for future return visit in the US?

Somewhere in june I wrote her: I live in a squat which was given 3 months hassle free living by the judge last friday, this guy even has a good name in the biggest alternative paper in Amsterdam: De Groene Amsterdammer. 6000 square meters of space, 5 floors, mostly empty waiting for people to turn this into a cultural value so the city will buy it from the speculators who have with our case been shown that although fresh ownership can be proved, keeping or having a building as big as this empty for three years (and planning on longer to hike up the rentprices after the next big infrastructure installment completion) is totally in tune with the stockpiling order of the day but...... I nevertheless expect they will have a remodelling permit by the end of this 'grace' period and we will have nothing to show for ourselves but some big rave parties (I hate those myself, they remind me so much of the argument I heard at st John's college, NM about the Descartian boom boom iterating identity monotony of dry logic stincks...) You are certainly welcome and 50 of your friends. An interesting sort of social situation will be but a few city boroughs away: a majority of Maroccans whose kids are neither at home and peaceful with their islamic parents nor on the for them poorly infrastructured streets and they become more and more violent as time passes. Poor refugees are treated like political prosiners and not given any even temporary recycling opportunities. As in France and as far away as Australia, though subjects and objects as well as orientations seem to reverse since there the issue is directed at natives, they (my mother for instance and (other) Dutch opinionmakers (just kidding, she is a very witdrawn woman), even a very respected one, though near his dotage now) accuse immigrants of being parasitic. People like my father hated the idealism and emerging environmental conscience of the following generation and scolded 'm for being too lazy to work, completely discounting, denouncing and ignoring our desperate efforts to adjust and add to the foci, issues and ranges of concern, causing them to import the cheap labour for stopgap purposes instead of investing in cleaner technologies if not products.

> An author, Theresa Funiciello, who wrote a terrific book, >THE TYRANNY OF KINDNESS, is going to the BIEN conference with me and hasn't yet found a (cheap enough) place to stay. I picked out of a guide book the Old Nickel Hotel for me. I liked the name.

>> We deeply apologise for not having this side-site on air, we're working on it, please check again end july. Thanks for being patient."---------

I did warn you about the above sequence of events if you tried before the time specified. you may have been victimized by the 'voorlopigheidsfactor'= the preliminary disease, so rampant on the net and in circles like permaculture, who's premises will work not until and only once the ideal density is attained... .Meanwhile speculation seems an indication of impatience. Re: trying to find the contact e mail on a site: remove segments (/..../) from the adress in your location bar (place cursor at the end of it and use your backspace key up to the foregoing / then press enter you would have found the following without even having to scroll down: info@strohalm at: intouch.nl/strohalm/ which automatically adds: index.html to the adress). Make sure you ask some specific questions when you write, Henk is the main figurehead there, he may know me by nickname by now but he may not. I'll try to get'm to link to me in a minute. --------- "If you kept your sentences shorter I could understand your English better, I think.------ piet: I am trying to teach people deeper breathing and deeper thinking mary. /piet --------- I'm gathering that you are a 40 year-old Amsterdam hippie poet living in a squatters' building, no address given" ---------- are you in a hurry? I don't know that you are interested yet do I? anyway, it is vlaardingse laan 11, right on the edge of urban, industrial and parklike surroundings and filling up fast with people noise, clouds of smoke, boring bassline booms and other more which might chase me out of there in a hurry but I am in charge of the so far non existent library, reluctant to risk my own collection to being ignored or worse, with the invitation to move there. I tried to talk the Godfather, grand alpha leader of ours (Postscript: concerning the contrast between savage and civilized (imperial) society I read an enlightening essay by alphonso Lingis in an otherwise worthless (even the best dust needs water to grow out of itself)compilation about Deleuze) into letting a friend of mine, who I suspect to be your age, move in, yesterday. There, I did a period especially to honour your requests and heed your objections, aint I nice? This older man travelled and lived in the states, was inspired by Bucky fuller and is building domes eversince. His last two ones burnt down and since he is right next to the freeway *(even closer than we are, out in the weather and on a steep slope behind another large squat which you reach following a lake side. i am being hard to follow again aint I? Well I'll be a tough act to follow in more than one sense I'm glad and afraid in different respects)*I thought he would be better off under our building (room for 20 of his domes). But the godfather sounded biased about him. In other words it is not up to me to say who gets in though I can guarantee some short term comfort. http://members.tripod.com/~poetpiet

> "You sound in a rebellious mode with the luxury of not having to focus your rebellion --because you are a poet --with a basic income?" -----

Good guessing, my mothers 'voorspraak' = pleading with dad was successful and I travelled drawing on my own bank account frugally for decades now. -----

> "Which is to say, I don't know what you want. Ideas are one's lifeblood, but have to be expressed very clearly, not just poetically for most readers interested in bringing something better into existence. Again, for your freer style try Rainbower (male) Sanity Clause <sanity@primary.net>" -------

I did look at his homepage already. He is tangled up in legalistics as far as I gather from a glance and I don't see why I remind you of him (with the exception of the cute quip of a name, but woman's ways are mysterious I grant you). ---------- "If your invitation is a "getting to know girls" operation, I'm also the wrong age." ---------- I did suspect you might be a ripe young age and I got to know many more girls than I ever knew what to do with so far though Holland always gave me a break between travels, not very many Rainbow type loose girls suiting my tastes here and now I have become to old and ugly anyway, marriage won't do for me unless it includes a community (land, trees, people).... my curiousity concerns your mind and I would have given you an adress to send the kindly offered work but would like to know how I may pay you for it first .... all the best to you (and yours?) --- PS is that conference in A'dam, and if so when? --------- she wrote: "an interesting glimpse of a (squatter?) society".. ------ First time I actually join one except for sporadic overnights and visits in the past. Their black and begrimed, dreadlock style due to lack of running water or lazyness concerning it in run down vacant buildings might set dresscode trends for and thus tokentickle inspire mainstream youth, it never has me (what with all their abominable interpretation and featuring of such beautiful terms as: autonomy) and I find the whole squatting movement needlessly violent and reactionary; the ban of the german magazine 'radikal' wasn't so unjustified I thought.

I have meanwhile been thrown out due to lack of participation, what with me going to the University Computer Center 5-6 days a week to serve my elusively global (need I say timeless?) fellow man and not coming through on my quasi promise to go collect and display my 90 boxes of books there, ...yes well that elusive fellow man I was voted out on 4 counts for and 6 against me with maybe 20 abstentions, so I guess I will blend in with the amorphous couldn't care less either way crowd possesed of that typically Dutch sentiment .... that elusive pupil of mine, I mean those fructified by these here scribbled 'geesteskinderen', they are slowly precipitating and crystalizing, much slower than this work will it seems at now foreseeable rates. Well I will go unprotestingly though the vast majority of the in or out voters abstained and so couldn't care less either way.

The ayahuasca ritual people who perform here retching and singing away (a good money spinner for the house besides the smallish house parties) do so clad in white by the way, somewhat reminiscent of a Northern Italian esoteric community with all their bent copper wire talismen and trinkets hanging everywhere; you may have heard about their digging 12!!!!!!! stories down under their property to install bejeweled temple spaces. When I was there 5-6 years ago, I saw a whole pile of beautiful green shimmering rockdust, probably olivine, and told them to get a hold of it (since they looked at me askance and disowned it outright) spread it on their farm grounds and see the grass grow. They looked at me even more suspiciously when I went back there a few years later now I know why, they were keeping their digs secret at the time.. Besides the pile of dust a girl had smitten me quite as hard though differently....she was a vestal virgin there that second time around.

> "You don't have to pay me for anything I send (there's not that much to send) but while on hold you might ....."

80 boxes of books, modeling supplies: sticks and stakes, bedsheets and paints are hiding behind a curtain. (What means your son with 'exploratory...' pray tell?) --- "..... put down in clear language (which can still be deep thinking) ....." ------ don't forget deep breathing and tone variation inducing bylines ---- "…. what being on basic income has meant to you, ----------- sorry, good question to a wrong guy, I was spared the alienating indignity of receiving from an invisible grandfather's stately hand the necessities for sustenance. Bit of a loaded sentence again but I can't help it. Just kidding. I do have to correct it though: my impression from those who do draw on it habitually, compulsively and repetitively is alienation, which of course results from ingratitude (bottomline wise anyway) as you seem to intuit further down. As far as I am concerned, my sugar daddy was not ever any state and always in a state of inalienable bloodrelation: my father; what from my father's giving perspective was and is an alienation of his life blood and effort seems more like a homeward bounding for me (I have my doubt about the merits and redeemability of money made on speculation, then turned out to pursue 'philantrophy, seems a matter of vulgar moneylaundring to me); I saw overgrazing and mainly meaty diets as problems I was privileged to correct even though expected to gratefully aid, abet and further this source of income for the male side of my family, from grampa on up, dad imported pampas meat and sluiced it into greece for a while, as an example. A shizo rift? Yes, dad has a few fractures too but I won't get into that.

I'll even start over... or deviate rather, to explain my resonance from however far off, with the 'nozems', 'provos' and 'kabouters': My dad had seen fit to be confident enough about leading me through adolescence and he was intolerant as to others their input in the matter anyway, besides, he could afford it; I admired the hell out of him in his mercedeses, for his motorcycle stories about calves in the sidecar to market on icey roads every body else got stuck on. Our difference were more and more insurmountable though, and still are, I can't dream of going to his house and telling him I will move my books and things into this squat for a few months at least.

I therefore am (in retrospect) proud of, if not so much bycause I made a conscious effort and succeeded in, spending more or less what an 'uitkering'=turnout would amount to: roughly 20.000 guilders a year of his money, certainly bycause I proved everybody could have done what I did, it wasn't bycause I was from a well off family with more to spend. It had, however, a lot to do with my motivation and sunny outlook (not to mention mobility, I don't think welfare for tramps was already available at the time), after all a potential financier makes one look harder, but he was as hard to please as any large scale investor; small enterprises with tiny returns never made the mark, not that I proposed all that many. I remember threatening to round up some vegatarian scientists who could present the sums so popular amongst them: 10 kilo of roughage necessary to produce 1 pound of meat, overgrazing stats, etc Spending little is now easier than ever, since I don't a car as I have done for 5 years straight now, and have stopped flying far on roundtrips with a year's validity. For some reason I have been addicted to the unfetteredness of minimum paper work enough that I left it this way instead of for instance going for the (I imagine) more cumbersome process of getting welfare, even though it would be easy to justify it by saying that my dad gave 70 cents of every dollar he earned to the taxman, so I can claim some back in his name, neither has he ever suggested this to me, though one of his biggest worries is the fact that since I am not and have not been employed in Holland for a long long time (nor any where else much for that matter and certainly not officially, I think the last time I payed taxes was 10 years ago in colorado, suoveling snow).

I just put some parts together in a social workshop and now have the type folding bicycle one may put on trains for free at the cost of 135, the equivalent in a store would have been 3-4 times as much and deprived me of 2 days joyful enough puzzling to recycle some stuff. All refugees now treated as prisoners here before being 'allowed' and forced to go elsewhere could start with this sort of work, one need never buy clothes in A'dam, neat things are thrown in the trash daily in different parts of town. A bicycle repair man was stabbed to death for not helping mount a tire bought from him earlier fast enough after the costumer had given up trying himself. I bet my bottom dollar this was a muslim import Dutchman. I think the death penalty for a case like this would not be amiss. .

> ....what your parents' attitude is about that, and what yours is about the idea of basic income for everyone. -----

My parents, selfmade people, closest thing Holland has to offer in the way of Americanlike workaholism, yet on the other hand, frugal to the hilt, resent the foreigners coming to 'take advantage' of our welfare and as I hinted before manage to muster very little respect or understanding for what I try to do, for them only tangible results count for anything at all. My thoughts on the matter amalgamate and side with Henry George type trusts, Theodor Hertzka type open co-ops much refined by an even more obscure admirer of his: U v Beckerath (the big reason for my trip to Australia with all those queer (old growth and indigenes) spin offs) and even Silvio Gesell's matriarchal ideas (I have just come across another albeit very much frowned on 'authority' on matriarchal episodes in history: the ora linda bok, a supposedly Frisian history with many usurpy and imperialistic revisionings) : common ownership of land, female trustees and basics in kind, not specie, I would add. Birthrights, -duties (and pleasures) having a lot to do with perma- + horticulture besides pleaching trees......What I have seen (aroundme) as much as felt (within me) is a lack of initiative; it has as many mental as physical causes: partly due to feeling misunderstood and alienated (in my case even from most of my own family, the nice part of which was subordinated to the nasty bits in my eyes; my uncle whose pet name for me was pluis [[=fluff]], so much kinder than luis [[=louse]] the scoldname my dad used whenever he deviated from jongen [[=boy]]) partly bycause numbed and dumbed down complacency results from the Dutch tendency to pamper excessively; bourgeous bias conserving class consciousness culminates in searches for stronger sedatives and distorters in both camps, suprisingly enough, usually started in seemingly innocent enough ways: with large doses of dairy, as much to tie one over as causing the dead times between side shows. And the dead times can be very dead when a man who marries the kind of cute little lady that might well have not made it through the war bycause of her prosecution prone features, makes a pact with her to avoid the kind of stuff that evoked war starting resentments many times already and yet once again under their very eyes: intellectualism, and consequently keeps his own respect and despite everything doggedly loyal son away from all but curricular books and the Bible. Partly bycause I have these tendencies inherently: reluctance about putting up a fight, weakwilled give in and sellout to disillusion, in me, I infallibly ferret 'm out in others. This has blinded me for and dissociated me from all the straight christian plodding conformers; A'dam is traditionally famous for the largest amount of dissenters and idealists, such professional jobless and hopeless cases like myself as well as for the strictest and most jovial teamsport practices; artists, schizo's, musicians amd such galore...but the dangerous scattering effect of drugs, even the indulgence in tobacco is sufficient to take the wind out of the alternative's sails. I felt much like an American here (even before I ever went there) and a Dutch man in the US, (have you checked my priority file yet?)

> Would everyone [and did you?]lose a sense of direction? ------

2 answers: 1: to blast through strict and repressive raising methods rooted in the authoritarian (perhaps not as bad as Wilhelmian, see Theleweit) ways of colonial 'discipline' many alternativos reach for the horse cure: lsd and strong cannabis; unfortunately the doors to perception all to often turn into the doors of perception, a windy rev which sets the doors revolving at speeds which dry and burn up the lubes and pop the tubes that would have really mattered had they been used less reactionarily and more respectfully. 2: my mother says I did; but I took the eclection direction (find the bits about traffic gender change) ec ec, oak oak eek eek.....oc oc (see John Philip Cohane: the key, a book about semitic echo's around the world) what do you think a colonial imperium, where crazes like the tulip mania covered for the biggest arm exporting of the age, and its reserve army wood be-am up to?

> or at least of reciprocity, of giving back to the community [or your parents?] or the larger society,

As I hinted above, once 70 cents in the dollar goes to the state and the portion there of which is directed to the rising quantities of indolent dirty work shirkers, 'nozems' en 'kabouters',(the 'guestworkers'=immigrants came and did it cause we pulled up our noses for what we felt was 'mopping with the tap open' a structurally unsound situation stretched beyond sustainability for short term's profit sake) a no matter how misdirected kind of hard worker will resent state intervention and understandably so; perhaps a speculator who earns his income no sweat the taxman is less of a threat. I find the native american, aboriginal, indigene celtic, etc, abuse of alcohol just as understandable though, I mean Tolkien, Beatrix, Rachel Carson, etc give one a bit of a backdrop for cross referencing latice and lace on that. ..My way of showing gratitude to those countless ride, shelter, meal and companionship offering wayfarers and society at large is my homepage...and whatever comes of it..

> good things needed perhaps in return for good things received or just because you care? Or is pure playing around your thing? Or pure communicating? That's reciprocity anyway. So is recycling, and not owning a car. -------

I answered these questions above or somewhere on my homepage sufficiently for now.

> ["The earth is slowly dying, and the inconceivable --the end of life itself-- is actually becoming conceivable" Queen Beatrix of the >Netherlands in her 1988 Christmas message] -------

You may see the appendix concerning madonna on my homepage for some reflections on bees and queens.

> Anyway, if you're so inclined, compose a couple of paragraphs and if I can use them your viewpoint may reach the halls of Holland's academia? ---------

I still don't know what 's up. Are you coming to teach at the UVA? And now the e-mail blackout for July begins. Happy Julybee, Jubilee. PS: one general observation to leave you with: surely a basic income is conducive to lowering crime rates and if it includes ownership and authority over basics with plentiful education, what could go wrong? Well...everything cause displacing populations is still the order of the day and traditions are wiped out before they even start, not that we can hope to improve on all those now ailing and suffering ones. with respect Piet

> A friend of mine wants to talk to really poor people when we are in Amsterdam. Just for a day, say Sunday Sept 12 when people are at home. Could you make that possible and interpret? Would that be interesting for you? ----

hi, mary,.....so you are coming to A'dam after all, you had me doubting (and hoping..don't forget to bring an extra copy of your writs and whatever else you feel I will like and can carry). I just got back from my Natty trust gathering adventure in Southern England. Sure, I can commit to meeting you and becoming helpful; I can give you a choice from the spectrum of poverties: ::::: 1]: refugees and asylumseekers, 2]: gypsies (most of 'm have been given respectably spaces and stay put now) ::::: 3]: homeless who have it together enough to go to the town hall and/or social service bureau to collect a check regularly; ::::: 4]: a rare few refusing even that impersonal aid bottom line I am personally acquainted with a lady who has an aversion to handling money and she literally scrounges everything from food to firewood, living in a drafty slap together made of railroad ties and tarps which sits in the harbour area where she used to rent a hall and run a shelter for the marginal and ill adjusted. ::::: 5]: Or I could go to the Amsterdam info counter in the picturesquely renewed opera and city hall services complex (next to the cheap goods outdoor market called the waterloo plein, which in turn is) next to a street with the most interesting bookstore in A dam (radical and socialist bodies of *thought in pamphlets, books and mags; new and second hand)*and ask where they think the poorest neighbourhoods are (surveys for all of holland were in the papers recently, come to think of it). As I may have mentioned before, I am trying to pull away from city dust and fume, even the park is suffering from the unrefreshing raisings of the former due to its very popularity: people kick a ball around till all worms roots and blades have disappeared and been displaced by bald spots! I intend to look around for a place to plant some heirloom standard varieties of apples but I like to make a point of being helpfull to you all. The theme is alive and well in this uppity pace picking country; just last night there was a docu on tv showing the lives of 3 sets of people, one of which comprised a loner and some of his very remote neighbours, he lives on social support in the northernmost house of Holland, right under a powerline which speeds 38 000 volts along its circuit, and him using a petroleum aggregate for his 12 volt batteries; the second set were an expatriating family getting installed in Ireland for sake of an easier pace, room to breath, time to consider, etc; a third showed a corporate go getter, quite a remarkable appearance with white hair and black eyebrows who dropped white collar work to walk all the way to santiago (around the time I went there myself, but not on foot) and back, starting a new career in collecting and shipping old clothes to the third world. et me know more... I can probably arrange accomodation (free or on me) in the big squat I told you about..... care to try out cycling around? all the best from the man beyond most present pales: piet PS sorry this is a little late, you wrote me just as I braved the English traffic on my bicycle (a foolish feat) Piet-

Well, they were here alright, for the UVA conference (7th annual) on basic income, and I accompanied Theresa, author of the fiery: Tyranny of kindness, to a home where mothers who had lost custody somehow, could visit their newborns; we walked into the lobby as casual as possible, acting like we belonged there and struck up conversation around a lounge table; 5 minutes into an interview for which I was not needed to interpret (pfjou), a superior came to the call of the door receptionist who had, after her curiosity was satisfied, probably become anxious about consequences from shirking the call of duty to filter out people without appointments, and so she issued a warning. This person came, nerves already frazzled and insisted not only I but Theresa come to her office as well; we stayed just long enough to tell her and a collegue that we like our sources to be the bases, not the bosses before running off to a waiting room of the GG and GD, which turned out to be deserted that morning.

Mary Lehmann's paper, given at the conference will be retrievable from the net very soon if not already......well worth it. Despite my hopes and hints, she had neglected to bring some of her older writings, unfortunately, and was quite critical of mine.

letter to Schmookler: (author of 'parable of the tribes' and columnist in big mags (all on the net)) this is regarding my homepage about solutions changing uncivilly polarizing mechanisms such as secretive centralizations; wether in the form of impervious rock or perverse pentagon. First of all I like to thank you for being a living and contemporary person struggling with issues my kind a way (kind of). Comprehensive (multiple subjectivity harmonizing) grappling such as I try (could do with a lot more hypering) and sites like tao.ca, are rare enough still to ignore 'm though they deserve pioneer status. check out the site at leisure, members.tripod.com/~poetpiet/ see file names in the attachment (don't mina mistakes please, crutchety Dutch goes with flower putch)

regarding your dance of polarization article: where you mention comprehensive I have some corrections to suggest: 1st of all lowest common denominators are 'not only just' instead of 'not just' but there is also no question of need nor one of necessity to compromise since in mineral powders as lcd we have the stuff that is and hits rockbottom in commonality which makes it the highest at the same time (check out the analogies to economic history and thought to see my point). Ain't dat xacly wadyar lookin for, schmookey?

to ghost wolf at wolflodge.org: Hi, I like your site (wolflodge.org; aurauranet, appraising a very special dust derived from steelbrushing as opposed to crushing, good bundle of sweeprodily musical fun it sounds like, eh?) at first sight, I hope you shall like mine equally well, especially since it is out of your league, no competition at all but perhaps something to strive for; insular non commerciality; gold ain't better than iron, and most dusts are just perfect for where they are; however, should it turn out we can complement each other. You with your rare, precious and scarce product trying to help the world like I am in a local and radial sort of way can perhaps bundle forces as the dutch say; broadcast yours homeopathically and 'mine' lavishly or something; what do you think? come see my place some day soon:

recent correspondence,

In most of the correspondence and list post files I added pertinent fractions of the reponses and dialogue in the appropriate places so chrono and resonance timing trade tidbits for easier comprehension, expediency and to prevent repetitions.

Many of these entries begin with the colour white wherein I denote the dates, subjects, adressees and characterizations if and when provided.

Most of this got written straight off the cuff and must (therefore) be easier to follow than the ornament*(at)*ed, longer and longer winding, more and more winding, multiply in-, con- and evoluted material elsewhere at this site.

As one approaches ones own terminfinpersonal deadline it's only natural to get pushed for time hope you like my kind of time lushing mime.

To James Demeo: Hi, I stumbled across your work in Dan Winters house a few years ago. I was in Australia for 10 months recently and wherever I went clouds and rain came along or soon after. I`d like to go help out in Indonesia but you guys are probably way ahead of me. Let me know to make sure. My thing is Callahan type work. Any vacancies there? or know of any here in Europe, I am in A`dam

> No work in Indonesia, nor any plans. Takes a millionaire or foundation-grant to plunk down the necessary cash to undertake these kinds of expeditions. It would work, probably, but the leaders of the SE Asian nations are too busy playing golf to be concerned.

About my efforts to make my private library public: The recent floodings thereabouts have me worried enough; all my books soggy is not a pleasant prospect but with all the still increasing fire fiendishness of humanity worldwide, there will be no imminent reversal of increasing evaporations and precipitations, with Bangla Desh and Holland being likely candidates for increasing damage from such polarizations, alas. This addition went to the David Hudson of Rewired (or was it hotwired threads) a frequent contributor in Berlin Dear Nethead, bitwit or whatever I may get your attention with.

I have little hope it will help but the odds are better than usual so here goes: please look at the file called value standards and weather stability at my site (poetpiet) and please go check www2.free.de/GELD too. (seems to work without the 2 in the adress as well) ...... This is how I worded the offering of me and my library This batch goes to the following places, ... @dresses omitted .... a batch of E-adresses gleaned from the new Eurotopia guide, a book in German, listing all of 300+ projects throughout Europe with a degree of openness to that part of the general public willing to comply with their specs while visiting or 'prospecting'. being likely to 1) have (a) room (gypsywagon, dome, treehouse, anything) for, 2) want to accomodate 3) know how to appreciate 4) can make good use of my book collection, preferably as a whole (70 fruitboxes full of 'm; on the topics found at my sit (see below) and including everything referred to there). I am willing to pay a small sum of money as rent/maintenance opportunity/price.

A letter to Roy Davies, the man who unhesitantly reciprocated my link to his site as a first for me (still no more than 2 in total as far as I know): hi, I admire your homepage much but I urge you to add the crowning glory and the more effort you put into it the better and more rewarding it will be. I am thinking of at least adding www2.free.de/geld to your link list. it deserves to be there cause it links to many English language sites though most of the material on the site is in German. The particular flavor of reform advocated there is an amalgam of the best alternative economies have and have had to offer with solid ties to the co-operative and nature mimicking roots of capitalism. In my opinion Ulrich von Beckerath is the most lucid writer on politics written big. The custodians of his work are either too bitter, dogged uninterested or otherwise engaged to try *(p)*revive interest in it. His correspondence, somewhat repetitive but amounting to thousands and thousands of pages, lovingly transcribed where necessary and reproduced onto microfiche by John Zube (Libertarian Microfiche Publishing).

I went to try and help him in Australia but fell through the preliminary prospective period due to hesitancy about putting my money where my mouth was, although I had never envisioned a full blown do it myself project to follow up on John's (Joern) carreer choices anyway, besides that I delivered sloppy work compared to his decades of experience of course and we had different ideas about resource and platform choice and use, not to mention the not merely logistic differences concerning aborigines (he was on duty during one of the infamously numerous deaths in custody, and his stance in (dis)respect to native issues is pure and modernly catch as catch can capitalistic favoring quickness, clout and opportunity maintaining that we have equal rights there even though we arrived a little later). SWell OK John, everybody a winner but somebody needs to do better than me soon and make sure all relevant Beckerath material gets translated and published!!!!!!!! Please feel free to help or better yet: take the lead. Despite repeated pleas John refused to hand me the already digitized Beckerath material but I'll scan and upload some soon PS: I seem to get awfully little response to my page so far, but it has only been up a month and a bit. I send a lot of undeliverable invitations to people who do still have a page up (tribalroutes in ireland for instance, should I try to send invites to these folks more than once? Is that sound general E mail policy?) PS2: the relevant chapter (about Beckerath et al) is called value standards and weather stability. One way of getting there is to scroll or page down from the top of my index page to where the links are, click the one that says pronoia.

A rage at some chainletter senders: who were hoping to net some Windows product for free or something: sunshine falls on dry, hard ground more and more, hardening hearts, polarizing weather and spheres of endeavour pulling up or precious precipitation through shoot, trunks and branch from earth's tiring round how much longer till you find it's well worth while helping me do the grind. you guys are all nuts and so symptomatically diabolic, representing giga-, peta- and googlebites feverishly fumble-fibring around looking for that lucky thing which is always at a large number of fellow being's expense since no collective effort at provisioning is made. Hyrarchic enchainment of symbolic surplus must feed ouroborically on- and into the lowly beginnings of accumulation. I hate these dreadful shortcuts, yells, slogans and single syllable sacrifical solutions feigning enthusiasm. Just like a guy called Gates to stoop to studying chain letter stats so he can stamp his name on more screens full of empty promises....try mine: http://members.tripod.com/~poetpiet and /commendablinklist.htm Where did you get the idea to get me involved in this anyway pray tell? What a night mare to tolerate a thousand such contentless but ever growing messages just cause you hope to share a low sentiment with everybody, perhaps it reminds yall of the swelling and sweltering human population explosion around us. What about other beings?????????????

Letter to my server (tripod): hi folks, I struck up a conversation with someone who has become a podner neato huh? anyway my screen glazed glance chanced across nedstat and i bin tryin to get it in (time to relieve the spoofy remark on stats in my foreword) but since I use netscape composer to build my pages and your edit function at my housekeeper shows blank untill I click edit page in my composer which gives me a funny housekeeper shell. Should I go ahead and paste it in there? I doubt it and don't know any other options yet PS: I am real excited about putting nedstat in although it is but a small step toward making a fist with paralell and synced themes which roll across fire lines without the necessary allignment to make all these little ones look, let alone act coherently and at one enough to match, meet and master the more unconscionably consolidated bullies which need putting in their place........No answer so far but the stat insert was very easy really....

This is an older letter I never sent, I wrote it after reading about the flame king in Wired magazine: dear flameking, although I have kept up with G Gilder's raving maniac blo-, flo and gloating over the upping rates of fi*(b)*re power (see the appendix for more of my views on that), I don't know if you are (and if so, how you can justify) clogging up the net. I am a craftsman, not a daft draftsman and I must say I understand your customers lots better than I do you, I'd like to be one with minor reservations; to get somewhere first is the flipside of being everywhere and nobody has, holds or hopes for coins with a backside missing. The subject of my 687 K (word 4.?) manuscript is an interdisciplinary mix of 'ECOsmologynomy' with a bit of everything thrown in connected by the key: mobilizing volition. If you compile the relevant targetlists (unless you just adress everyone all the time) and shoot my barkable bites around I shall pay you and here comes the clincher: at a rate of a penny per response, I mean a dollar per hundred up till, and in sum not exceeding, your regular fee. Now, isn't this an offer to learn more about efficiency? A better one still would be to pay a fee for the queues you are causing, or start a relevance award foundation. I know much, if not more and more of most sunlight hits the earth without turning water and rock into biomass but if your work is a mere re*(fl)action of that so far, it may as well get its tide turned if this hits the spot on fi(b)*ring fun.

../guest_appearances/intro_to_currency_issues.htm .... . /guest_appearances/50s_Beckerath.htm

Hi valis, in case you were wondering what I was up to. Not that in ain't obvious judging from the frequent changes to my page. .. ..oh I forgot, you haven't had a mother who could be seen to putter around in the garden and wear lividly flaming dresses there, shunning parties, etc. Ah sad. Anyway, I don't seem to change much ! with ! it though, or I take that back but I sure have no control ...yet..... I even got censored from the mutual money gang thang at transaction.net, an incredible infrastructure; capable of handling as much as csf I am sure but few people found their way to it so far or they don't like to be the king of the empty 6 lane freeway..it's no fun anyway being patrolled so severely already. Reminds me of a ticket I got once for swerving on a totally empty freeway. I ran up thousands and have stayed away to let the statue of limitations take its course. 7 years right?

You guys are so well meaning yet illiterate on the issue of monies that I despair. Where is that pertinax Beckerath was waxing gospelly about I wonder with him and despair. That last bit in full force if/when it should turn out after chrismas or so, that nobody seems to mind/have time for/not pull up their nose at my nondistortant rendering of one of WB Greene's biggest and most capable inspirees: Ulrich von Beckerath. Am I gonna be censored from this lumpy clot again for posting a huge resource? I'll damn well try and see: http://members.tripod.com/~poetpiet/guest_appearances/intro_to_currency issues.htm I especially appeal to the tlaloc man to come have a cup of coffee with me or something since I operate out of A'dam also. I had directed you to The Chaos People in Santa Fe in roughly the same spirit as I'd put a troublesome child aboard a bus with a box lunch and careful instructions to the driver. Watching the bus depart I said to myself "Well, that's that, hopefully." I took a look at transaction.net and bookmarked it, so I do have to give you credit (!) for that; otherwise, you're just that deranged bumble bee buzzing around my head again, Piet. If I were passing through Holland I would most certainly look you up, but I don't see what's to be gained by either of us or The Future through this kind of cyber-nattering. If only you could clearly say in a paragraph or two just what you're up to, or even what you'd _like to be_ up to. Unfortunately my brain has solidly associated you with chaotic perception/expression, and I can't change its mind. Have you ever considered that this is not your real cosmic calling? When a person undertakes so much well-meant effort and is still ignored and by-passed like a particularly noxious "street person" (which concept I personally don't recognize, incidentally), it may be time to re-think your relation to the human condition. > Nic's journey: A year ago I was diving in the sea. I found the most perfect pearl, and bought it back to a perfect stretch of sand. I walked along that stretch of sand and nutured it. Everyday I tendered to it and kept it safe in my heart. I washed its tears with the salt of the sea and threw it up high >when it needed to fly. Now I realise that perfect pearl was actually a cold hard rock, at the mercy of the tide of the wave. It came into my existence, only because I made it feel like a pearl. I think my energy clouded its true form. As I reflect back on my journey, I feel cloaked by a mask of deceit, I am saddened by the loss of perfection, or so it seemed . . but at the same time rejoice in the light that tomorrow holds the truth. Friend, I lost love recently, only I now know it wasn't. He who lies, cheats and is deceitful surely cannot comprehend what love is, let alone bring it into his reality. He who swears on the soul of his mother, his love for me, the universe and the beauty in nature to be truthful and lies the very next moment, will never recieve that beautiful gift. >I have learnt that the world brings things for a reason, and I was given >a man who helped me to learn that truth is great and might above all things. I'm not sure I understand the foregoing passage, starting from that comma after capacity......if you have a moment.... I am having troubles of my own with Africa..I mean a (black) man I met years ago here in A'dam... we, and a few others zoomed in on the only free internet connections in town. After a few months I spoke to him, but he was a bit cagey.

When I found out he knew George Gilder I tried harder and got a confession from him. He had removed, yes ripped out and absconded exactly those articles forthcoming in a quarterly supplement to Forbes Mag (you know, that richy rag) written by that man GG, so hated by feminists since he says women have to look after men and help 'm not to fly off the handle or congregate in too high numbers (as if they were allowed any say in matters of armies and sailors, etc), arguing that nobody would miss them anyway. I don't think I can blame ignorance about infotec logistics entirely on this nor do I know if he ripped off other stuff but.... The pure screaming irony of it!!!!!! Here I was, right while the girl I got pregnant had her babypapy and me painstakingly trying to fish some words from the halting and starting net, and there he was, stating what was too me obvious too but in a reversed cause and effect enchaintrainment, iow, tying the most condemning others/flatteringly selfish conclusion to it and acting upon them. :: :: :: Praps he does me the valuable service of holding up a mirror though. I mean, if one were to try defend him somehow, one might say that he hems, haws and scoffs cause I do so too, even started it perhaps and he is returning the disfavor. but why do I have the feeling he reacts to me and focuses on me a lot more than he admits (possibly even to himself?) I give vent to concepts and things I register from the screen and he expresses displeasure particularly whenever I show enjoyment of something. Many times I felt he was a parasite and leech waiting for me to sacrifice something really big instead of just dropping hints that didn't cost me arms and legs; all those things all whites owe all blacks...you probably know the explicable sentiment. All of which makes me suspect he feels I deserve not to be entertained or comforted. Did I start that as well? I once told him that if he hated whites so much that he lost all ability to be grateful and to co-operate he ought to go to SA and kick some white ass there. I saw a touching movie on that sort of thing during that time. Who is out of control here? I used to enjoy a bit of mumbling to myself and people were either absorbed in their own work or I was alone so no problem. Now this boogyman sits next to me day after day even after it has become clear we hate each other's guts. He thinks Holland has a lot to account for and yes I know that but he is very good at playing the meanest white man's games too. Anyway, I passed up the history which it is prhaps well to try get some perspective on though I don't think he would have anything sensible to say in response if I showed him this and so I won't. Oftentimes I tried to turn him on to things, like a large linklist about black struggles in the States but his way of cutting off and away is 'stuitend'=shocking. Again though, that gives me food for ambivalent feelings cause I have cut him off wishing to get on with my work and probably showing disapproval of the subject matter. He is crazy about reading up on the very powerfull like those in the new Euro-central bank and such... :: :: :: :: :: The events described above should have warned me more than it did. But you know how it goes. About a year and a half later I felt sorry for the guy sweating like a pig in the park, doing his macho thing of staying in shape (never mind his incredibly rough throat and obviously impaired lung/kidney axis) and pointed him toward the squat I was living in for a grand total of 6 weeks (after which the godpapa/initiator voted me out of the place, well, 6 for, 4 against and 27 abstainees means most couldn't care less right?) where he soon became my neighbour and even defended my rights to throw a countryman of his, a white middle aged potsmoker, out the window, well, threatening to anyway cause he said he'd throw my contribution to dinner out there (yellow peppers, not good enough for him and he was boss in the kitchen that day) I soon left the building but was soon confronted with the presence of this Don Lucky (is his name) fella again, due to nobody's fault but my own. I should have thought twice cause I knew the man was a very macho maniacal person by then but I had hopes yet. He, however was not ready for a humble grateful pupil position and pretended he owed me nothing. All of which after weeks with outbursts here and there (me threatening to push his head through a monitor a few weeks ago since he did his: "I'm important, got no time for you" thing (is he merely returning a disfavor?) again when all I wanted was switch machines since mine lost its internet connection; to my mail and page servers only initially and some days after that to all and any net sites, strangely enough; sometimes I think the good n black man has some inherited shamanic powers he hasn't had the education to work contructively with........last week he waved his big fingers very close to my nose threatening to make a fist with 'm and bash me face one). He keeps up such a macho thing it sickens me: abrupt moves, key punch intensity; dismissal of all and sundry when it is something I appreciate.....the closest thing I can remember in the way of him being slightly responsive is when I told him he would not get the true scoop from all the mainstream media he consults. I caught him looking at some 'subversive' stuff for a few hours the next day. In a way I feel he is quite torn, possibly even confused about sexual preferences. He is not the type of guy to attract women I believe, too brusque (is that the word?), doesn't seem to make any money (he was selling keychains) though he jokes about running after 'm sometimes but I 've caught him making strange involuntary swallowing moves when the subject of *(homo)*sexuality came up He said kiss my ass last friday. I said no thanks and should have added I don't think you would be able to reciprocate such a flavor satisfactory enough to stick my neck in to such depths. And that is what my weekend turned out to be about: reciprocity as scrutinized by some classic anthropologists: Sahlins, Mauss, Schneider (yes the dad of the girl/boy Schneiders; whether bro/sis or hubby/wify know not) and Herskovits. :: :: :: :: :: Anyway Don is paying me 'negative reciprocity' and if I can switch games on him say a week faster than he and manage to covertly hate him for one he will have to love me in return :) just in case you are starting to despair about my respect for the continent (and/or products thereof) you are going to honour with your passage I haste to completement my previous message with a quo*(pypa)*ste from within my own files; it is written by Ulrich von Beckerath in the thirties, hope you like it: I slipped pages 157, 158 and 159 out of part 4 to the Beckerath on Milhaud file :: in at this point which starts thus:

> A traditionless society, one which neither concerns itself consciously with past values nor thinks of bequeathing any to the coming generations, may freely dispense with a concrete standerd of value, such as gold. (In such societies, as on the Congo or in Greenland, long-term credit is unknown. Their religions also place the creation of the world in the immediate past and prophesy the and of the world for the immediate future.) It is also noteworthy how so many semi-cultivated or uncultivated, but not uncivilised, tribes, having no metallic currency, utilise in bartering the "Makuta standerd", a standard which is conceptually identical with our "index numbers standard". (Montesquieu's account of the Makuta standard in use among the negroes of the African coast must have been regarded as sensational in his day and has never ceased to be referred to) The index standard appears thus as a case of atavism rather than of real progress although the idee of an index standerd only developed among us in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, partly because of mathematical considerations. It may be, however, freely granted that works such as those of Irving Fisher. (The Purchasing Power of Money and The Making of Index Numbers) rank very highly, and have perhaps opened new horizons even to mathematicians. :: :: :: :: :: :: That the ancient Makuta standard, once probably world-wide in distribution, has reappeared in our time and is reaching the masses,— e.g-., through the Freeland Free Money Movement—is significant. One is tempted to suppose that it belongs to the order of ideas inherited from the far-off past, ideas which normally slumber in our sub-consciousness and do not dominate us but. which, in certain abnormal circumstances, re-emerge, and this not seldom, in the form of fixed ideas. Such an abnorhal 157 circumstance*(nowise only commercial, and very largely psychical, in nature)* is the complete disappearance of gold as a means of payment, whilst its stocks are greater than ever their were at any past epoch in history. :: :: :: :: That after some centuries, namely after science had provided it with stable weights, the metallic currency has allowed tnen to forget the concept of an abstract standard of value and even the terms espressing it in common speech, has been one of its disadvantages. It is therefore perhaps wholesome that mankind is again being led to reconceive that standard. For a long time now the weight unit of gold and silver have been implicitly also regarded as value units. It is as if the concept of a metre had been confused with the always inaccurate metre measures used in shops. However, that mistake was far less mischievous than the diametrically opposed one of the partisans of an index currency who believe that gold must cease to be the standard of value because gold coins, in their way, are not more accurate than the metre and litre measures in shops. Still, compared with the mistake of the indes currency extremists, who desire to embody their Makuta in a special paper money, partly with "depreciation",—that is, by the weekly affixing of stamps,— and partly without, the old mistake was very harmless. But the demand (frequently urged with almost religious fanaticism) that not only should all payments be effected with index money, but also credit transactions,—that is, the exchange of present values for future values,—ranks the new Makuta below the old. The supporters of the new Makuta suffer markedly in a comparison with the Madingo negroes and others, in that the latter were quite accustomed to separate the standerd of value from means of payment and in that among them the fullest freedom reigned as regards the means of payment to be used. Not even the worst negro despot who sold his subjects into slavery, would have dared to establish a monopoly in means of payment. And yet the demand for such a monopoly is specially characteristic of the index currency supporters of to-day. (Compare, e.g., the volume, Absatzstockung und Arbeitslosigkeit und Ihre Beseitigung [Sales Slump and Unemployment and their Removal] Berlin, 1927), where on p 22 we read: "The quantity of cash of giro accounts and of banknotes may only be produced by the currency office..." This volume is roughly the counterpart of Milhaud's volume on the subject. In brief and pregnant form it records the opinions of many modern anti-metallists, together with their pseudo-proofs, conveying thus a knowledge of the system and of the mentality of the partizans of indes money. :: :: :: :: :: Since the view is widely prevalent that the introduction of an index money would offer a practical solution of the means of payment problem and since this view already constitutes a 158 serious obstacle to an unprejudiced examinstion of the Milhaud proposals and will probably be increasingly that in the future, we may here employ against it the argumentum ad hominem: how old in reality the concept of a pure goods currency is and also how the mentality of men living in a barbaric society was actually able to produce it. :: :: :: :: Montesquieu's account in his Esprit des lois, book XXII, chapter 8, occupies only about ten lines. Meanwhile much fuller accounts have been published relating to the money of negro tribes, whence we learn that Montesquieu correctly reported the facts and did not deserve Galiani's and Jevons' strictures. That the name for the money among the Madingos means "slave" indicates its origin, but does not prove, as Galiani presumed, that the negroes did not possess an abstract standard of value. In South Africa—e. g., in Loango—the name of the money signified "piece of cotton"; yet the Loango negroes also counted in entirely abstract units. In the "Geschichte der merkwuerdigsten Reisen" (History of the Most Remarkable Voyages) (von Ehrmann, Frankfurt o/M. 1794, 13th volume, pp. 326-327) will be found a careful statement concerning the value in "pieces" of all kinds of goods. On this subject the author quoted by v. Ehrmann, Abbé Proyart, states explicitly: "When it is said that a slave costs 30 pieces, this does not mean that it costs 30 pieces of stuff, but 30 times an ideal value to which the name of "piece", is attached. Thus a single piece of stuff is sometimes valued at two or three "pieces", just as it sometimes requires several articles to form a single "piece " (Histoire de Loango, Kakongo, et autres Royoumes d'Afrique, Paris, 1819, first edition 1776, p. 116.) But counting with counting money does not imply a remote past, as many surmise. The 1879 edition of the Munz-, Mass-, und Geschichtsbuch (Coin, Measure, and Weight Book) of Nobac still published the statement that at the mouth of the Niger it was a general custom to calculate in value units called "slave", but that the value unit had nothing to do with actual slaves. A counting "slave", was valued then at 20.000 Kauri shells, a real one at 4.000 to 40.000. It would be interesting to discover whether eye-witnesses of this type of calculating value are still living and to record their experiences. In Liberia at that time the counting money was called "basket", quite in accord with the language of present-day English cost of-living index statisticians. According to Roscher-Pöhlmarm, (loc. cit., § 118, note 7), similar counting units have been in use among numerous African, Asiatic, and even European peoples. Thus it would be difficult to doubt that money of this kind was generally known among semi-civilised peoples and in pre-historic times. In ancient China, too, there existed not only counting 159 money, as among the negroes, but an index currency fluctuating with the price of cereals, but this was later suppressed. (Ku-Su-Lu, loc. cit.) :: :: :: :: Counting money and, particularly, index numbers are most useful inventions, but the latter are useless for currency purposes. However, for long-term debt contracts index numbers may be helpful. One should not, however, go too far in this respect and should therefore fix an appropriate free limit within which the value fluctuations of gold as compared with the general price level would be ignored. (Perhaps the first 20 %.) To calculate to too great a nicety would be like adjusting a bread knife with a micrometer screw. How indifferent in practice even quite considerable fluctuations in the value of gold are in relation to goods, was convincingly shown by Jevons' A Serious Fall in the Value of Gold (1863), in the chapter headed "Is a Remedy Needful or Possible?" :: :: :: :: :: :: The concept of a standard of value is highly abstract, not less so than the concepts of space and time. The concept of a standerd of value as such was first formed, which perrnitted bartering certain commodities for certain other commodities. Already at that stage the concept of a standerd of value arose out of a multiplicity of goods (Makuta). Later, the concept was formed of a stable metallic standard of value, which permitted not only the exchange of present possessions, teut abo the exchange of present possessions for futur ones. The evolution of the brain cells for the concept of the standard of value may have occupied thousands of years. :: :: :: :: :: :: However, far more abstract than the concept of the standerd of value is that of means of payment. Its full comprehension becomes only possible at a very late evolutionary stage. :: How much more primitive the concept of value is compared to that of means of payment, is already noticeable in animale. Dogs, for instance, are certainly capable of making value distinctions within their diminutive canine world. (This is not surprising, seeing that they can form such abstract concepts as space and time.) But as regards anything relating to exchange dogs have not the faintest conception, although the idea of property as well-as of the acquisition of property—even including the distinction between just and unjust—are congenital in them, just as much as in human beings.

jeepers, just noted you know someone in the defence dept some place. How does that person like Gravity's rainbow by Thomas Pynchon assuming they have read it and you somehow remember to ask? It is a 750 page book (which I read in a record time of a couple fourteight hour periods) about the second world war and rocket development; strangely enough the people and period involved in Germany's south African adventures are woven into the plot in bizarre ways; I hadn't a clue Germans had genocidal experiences before ww2; all in all, it's a much more lyrical take on phallicisms and smarts (s m arts) than Lisa Caputi's feminist rap though it comes down to the same thing. :: :: All right class go study hollow drumming or something and see how it relates to drumming your fingers on keyboards tttt t tt rri ii i ii gg ggg eeeeee rrrr iiiii nn nngggg triggering trials and tribu titturations. ps: regarding xhospipe. what's with this vroom subject which seems to not get a work out in the 'body' of your circular roundabout hotherault. PsII Wired is carrying a lead article on hotmail this month.

This is a letter from the maker of the hedweb.com; a large text site I have placed at the bottom of my new_links.htm with a large comment appended which I sent to him,

Hi Piet Thank you four your stimulating comments. I gather you have certain reservations about paradise-engineering. Honestly, though, I think you'd find a world where everyone was blissfully happy isn't nearly as bad as it sounds. I could of course be wrong! Anyhow..... very best wishes for a Happy Christmas! Dave Pearce dave@hedweb.com hedweb.com

My answer: I guess I owe you a completion of phrases: I can't believe you haven't included the natty link in your list since you are in Brighton too. I went to their gathering last summer. Leaving aside the positive aspects it was nothing but same old usual hedonist shit heaps stinkin to high heaven with everybody sleeping a hole into the, thereafter too hot to work, day; just like I am used to at the rainbow gathering. If I should find out you haven't I will become even more ex seethingly mad cause I am a (murderous?) butcher's son who knows where you're coming from (been all the way up to fruitarian for a while but retraced my steps somewhat). And cause I call "vergoeilijking', 'verharmlosung' and such tacitly uncritical approval of hard drugs, even if or when and actually, especially when saved for the last moment in life, and suggesting it is similar to sex (on drugs implied?), quite unpalatable and proof of another rave culture victim; a gem of a mind worped by boring bottom base lines, it's a miracle you have such a love for nature left. I mean, how the cluck do you harmonize your infatuation with chemistry which is so far from that of a certain somebody, lurking in my files, by the name of Julius Hensel who certainly shares your interests nominally but manages to not go into and on the artificial, manipulatory cheating stage with it, unlike Dupont I would say....

Messages there are sorted by month and author, thread or subject. Specs for size added would make it even more decent and easy to forget the one liners, a complete waste of time in my opinion unless you deliver masses of them like I do elsewhere. About Louis Proyect, a frequent contributor:

> As a + I can say this man is one in a million when it comes to ethnic interaction, another gem on which is his colleague in this list: Jim Craven.

As a - I must admit he is a man who's admiration for Marx is beginning to be a bit suspect to me but at his MML page the caption to a picture of Lenin reads: .'....overgrown......', instead of overthrown; for a while I was under the pleasant illusion he really meant to be so witty (and realistic), I am learning different lately (sept 98), some fanatic denunciations of persons instead of *(un)*principles lead me to believe his admiration for Marx is not unmixed with suffering from similar intolerances; I have never been very interested in Marx myself but Colin Ward's 'Criminal history of mankind' contains 3 telltale pages on Marx which lead me to believe I haven't missed much. Just yesterday (14 0ct) I found another bit of evidence that Louis is totally intolerant of faulty grammar and sentence construction; he dismisses stuff which I think has some redeeming elements: his post amster-demo has an alinea unlikely to have been written by a native speaker but this time Louis thinks the matter unworthy of source citation and dismisses the whole thing as: anarchist bullshit; the term bottom-up appearing therein however, catches my attention every time...... Nevertheless: places of indisputably great interest which prompted the following letter:

Here are the only exchanges started since then (all of them between me and valis so far): On Wed, 9 Sep 1998

> For the moment, after a cursory glance, I must say that I have no idea what you're on about. Your post is a thing of many confusing parts. However, I promise to look it over carefully (Websites also) during spare time over the next few days. Done! No further communications till then, please. valis :: :: :: :: :: :: :: :: 2 days later: Piet, we on this list are facing immediate challenges; I doubt that any member has the time or inclination to pick through your poetic explosions of thought, fancy and possible revelation for visions that might be of practical use. Whatever recognition you are after, don't give up, but seek elsewhere. Best, valis :: :: :: :: :: ::

Weeks later I wrote valis the following as a reaction to a short post of his, called "have you a helmet and safety belt on?"
hi mr flippant-floppy pants, sure you are too serious for my (one man) league? well, put your braverygear on too cause here you go I linked to your ko$$ovo piece in my last problematic priority issues update hope you don't mind and thanks --------- His contention: Why are you so pointlessly antagonistic, and to a stranger? I think you are too unbalanced personally to take on the world's problems. My answer to that carried a subject like: Megalomaximarxcisticism you are no stranger pal, a personality everybody may reckon with, be enlightened and entertained by (thanks again) you idiot revolutionaries are so deadly serious and megalomaximarxcisted that a pathetic polyflavored word such as the one earlier in this line doesn't do justice to the patheticism. By a long shot. PS where is your sense of humour??????? I thought you were least bound to take offense out of the 5 or 6 out of your cliquey key click batch Your misinterpretation has demoted you from the top of my ranking. you are now running up to Jim Craven

The next episode proves Valis is into neologizing too, and he does me the honour of taking me on point for point; his subject:

> Re: Megalomaximarxc[y?]sticism. Basically you are Europe talking. You must have noticed my complaining several times that the list is too American and therefore distorted to the point of being useless. I think there is more than one of you; there is a Dutchman at the Free Uni of Amsterdam but also someone else, probably a Brit, and likely others beside you two. So what are you, anarchists, disappointed Third Positionists, or what?

PS where is your sense of humour??????? I thought you were least bound >> to take offense out of the 5 or 6 out of your cliquey key click batch

> Your language here confuses me. You expected me to challenge at least 5 or 6 people in pen-l? I challenged _everybody_ with my July 11th post on the novel "Ceremony" and Russell Means, but everyone pretended not to notice. I had earlier posts complaining that our Marxism was too much like a religion; that evidently preceded the onset of your lurking, too.These were ignored as well.

Your misinterpretation has demoted you from the top of my ranking, you are now running up to Jim Craven -----

> Meaning that you admire him, that he's the most real? Your term of address yesterday (mr. flip floppypants) now seems more ambiguous than insulting or plainly irrational, for I imagine you would appreciate my flip-flop rather than mock it. --------

Yassure, closer this time ------
Correctingly comments on his own earlier assertion:

> I think you are too unbalanced personally to take on the world's problems. ------- Well, the jury is still out on this assertion. Question: Are all these left-center governments reason for hope, or are they jokes from the start? From over here it's hard to tell. (Or are you dedicated to a politics beyond such tired-out considerations?)

Sorry I forgot to make perusal of the use I made of your post easy: /~poetpiet/priority_issues.htm

> --------- I had mishaps when trying the above URL in full, but by chopping off the last component I reached a directory containing the priority_issues file, among others. I see that you have incorporated all our exchanges in a recent correspondence file that has links (i.e., is already public). Well, I accept that I gamble every time I hit that Send key; my words could end up in far worse places, I suppose. The only problem is that I still don't really understand _what kind_ of place you are constructing: a week of undivided effort would be required to work out its language and epistemological architecture. If you would just answer the questions in my previous message, perhaps I will make that effort. v :: :: :: :: :: :: .

OKeydokey, here goes: Well, I am happy with the changes in Germany so far but our very own coindwarf

'Duitendwerg' ...arh, sorry Duisenberg of course, is not somebody to start appreciating sites like: www.free.de/geld or my bits on the IMF in priority issues (Recently updated with your contribution; thanks again)... As far as my faction goes, ...I go and vica versa; the fractionation factoring has chosen some poor pr channels of which I am a very scared scout in enemy territory. A black american who works on a Eurotalk mailing list next to me here is always telling me Europe has no clout, it's gotta put up cause it can't put out. I think we are perhaps being infected by as much as admiring and emulating a lot* of the socalled scale economies that were born and burgeoned States-side. These figure always and only when leaving out ethnological and environmental costs. The power mongers and secretive style centralizers that be always subsidize destabilizing divisions, all the while 'distantiating' (a typically quite common Dutchification of distance is distantieren) themselves from any and all consequences (Shell declining responsability in Nigeria; they play IMF with pots of money wrapped in paper with moral directives for the virtuoso distributors scribbled on it). Divide and play 'm off against each other is fun in polyfidelitous intimacy where 'm are wommbmmen but when it (how do 'surplus' concentrations of males happen?) leads to 'leadership' and large scale conquerule with standard imposability by top down systems very undeserving of the noun: federation or party. This applies especially in money emission techniques, a topic the poor Marxists have never had a good grasp on, praps cause they seem to think power corrupts not necessarily cause it certainly wouldn't in their case...they perhaps know and feel that for sure..., I don't know. I think we are up shit's creek (is I believe how you put it right?) either way. * For instance the pathetic talk shows perpetraitored by people who should realize they have strayed far from a sustainable sort of lifestyle and are in need of radical purges, permacultures, handtools, car addiction kicks, etc. are becoming a feature here as well.

Not trying much anymore valis, it sorta comes in waves, like life itself, tis like a predictable routine almost, but I don't bother much to time the complex rhythms of my nudgetory natal niche colournizing, take'm as they come, leave the map at home and yet...go see my most recent thought for an angle of some of the things shown in my spectral sample file. But I am not sure I like routine, especially with my computer access time limited to office hours....You guys are the ones trying to hear any_of_that_something_I_am_on_about.

> PS I imagine that even _this_ will be dumped into a public file in accordance with the value you place on the deed and the moment. :: :: :: :: yep------- This is perceived by most, I'm sure, as a serious inability to discriminate between importance and nonsense; also a gross lack of simple consideration. From a family picnic you would have a photo of Brother Marinus scoring the winning goal - hurrah! - but also one of Uncle Willem, drunk as usual, and of Cousin Saskia trying to discreetly relieve herself in the bushes. May I help you come back up out of your refreshments with the kind of sharp snd serious diagnosis I recently read many times more!

> Total babbling nonsense, this, but poets can't click 100% of the time.

You wil graduate to a polygnosis comprehensive enough to tackle the documents I intend to scan and upload at the earliest opp. You may find things like the 30ties editions of the trilingual mag: Annalen der Gemeinwirtschaft, ed: Edgar Milhaud in your very own library way befor I manage to do this but it seems the waiting and hoping somebody more competent than me is gonna do it has resulted in 11 hampered and handicapped years for all those looking to make a secession a success. The net offers nothing but playful stuff on that score. :: :: :: ::

> Just what I always wanted, to be polygnostic, but isn't knowledge endless? OK, I await Milhaud, von Beckerath and the rest of your '30s Genossen (I really don't have much choice about it, do I, as long as I keep the same Net account?!). BTW, Microsoft bought hotmail.com a couple of months ago,

so how can it really be free and private? valis

Here is one to a Pen-L contributor calling himself Boddhisatva: To help ease the impending bitter pil along its passage, getting your medicine down, iow help you go through a healing crisis onslaught which renews and vitalizes even down to the bone, I will first indicate where I heartily agree with you: the following section is taken from my /commendablinklist.htm economy from the bottom on up: imperative principles (if not reading) to aid the incessantly fresh attempts to liberate, seceed and emancipate from, start up, autonomize, in other words: make selfsufficient and independent numerous derelict lots, mininations, territories and *(bio)*regions like whole watersheds (preferably, since that would be able to pioneer, demonstrate and show an integral alternative way to hark back to constituencies both mute and very vocal): www.free.de/geld
the substance of this site is in German, though not the links ... the best work there was written in the 30ties by Ulrich von Beckerath', posted here along with some other classic social reformers from the monetarily savvy anarchist corner, in or translated into German; as I said elsewhere, he would make up for Hitler and all the other German speaking evil ones, past and future if only his ideas were given a go for a century or so.
Will somebody please post some in english?
I went to Australia to accomplish this but ended up with a course correction toward indiginous issues on which I and the custodian of Beckerath's remaining work (thousands and thousands of repetitive letters available from him on microfiche) did not see eye to eye; for more backscratch turned bite see the appendices)
Another economist who deserves some focus now is Roland Vaubel, scarcely to be found though; he is one of the hundred something or so economics professors from Germany to speak out against a rush job for the EURO, arguing in favor of a proof of balance delivering step by step sort of progression as best for most such cases in a big fat academic tome about currency competition and unification. Two of the all too rare bits of info on John Zube's by now 1400 microfiche issues, see my appendices and value standard chapter: art.net/Poets/Jennifer/anarchy

I will now play missing link between you and Jim by telling you (all?) where to find people working on filling that conceptual hiatus of yours (and with you many) about what permapleached wilderness (tradition with a modern knot, graft and twist or so may do. In my new links file I placed it in the 'going native sites' category)
tlio.demon.co.uk/tinkers.htm
(Low Impact Development Planning and people in a sustainable countryside') - author simon Fairlie's abides [in] a bubbling bender behovelment [abode] called: Tinker's blobble .. i mean bubble. An aside: In a discussion about wether democrapitalism can sucker just about anybody with their bribes; about native and indiginous peoples' desire to give up their traditions and if they do so as easily and eagerly as fresher and/or rasher hybrids, B coined the phrase:
'20 acres and a deer' implying this would constitute a living too poor to boast about or wanna hold on to.
20 acres and a deer
You probably gathered I came across your definition of hunter/gatherer subsistence. 20 acres, a deer and what? A deer and/in paradise surely? Dunno what I mean? Perpetual carnival of suprise star appearances from within the community with its amply filled myriads of niches; the most alively diverse and multiply buffered layer land (not to be confused with lui lekker (lazy, nice) land) possible. Silk hats on pigs indeed. Perhaps a bit of smooth mud flung/slapped and/or sprayed across colourful confetti swept up into compost piles by our stage hand the wind who insists on being payed and flayed by birds wings......etc. Even at my 40 years of age I saw a miracle in the very old metropolis I peddle through. The park has a rainbow conjuring fountainpond, I am one of the few from the hundred thousand or so who has ever swam it voluntarily, but I have never ever yet seen what I saw there this morning: a bathing heron. Just do try do justice to my selfchosen nickname. de reiger neemt een bad .. de reiger maakt zijn veren nat. :: :: In a lot of ways the 'hyping of hypering': driving info industry shareprices up as an act of faith and vote of confidence in the surely near consensual and to be verified feeling that the tricking (us all into the trickle down) trick inventions which ex defence industry employers are allowed to run riot on and with (a matter of inventing screenings which prevent all good things, ..still believed to be coming from above exclusively, this I now realize even more acutely after reading Deloria [thanks pen-Lers]), from being disgraced and unrecognizably fragmented upon reaching too low a mired level in the hyrarchy of beings, iow: to be caught before they get to far down and negligibly out of reach for the initially privileged as economic weather director, bearometric pretty sure pressure pumper (go for the big fish, be a man) is analogous to what permaculture is able to do to people (with natal earth houses housing favorable aspect and/or venus well enough escorted...that means everybody really....at some window of opportunity or other..this just maybe yours...); they see the future all rosy, cosy and sumptious, act on the courage of their visionary convictions and start with the first steps to see some results quick enough to provide shade in 7 years at the most.

Both factions are able to argue believably cause they are given the credit of prophets, people speaking from a position of having been there (much of the respect for indigenes derives therefrom also). The greenies give account of physical perfectability and harmonization when they are are able to paint the fullgrown pleached and otherwise infrastructured (a process that will take a 1000 years to become (re)established with all the glitches of forgotten, exterminated and incompatible combo's worked out (again)) picture replete with abundance and free time. If we are on towards such days, we'll have indians leading no doubt, and if I can help it they'll just cut up rock more spectacularly than they ever did it to living hearts one time. The optimism on info shares is similar: people expect the companies to harmonize their products and by rocking the boats, hoppering the stopped up passage ways into flow and metabolism, that is: allowing employees to crossfertilize at a moments notice (kindalike rainbow gatherings, where every teahouse respects the man hauling a chunk of wood) clean each other's junk up. Well....your turn always comes wether you pass 'm up or not. So far (more than a week now) he is playing the rude prude, not bothering to reciprocate with a link of his own but for more attentive readers I will point to the so far regrettably few other titbits on Zube and Beckerath within my site: value standards..., bibliography.... and inthrow

Another day (15 oct) of intense csf time behind me. Time to send something off to 5 of yus. Yall are invited to go see what I made of the increasing amount of time spent on PEN-L; especially since late summer I have perused and read almost half (with liberal...oops, generous sprinklings of some others thrown in) of Jim Craven's, Boddhi's, Proyect's and valis's contributions to 9 out of the 17 available...discussions, meanwhile archives. Quite impressive, my kind of soap opera, with yall taking turns going red in the face and blowing up, maturer and perhaps more cynical characters excepted.... Thanks for the refs Jim; and yes Boddhi, principles are more lasting than people but there ain't no what withou a who and none of yall even touch the backed up right up front specificity and perspicacious penetration of Ulrich von Beckerath, so there! It may seem odd that he is only to be found on the net at a virtually lifeless webadress (he has however been available on fiche for decades thanks to the diligence of a dissident German jailwarden in Auzzieland. Ahaaah, the vagaries of fate, such high comedy, ain't it?) which I nevertheless call my fav cause of his presence there. Philip Callahan, another one of my hero's isn't on the net either except for a book add or two, but he is still alive luckily.

Dearest Louis, I'm sorry to see violence has not found better use than vague hopes for confrontational kinds or offendingly dismissive ones when you come across something like the fwd: Amster-demo; which you dismiss on grounds more seriously judgemental than just flawed formulation (see the bit above about yourself). I personally prefer to swear by out- and overgrowing rather than throwing over and out as trump and tip off towards my kind of a more native, indiginous kind of celtic radicality, the type I must be suited to understand better than others. It will be a long time before any of their tribes are taking off from where they left off, or rather invite and entice their strays back to the fold. Wanna trade, anybody? Anyway this is my token of appreciation.

(I wondered what he was up to in the quiet before that storm) on and against the top down push for the Euro found at: http://united.econ.uni-bonn.de/ (doesn't seem to exist anymore) ~iiw/euro.htm#English Version
The Euro starts too early

> On the planned start of theEuropean Monetary Union Endorsed by 166 Professors of economics ------- 1. There is no alternative to European integration. The single currency will be part of it - at least for the core of Europe. However, the Euro comes too early. ------- 2. The consolidation of public budgets has made progress. Nevertheless, it has not advanced enough, especially in large countries such as Italy, France and Germany. The process of consolidation started too late and halfheartedly. In spite of an unusually low level of interest rates, hence reduced costs of debt service, and in spite of numerous examples of creative accounting, the core countries have not succeeded in reducing deficits markedly and sustainably below the 3 per cent reference value. Moreover, the average debt ratio of the member states has not come down since 1991 but has risen by 15 percentage points. As a result, it now exceeds the 60 per cent reference value of the Maastricht Treaty by a large margin. This is contrary to the spirit of the Treaty. ------- 3. The Treaty rightly requires persistence of convergence. To ensure this the so-called "stability pact" has been invented. However, the pact cannot guarantee budgetary discipline. The threat of sanctions is credible, if at all, only if the deficit reference value is violated by one country or very few countries. Given that sanctions are not automatic, it is unlikely that a qualified majority will enforce the pact when a larger number of countries simultaneously violates the limit. The pact cannot ensure the stability of the Euro. ------- 4. Since 1991 the structural problems of Europe have worsened. Unemployment has continued to rise. Notably Germany and France - the driving forces of European integration - are not well prepared to cope with the more rapid structural change and the stiffer competition in a monetary union. The Euro does not solve the unemployment problem of Europe. Given that exchange rates are no longer available for adjustment, labour markets need to become much more flexible - in Germany as well as elsewhere. An unambiguous change of trend is missing in this respect. If such a trend change is not achieved before the start of monetary union, we will have to expect useless experiments of demand stimulation and above all political pressure on the European Central Bank. 5. The current state of economic affairs is most unsuitable for starting monetary union. An orderly postponement for a couple of years - supplemented by conditions on further progress with respect to budgetary consolidation - has to be seriously considered as a political option. Postponement must not be seen as a political catastrophy. No party can infer from it that the process of integration has come to an end. The persistent success of the Euro is more important than its starting date. 6. An orderly postponement would not be a reason for any country to reduce its efforts at consolidating public budgets. Reducing effort would be a signal that the country either does not make budgetary discipline an objective of its own or that it is unable to take the necessary action. It would be a fundamental error to start monetary union with such a country. ------- 7. Should the attempt of reaching unanimous agreement on an orderly postponement fail, it will be of utmost importance to apply the convergence criteria without any indulgence. Then it must not be declared a taboo that the monetary union starts with a smaller group of countries. On the contrary, with regard to sustainability, the convergence criteria need to be applied as rigorously as possible - as strictly as the Treaty permits. Governments who do not take the examination of convergence seriously, undermine the confidence in the actual independence of the European Central Bank and in the stability of the Euro. The start of monetary union would suffer from a heavy burden if the Euro is expected to be weak - inside and outside the monetary union.

comments on some INDRA lectures in A'dam 97
One of these lectures had the christmas story telling tone of the kind I remember used by female sunday school teachers that were allowed to speak in church once a year. She spoke on literature and identity, focussing on a Black Canadian Poet named Philip.
A searched out and dished up naughtyness seems to be another bit of evidence that an often recurring and so widely assumed (especially by female lecturers, it seems to me) essential recipe ingredient, a prerequisite for spellbinding performance in Amsterdam is erotic language even though the featured poet morphs that word into anguish; her theme is to denounce the invasion of silence by the logical and lawful liability legislators who are interesting cause alienated, cool cause clever, symboljugglers, shallow, aloof, rich and streetsmart mongrels that linger and dwell, nay insists on 'binary dichotomy, dominance, intolerance and 'disallow paradox', I find the use of the word paradox a bit..well..paradoxical in this context cause the western discourse of democratic darwinism, underdogging, prosecuting and poisoning the (taken collectively, remember the cartoon of little fishes in formation to fake (out) a big fish?) vast majorities of all aspects of life from psychogeographically determined tribes to soil organisms, not only allows but produces the worst of them by 'virtue' of its massificatory personal and personably proper scales perverting hybridizations and exoduses condoning displacements. Now let me finish illustrating Philip's method, a fine paradox in itself since she uses the abuseful bully method that she polemicises against ([DE]finality of linearly letterstrung words woven into stipulations for lingam licking subservience) herself albeit very observ- and militantly, I myself use computers to try shift the focus and consumptively absorbing energy directed thereat to more fertile fields of endeavor and communion, the long wave and loop type communication, not between specialized humans primarily but including all species in one's surroundings. ------- My most intense criticism of the terminology, but not the intent in the lecture, concerns the expressed desire to escape the black white and either or hardliners, and yet reach a neither and or both timeframed flux of plurality (by the way, saying that there is a right place and time does not include denying there are wrong ones I hope). ------- Rubbing dark and bright together as in minerals and light, lubricated by some watery weather, eh voila, sprouts life with the clout to pout and move about, life sprouts into pucker and picky plantlike organism again and again, a begin again with no fake about it (pun on the most ultraextremist punner).

Rockdust and clouds are conveniently grey to fit around green in the middle of a symbolic rainbow resulting from the interaction andmutual metabolism so well illustrated in the ancient yinyang icon. Each partner has some of its counterpart exactly at a peculiarly pivotal spot for fulcrum leverage so that in dynamic spins one would see a lot of whirling grey as in volcanic eruptions and storm- or otherwise moistened, finetuned dosage of dustspreading machinery displays and manifestations for instance, utterly and completely essential and fundamental in my mind's eye, whent comes to encompassing dualities. So there is no turning one's back on them, the dichotomies and binary bits cause they are complementary, inextricable and mutually enhancing and impregnating rather than antagonistic, which latter state is the case only when they deny reality and try to pull away from each other, a futile, further polarizing and in respect to its opposite infertile attempt. -------

Apropo Joyce whose work and workings I finally took time to tackle abit in Ozzie's Brisbane Uni, appropriately protected from the usually mad rush of Ozurban traffic by a river slung around it on 3 sides, starting with the most critical commentators, a man who saw what became of one of Europe's first multicultural societies: Ireland (went down thanks to fascist neighbours and alcohol) See chapter 10 (white) for more in honour of him (loquaciously perspicacious lingo) besides the next alinea. ------- Life is like a river, it precipitates from heaven, gathers force, strength, volume, content and concentration into a massively singular entity pushing things over, out of its way or ahead of itself, accumulating to the point where the trunklike stage is at an end and the divisive obstacles oblige it to divert and scatter to get around them only to calm down some more and drop residual se*(nt or d)*imental deposits that other forms of life profit from and run away with before it loses itself after such fruitful life altogether in the womb whence it arose and will rise again once sunny seeds tickle the starspangled surface it circulated to.

another UvA Indra lecture extract and comment with some book reviews added

The most perfectly positive, pragmatic, programmatic and projective parts of the next 5 pages are boldly emboldened (sorry, lost them on the way from apple to Dell somehow for now) for those who have little time to waste on descriptions of the status quo, however accurate, being haunted enough by and aware of it already, for people who have lost the reactionary desire to read about its predictable exploits.

Paraphrasing the first part of the "IN BETWEEN' lecture by Rob Horst:
Peer pressure of protestant work ethic (lord/ slave cleavage among the lads) swayed popular opinion with massive mercenary, mercantile and finally media mendications resulting in voluminous but poor quality annual food biomass production at the expense of previously present, much nearer to perfectly diverse, selfconserving, yet unpoisoned and massive biomass.

The second part concerned Chambers's book 'putting last first' which is a very enigmatic title for me; what lurks under the universal face value of such a phrase one may wonder at first sighting it. The hermetic: as above, so below? The orouborousian, moebius magnetism mysteries? The Biblically last part of creation put on a pedestal? Closed circuits? The dragontail in mouth mythology? Before continuing in this colour.. Allow me to quickly sketch the content of 'Foreign bodies' here, by Alphonso Lingis (hint, nudge, say no more) and throw in a little on 'Demonic males' by a couple of monkey watchers in a little while as well, they constitute my most recent reading to acquaint the ancestral and indigene. The New Guinean Sambia turn out to evince yet another sub- and perversion of that old riled and railed at, mudslapped and blood bespattered mother magic, seen and believed to give and take life or death during the early, superstitious fits and starts toward the tarmac tec and expert knowledge engendered by millions of years worth of scarcity fanned and fed force resulting in violence conflagrations galore, always typified by desert and desertifying patrist heartland tricks such as segregating ageclasses, varieties and genders. The Sambia now lock fathers and cousins into a ball and penis circuit onto the breast and nipple suckled cycle of white fluid metabolism to parody and periodically perversify that of the opposite gender continuity amongst mothers and daughters. And so wetnursing the prospective wife's little boy brothers thus initiated to homo-, before graduating to hetero sexuality, when they become givers rather than receivers of sperm, leaves them living between wars weaving the libidinal economy without spilling a drop. This would be a good place to tell the story of the flues as they relate to stolen suckling foods but I am mixing topics enough as it is, so we will have to endure rude bacilla bombs away sneezes for a while yet. Some of the New Guinean tribes are much more militant and misogynist with frequent ritualized standoffs till an imbalance evokes bloodshed and rout just like among chimps who form gangs to raid and catch stray neighbours offguard while Bonobos can afford to stick together more, mix ages and genders constantly and live a sensual life in part bycause their costs of partysize are lower than their cousins theirs, who have to roam further afield and compete more since they don't supplement with herbs as much as their and our close relatives. This is due to the absence of herb devouring gorillas in the Bonobo enclave and neighbourhood.

Chalmers's book 'Putting last first' is about the green revolution which he criticizes but not deeply enough, making no mention of the progressively deteriorated nutritional values since the volume boost-bloat of chemical forcefeeding fucked up another gutlevel part of empow*(d)*erment and independence worsening to the point of crops thus promoted rotting before they ripen.

This helps us to guess a little closer to home. Pronouncing losers winners? Celebrating latecomers? Helping the needy underprivileged? It obviously still conjures conjecture and ambiguity. A better look reveals an attempt at arguing in favor of priority shifts away from macho machinations and he mentions a number of their biases like sticking with tarmac and boisterous bullies. ------- I propose to keep, stenghten, amplify and discipline these foci against a backdrop of the following much less anthropocentric and more evolutionary interpretation of first and last causes, competitors or colleagues, so their, as nobody can deny considerable, influence can be put to best use. Minerals were here first, then came plants and animals before some prime perspective or partial ulterior motive could arise on the road of loops and spin offs. Highest developed beings must feed the least far along ingredients into the metabolic chain of eventual food and abundance where we ex apes sit atop this apex, having survived the ladder climb of plenty complex; in short: a rock having a drink of water for instance is the most 'beingitarian'; the least conspicuous, most common, humblest constituents of life being tracefilled fresh dust must receive priority over all other forms of interfering manipulation and will eventually be felt to deserve the most efficient, entertaining, musical, etc kinds thereof widely; now is the time for token telltale tailingtrailing, as it can be had for free at most quarries, make a deal with the grinder operators, go and sweep it up weekly. ------- The most liberated, invention armed, freedom and choice enjoying elite must humbly search for the first indications of elevating existence. ------- What determines sweetness, nutritional quality and shelflife in fruits for second instance? ------- The full spectrum, natural spread of minerals and trace-elements as found in common, yet paramagnetic rock; oxygen is very, Ayers rock is very, round towers are, half of the rock in Japanese gardens are, most lava's are and plenty of basalts are paramagnetic, see P Callahan's books available from Acres USA, a voice for eco-agriculture, Kansas City, Missouri. This is a digest of what I see (oct 96-aug 97) on the other side of the world

One afternoon in a deserted Woolongong, NSW Wilderness Society office.

Who remembers anymore, that history once was oral,
who remembers times many a score,
when cutting live wood was immoral?
who buys all sorts of more and more fancy print supplies to spread the modern lure and lore of lies that help commerce wither life til it dies?
It's us, courtesy of our local mogul: Boral.

The Australian light is intense, the such harvesting absorption filters, the sun-suspended shade spenders are going and nearly gone, at least the multiply aged, plied, layered and lively havens known as old growth (about 2 % left versus 1% in the US). The indiginous mixes are manhandled and replaced by European imports as on the other continents white folks took a fancy to; the slush, pump and slap of Dutch land reclaiming grazer habits taken overseas for instance become saw, plow, sow, mow, harvest, herd and hammer which is hard work too, but before long, more often than not, nothing remains left to do but scrape, grind, poison and pipe stuff.A poem about sharply defined borders or nomansland (not exclusively nor predominantly explored, conquered and exploited by man; bufferzone (sufferbone)) in between written at the occasion of transcribing a report from the Aboriginal Tent Embassy at the Commonwealth Embassy in Canberra. It appeared in the numb bum's Nimbin News where I WWOOFed (Willing Workers On Organic Farms) for four days during which I was visited by the carpet snake, totem animal of native poet Oodgeroo (Kath Walker) and Gloria, the editor 14 years running, in residence. ------- Do some deserts make for their peoples darkness or vice versa? Do some of them send out white complexioned serfs?

How much darkness in heat, how much white left in the cold, how much bleached, how many tanning? Who leaves green in between? White men don't change roles, are not open but rather 'elaborinthian' they can't swap jobs, let alone mates, and the moon is no longer the light that sends 'm among the branches and loving limbs they can't kick the shoe and thorn habit nor be in other men's states. ------- They don't open any rock to unstick the stuck for properly visionary feeds, can't give some pleasingly pleached limbs living *(c)*rafter's credit can't pass the muck or se other beings needs. Shocking Afterthoughtful farther shakes: Some men's darkness is the internalized and more weighty side of the stark contrast between dry glare and deep, dry dourness doffed with dust. Yes they jerk the rest of the world around in search of lost riches. Is darkness in heat? Yes a corefull of it aglow, but what part of the spectrum may secede for a scale spanning virtuosity of morphogenesis? Did tan get chased into the cold and bleach blanch away awhile or what, did their feelings chill, were they marginalized or venturesome? ------- Light lacks lustre and storage if it gets restricted access through too high a surface tension; hard and not wet enough rock refuses breach and invasion of privacy.
------- Australia kept me riveted on and astounded by the rapid fire of tellurevision, between the news items on essential and indispensable prostheses like cars and computers, moneyspinners like mining, beef breeding and such staples as science fiction they intermittently pretend to dredge up and redeem drowned skeletons of traumatic, holocaustic, supressed and censored memory regarding the massacres and stolen generations, practically without success but this circumscription of real issues with prejudices drags on endlessly and costily, keeping papercompanies and their dozing bullies happily tearing down the last remnant 3 % of tall, alive and tensile stellation with plenty to spare for shipping to Japan where it is put to serve similarly useless purposes. ------- One could argue that this deadlock labyrinth is like having concrete poured into the chinks and channels to discourage purchase and leverage on the entrenchment of all the Native Title legislation which never concerns or even mentions any land more valuable than the merely marginal kind in the first place, which is no suprise, coming so short on the heels of an only just annulled Terra Nullius but Eddy Mabo day, the second of june, happens to be my birthday and I am confident it shall spin the issue into a more momentous orbit than it has already done with the wasteful and shameful results I alluded to cryptically. The reaction from short term snap shot observance of the issues by some of those involved is: 'hey, the abo's are being favoured', this faction is being hypefed by the leftist reaction to it in turn, cause they cry: 'here is a new Hitler who used to fry fish'. All this is a bit like in Germany, where only the communists are lending weight to Nazism nowadays, by taking it really serious still. ------- Subjective, in your face sort of passion crimes are infinitely more popular than the creepy, remote, large scale, painstakingly and premeditatedly plotted ones. ------- Another paradox great enough to match the one just mentioned: protecting diversity and autonomy of, by and for all requires a disciplined volunteer and otherwise ideal as well, taskforce to prevent minorities from ganging up on each other coercively; in other words: voluntarily imposed and mostly merely potential coercion is needed to defuse the real and involuntarily suffered kind.In my opinion seductive and enticing encouragement of repatriation is a service worthy of the highest priority for all disoriented descendants of emigrants who for the most part were forced into that role in the first place. Performance and preservation of self and sort with a bias for kin over kith are sanctioned leadership obsessions which make us highly selective and the shame of it is that the unchosen are marginalized, pushed out and sent packing in the game called: condemned little thief versus exalted big thief. The poor are kept alive and numerous for purposes of cheap laboursupplies and chased off thus market*(un)*wise more valuable yet in reality invalidated land since day one. All competitive species and races in turn, but lately the white ones most prominently and predominantly, are in these senses culling for excellence, pickiest, most addicted, unnatural and cleaving the world into privilege and poverty, sublimity and slavery; they got furthest along in the often resisted, raid accumulated hoards of wealth stockpiling which stems from male bonding success, is opportunistic in principle and produces high levels of agitation, (see the recent book: 'Demonic males' for procursors to death defying heroism and its embellishing fabulism to gloss over suppressed truths, like the brutal remove from applying such tactics much closer to the compost heap, iow: on crops, not people! This book bodes well for an eventual acknowledgement that Genesis refers to cannibalism as shown by O K Maerth in the 60ties) power and permanent ownership, lordism and monopolies, pulling the rug from under gentler people, changing their mores into a harsher one of restriction, deprivation and oppression so as to build the puritan pressures needed for expansivist policies; exploration leading to exploitation and so on, see the work of Franz Oppenheimer for instance. A new constitution complete with legislation and sundry viable blueprint parts should not be so hard to publish and seek subscribers for although I know at least one comprehensive attempt which belies the latter half of this assertion. (as far as you may call a one man effort that, Libertarian Microfiche Publishing, 7 Oxley st, Berrima 2577 NSW, the main reason I went to Oz, see the gossipy appendix). It seems hard to combine being a scholar and succesful social activist. The better we womanage watertight formulation, meaning writing up universally valid, agreeable basic dreams and 'prealities' of such original, taditional or *(re)autonomated regions and tribes with the desired degree of integrity, nurturance, harmony and in(ter)*dependence, placing heavy emphasis on prior appropriation (a term some all too slight attention is payed to by a liberarian philosopher called Robert Nozick for instance) and tradition where they have escaped coercive carnage so that privatization becomes perpetual trust for proportionate and indiginous preference, the sooner we may proclaim, purchase and then populate them for a charge up before it is back on the double, at good clip and pace to the border-flexing battle-frontline of some still threatened, under siege or subjected place in their defense and service to win variously flavoured favors and favored flavours. ------- Conversion to voluntary racism means pledging to protect and/or restore plus advocate ethical conduct: mutual noninterference and -infringement except the voluntary kinds of association and exchange. ------- Let's face it: the green, human right and other minority movements are just drops on a hot plate and in the bucket or bathtub.I am not knocking homeopathy but the strongest remedies may be pathological and cataclysmic ones which speed up or ripen an already rotten process, I personally broke out in 3 extra craterlike spots oozing puss after an incautious overdose of pyrogenium taken to ripen a first carbuncle, it was made of rotting flesh as I learned much too late. ------- I propose to bundle forces, concentrate and potentiate 'm (always a good idea aiding systemic overview and only counterproductive and contraindicated as the medical jargonists have it, when the process homogenizes, neglecting differentiations and moving toward mutually competitive monopolizing extent), transform the crossfire of pamphlet and periodical and/or pamphlet publishing power into the simultaneous credit and commitment, receipts and recipes constituting accountability tokens and titbits or bytes, which at one time was the deserving part of paper money, the reason it could become such a prominent and inescapable turnstile, pump and prime perspective and empowerment promising payment at once. ------- This vision could give a much needed twist to the clog and glut fired at each others offices where they pile up, often remain unread and inaccesible to thepublic to shift, sag, keel and ultimately dust over til they get recycled if lucky, rent being too high for space filling files and archives. ------- Fight economic secrecy and political hypocrisy colluding against the people and other beings by politicizing money by and for many and abandoning remuneratively monetized politics by and for few. ------- Proclamations of alliance and solidarity, missives prodding to urgent action and other barrages of sentimental eco-gospel are all very well and justified but come to nought if their merely informing function with or without intent to rabblerouse, isn't embodying at least one truly emancipated alternative, linkable to others cause fully equiped with the prerequisites: a home made, specific participant and validity duration stipulating currency to give and take in exchange and measure up as a means of payment and turnover; ways of reckoning by value standards with dependably converted and fractionated units (such as constitutable by rates of photosynthesis) to come to a new or renewed rather, understanding and definition of good value storage by buffering soilbank biomass, able to mobilize nourishing credit according to creed, seed, war on waste and taste. ------- If the monetary reform with reverb on communication, media, advertizing and politics and small scale innovation I envision is as viable a principle as I feel it will be a practice, that whole chain of hype causing waste which costs entire forest should come to a much needed stop. ------- Such identity enhancing emission can be invitingly succesful and generous enough to absorb likewise disenchanted defectors and refugees from the relentlessly virulent deathdrive driven and possesed way things are and get imitated by the 90 % sheepishly gullible general public, probably the poor of whom Jesus is to have said they 'd always be with us. ------- Which popular leader has had a chance, desire and reason to say: 'I'm proud of y'all my people'? Under any less than these conditions for freeing mental breathing to stimulate same for the physical varieties, the barbaric ballot boxes and biased balance books are and remain unbudgable obstacles as unviable as any holy taboo however undeservedly. I therefore regret the fact that truly fresh cause really perishable, ethical, ideology legitimating money emission (let alone relocation in order to begin a community, resettling an abandoned village or start a new country, hey, listen up Soros) has become such an ignored, despised, practically outmoded and -dated chance for change, a nonitem which couldn't possible be started for any noble purpose anyway, as public opinion seems to unceasingly exemplify and hysterically reiterate. Automaton encased humans, (why did it highway) both with a mere token, slight, fake and faint flavor of individual variety left while leaving less in their wake on the way to evolutionary dead toxic ends, specialized to the very marrow if even any of that will escape delegation and consequent atrophy, remind me of the green ants I saw ambling along on the semi straight line of an irrigation pipe going upstream among big boulders and trees, raised above ground over 96 % of the time I guesstimate, but it didn't seem to perturb them, they just must enjoy neatly spaced out linear trucking. ------- On the other hand what we do not but should delegate, for instance to us agonizing crowding, although people who know not what to do with room to move would rather pretend to suffer lopped limb and liveliness so they can conveniently and comfortably dive and delve into a crowd for a while to build and rev up the fantastic steam necessary to delude themselves into the far from fundamental and faked liberation (relief of 'small death' french after a fashion), the fuseblowing ego-fusion illusion of romantic love with all the above mentioned shortcuts in place and more to come. Such insulary mimicry is not actual stimulation and miming primal cellsoup on topdollar dancefloors has had its drawbacks, it gets payed for by exposure to epidemic potential or at least a loss of stamina due to dumpy environs with bad ventilation which is a criminally far cry from my ventilating dabs if remaining undecided too long for one thing.

Dear NUS students for sustainability playing potential politician, all those with public influence must be exposed to scrutiny by and intimacy with those affected.

I resolutely absolve you from spelling out, let alone trying to implement nonpoetic unresolved and merely political pseudo solutions which fall short of cosmic coherence maintained by the very finest details. ------- Your conference wasn't the best place for a literature display, yall was lookin' for sonic resonance, sensurround charisma, initiative and libidolavishing leadership which is conveyed through face to face in and of the public, besides hands on contact with and example in the public eye, a scent sent up its nose. The 'stretch' of words as the Dutch call it, their reach and implications, should not overreach the sphere of the speaker's grounding and basic, not bossy, influence unless referring to coarse (pervasively coursing) generalities we all share (like weather) or techniques of tabulation, turning central bottlenecks of turfing into purely conveying informally informative thoroughfares *(f)or far off and away consequences of locally implemented strategy. Witness the natural formation of dialect; strictly speaking, not even the sun is globally effective more than half the time. Diana, Madonna, Alex the great, Jesus and Ghengis Khan never will make it either even though one of them tried to impersonate the nearest sun of God. ------- Pick up some Biblical bias and get lost in Babylonian baby(g)*land bibliograpy to betray and condemn true charm of babyland. ------- So if you feel such far reaching potential that far off yet familiar, alien races and nations are spooking through your head, pubic rather than publically impersonal affairs, go to some older people for wisdom first or a wild party to have some suitably unbiblical body comfort your dick somewhere slimey and warm to gain a sense of proportion and relevance.In the beginning we babble, then start to live through squabbles over bibliographies and once we survive all this way past Babylonian boastfulness you would think that by now scale as a key to dispersion, density and dynamically stable diversity is a well understood item (see Leopold Kohr); when size is taken as a token of security you can be sure there is a pinch or two in the game somewhere. A longing for unity manifests in massive society and has its place on the compost pile. ------- Prior to prying pulverizingly prayz da stupefaction supplying distant peer soup shun. ------- Great spirit and abstract average, conglomorate collectedness we can and may not conceive of nor imagine, at least that is the way some superiority complex sporting people, vulgarly opportunistic users and racists, blindly circumscribe you. ------- My prayer is that all monotheistically, matrimonially and moneywise monopolizing, to homogenism and miserly misery admonishing ministrators learn the tiny yet important tolerance lesson without flying off the horny handle cause they are starting to well nigh wreck creation big time especially its own cradle, may they come to a forgiving self awareness of it and other sins too, soon, cause these still rage and strike out left and right; it imposes upon, invades and disrespects indiginous native cultures to undermine and subvert their fertility, sustainability and independently plural modesty without asking permission, coming armed with cocksure and triggerhappy doctrines beefed and backed up with infernal paraphernalia: tiers, layers, strata of justice and bylaws that are shortcuts for some few at best and dead ends for most at worst which do not allow blessings to accrue at the base, organically, the way they used to. ------- The chosen ones don't lavish but exercize choice, yet they no longer discern its natural betterment bias: carry abundance off toward scarcity, adjust the imbalance of diversity dipping toward predominance in need of nipping in the bud. The ultimate and only ideal to me is biotectural 'fingerspitzengefuehlvoller' manipulation known as pleaching; till then plenty of time to detox and crush rocks. The chosen one figger they ought to be welcome but as soon as they have gaged and adapted the suckering attachment a vitality depleting current is set in motion. So their boast of boon and blessing bringing belligerence is a lie to be wary of. ------- A shortcut dispenses with the joy of the journey. ------- Does distinction and nobility denoting terminology succeed in giving proof of interactive hyrarchy or is a sense of evasive isolation more evident? ------- If the personality cult and mystification (mystic fabulation) of natural and biological law suspending miracle men who are elusively and exclusively smoke screen secretive if not as powerful or even as real as their advocates, supplicates and perpetraitoring creditors in humble pawn's guise does not come to its senses and disappear, transcending mumbles, fumbles, stumbles and grumbles into the humility of humble and crist-almighty rock crunch and punchline hunches about best crumble which is ready to realize the simple truth that receiving and accepting the sun of God's divine grace and merciful rescueclause means catching and appreciating not despising its blessings, in other words banking on, in and reckoning with photosynthesis, we will remain in deep shit altogether all together all to get her. This seems as if looking to heaven for answers as massively in an eco rather than religious way, might result in so many solarpanelhands held out that gardening under them must be done in the dark (which by the way radionicists actually manage to do without artificial light). Better take a Georgist perpetual trusts type tack. Stone milling work will thrill whereas sun billing will work ill. The fairies, aliens and races of all sorts, are they not all dependent on gracefully grown, received and tempered fire; the down to earth provision by the inappropriable Sun of God?The supremecist sentiment is the pickyness particularity that has its rightful place when practised on, by and in favor of the poorest, that is not primarily at every personal, and public besides personifying level, but as re- and precruiting mobility bestowal at the re- and preanimate bedrock bottomrung bottleneck beginning of the foodchain to initiate a steady flow of digestible and nurturing, not selfchosen but juicy or chewy choosable ones which demands a scala of low specie, agegroup or any other category concentration concommitant to high variety diversity, the complementarity mingle mode. Wherever nesting grounds are at a premium, the hideal of homestead privacy has to be given up for crowded mayhem regrettingly. Versatility and intimate privacy with little to lock up or hide and less to fend off is the charm and main theme of world literature from Genesis to the american homestead*(y)*ing dream, of man amongst diversity. ------- The concentration and control of, and access to force, fuel and strength as characteristic of male dominance enhanced with cleverness coopted natural cunning creates wealth which allows choice, it in turn translates to mobility and mobilization which at its highest potential, as peak performance, prerogative and crowning privilege penetrates the feminine realm, invades it to procreate, conquers it to perpetuate, invests in it to reproduce. ------- What is missing in most such practice is the opposite of taking once and for all, dead end decisive short cuts: add grace notes and graduation, staggering stuff to intensify diversity, embellish and fractalize; stretch, max factor multiply and fracture the blocked bottlenecks. When then the animate meet the inanimate concentration and intensity, intent meetmatematches density, man has a crush on rock cause he skipped and scrapped wage-slavery to become *(de)*central banker banking away into live buffer banking. Lowest mobility levels receive the highest, most volatile and energetic impact. Together they approach the golden mean meaning, the happy middle humain medium.I want the type of macho machinations which will mince rock. ------- Mobilization can be good and bad, it can uproot, metabolize and control or fundamentally feed, enhance, invigorate, buffer, bank, bless and balance all while ab- and dissolving itself. Smokescreen of monastic megalomani-mythical myopia is the carma of dirty minded patrist power games played hard so as to buy up the best of all shallow, all surface babes from miles around while screaming bloody murder about the brothers in arms they themselves sacrificed on the way. All this is not to say a central, fulcrum pivoting registrar is out of order, on the contrary, sorting in a nondistorting way, facts with facts and faiths with faiths, parts of each with the principles and practices involved, sorting by age, shelving by degree, overlap, location, intensity, etc, all this is usefull as long as it leads us back to plenty of reason for gratitude with little to boast and bloat ourselves about.A realistic rainbowmonstration isn't only colour specific but especially when a rock chew screw and sow grow show also spectrally complete timewise, a scale scan, quite unlike this merely hypothetical, fabulatory, programmarian and projective extrapolation, as a matter of fact...of course....

Aby Warburg's idea of the evolution in consciousness going from instantly gratifying grasp and mimicked grab via in- and evocative role play and personification to symbolizing sacrifice and a more and more immaterial thought process is correct. He says the snake as the most involuntary and instinctive reaction provoking animal, the biggest challenge for the symbolizing thought process. Reptiles being most at home in muddy media I am not suprised the in addition most phallic version of them should be so revered, glorified, feared and cursed. Webspinning wheel spoke saying, let there be yea and nay, spanning to and fro, sportsy and spectacular, aimed at ending every woe. ------- The medium is, gives and does the massage, maybe a bit like rock is, gives and does dust or goes to pieces -------

Apropo the 90 million dollars 'Mutant Message' earned in 'Rickels'itrend style with a Jungian and Poetpieterman twist; let me warn you: tis a some of the dryest, deadest writing I managed to do so far. We, especially the young, are hung up and hinging on the sense of selfexpanding forgetfullness of leisure, irrelevance and music, all coopted by the ad agencies clamouring for surrender of each and every reservation worth a fair fight, in rapid crossfire succesion, shocking and rocking rank and file within psy-fi warfare; yad not believe it till you try see to its abolishment. ------- Compulsion to use words is a neurotic desperate dispensation of and for containment (how funny are renegement, retraction, annulment and juggling of nuclear waste?) and yet when they reach a precipice of opportunity to end their regime, wether set up, nudged or goaded to it, hoped, yearned and/or fought for, we can't afford not to trail a string of treasure hunt directive documentation behind us in case the strategy works for other defections, the more so since secessionist defacation room runs out on and must do away with any and all noncollaboratory privation, to protect against depraved deep-privatory and fierce macho penetration; turning on the beast that tries to haunt, hound and hunt us clowns down calls for mutant messengers to mangle, mix and merge not just nor primairily the most reverendly ancient media but 'core active' transformation of the very toxic substance engulfing them with the younger more vital symbol metabolism of a new time configuration no less than symbiotic kinds.Reconquest and making a stand gets to cover front, news and backwashwaters with a tightness to match the rock of ages known and reported to have said: who is not against me is for me and not: who is not for me is against me, this democratic claim cuts through everything like a golden proporatio whetted tool forged from the amalgamatio of works commensurate with this sample; where is hope were it not for nonpollutant mutant messages; true messengers follow trade routes of life and death, commuting between them and I am honoured to leave my work in the hands of the still and fresher life staff fetching race installment overtakerers. ------- aborted diamonds And yet, what about the sun's diamond building fossil carbon savings suffering expedient quick fix purposes fueling *(ab)*usage? ------- Callahan's, Rickels's, Gilder's and my views in a nutshell Our collective Judeo-christian psyche seems inflationarily upscaled to a global (should this word swap places with christian in this sentence, would it make a difference?) ailment and sees fit to substitute mechanical machines for magical interspecie communicative commensuration (see the very Freudian take on Moses as the chemist-magician by Silvio Gesell for an early example of this sort of luridly manipulative firework with sacrificial ashes to stage sham shamanism). but the contrivances that were ironically enough, conceived of as impartial, tidy and reasonable (rather than keep us smoggily mistified and united in awe), turn out nonetheless to be open and vulnerable to, that is, take and pack, a psychic punch and charge, swayed and directed by as much as at their owner/operaters (surrogatory) engendering designers/builders influence on function. ------- Once we perpetuated, projected, legitimated and commercialized the externalization of traumatic chimerae feeding reactionary dominance and prowess of pride with controlhunger into the bargain, this gadget construction (a favorite Rickelsian term, the style I 'busy' (D) here and lots of the content in this fragment is borrowed from him also) served resource robbery of what was felt as a state of oppressive and threateningly dynamic, much too shifty eco-balance to begin swallowing sacred groves and what they keep sake, shelter and stood for, first to go: their standing, in great gulps. The profit seduction yawns yet attempts to bridge the gap between inventions and innovations in the same lying breath when getting itself in the way of the simple oxide reduction which accumulates soil and the stuff diamonds are made of. The present info-voracity race seems to attempt to catch up with, outdo, even straightjacket, disciplinarily dose and displace (put in the shade by passing satelites (do their shadows cause anything besides rapidly firing propaganda?) rather than stimulate) photons going about their more habitually biomassive business, which is equally man-I-pull-(string)-ul-ation based and boils down to the same old discard and insult to creation. ------- unstoppable waves, unbreakable limbs and now: vacant frequencies?When George Gilder, professional proselytizing prophet, speaks of information services becoming ubiquitous, simultaneous, convergent and emergent for instance, he certainly doesn't stimulate, at most perhaps tries to emulate, with what amounts to mere lipservice which in reality steals, captures, abducts and extracts the vitality from, the bright side of life and its true, fully photosynthetically functioning place in nature, attempting to graft these thus abstracted and -ducted concepts onto an industry that very much meters, pollutes (in its unfortunate modern sense again), supplants, dis- and replaces it, a procedure clothed and cloaked in expensive recombinants of its ravagingly raped savings and resources.

about 'spectrannulius' or: succesfully serial prototapposition

Dear Catojans, I had a web page of which 1/10 part concerned cooperative*(ly cleaned up)* capitalism but the search engines hesitated to index it for a while. Do they bar wolves in sheeps clothing? I'll beat 'm at their game thoroughly enough to set new and reinstate some old rules yet. ------- You guys and LMP feature prominently in the chapter I called: Polite current hing-thing, polytickal trickles for value standards of golden mean proportionate photosynthesis which tickle tackles politicization of currencies and takes on poly tactics. I guess I am on about plain old surplus like Hannah Arendt. George Gilder is featured as well. I read his article in a recent Cato report; it 'raised my hair t'ward mountain' as the Dutch expression has it. Could you send the poor man to come spend a night and day in and around an inhabited windmill, I grew up 7 miles away from 19 of them on a square mile or so, formerly waterpomping ones, and 1 mile from a stockfeedmilling family operation. Even more upsetting was his supposed and alleged fact that "inventions practically create spectrum which has nothing to do with nature". Yeah right! Just like the floods didn't come rolling in from ex nihilo till Noah had his boat good and ready, probably neglecting to mention all the hills around him hadn't a stitch of forest left on 'm far and wide to soak up rain anymore, must a been a hell of a quick and glib global builder as well. Was he buoyed up and bobbing as easily as we can ride spectrum frequencies or are they all cases of breaking limbs to deep-end up without? And nobody had the pleasure of fighting for a stand on his own two feet in a hostile world till Adam was beguiled to make a wrong choice, at perfect liberty to do so, he and his toil turmoiled the soil well it didn't they? No need to take any of these past 4-5 hogs wishywashes seriously, cause they are all based on wrong and appaling paradigm. Gilder's diabolic ability to play similarly speed obsessed Noah has me dancing attendance as rainbow-likely ephemeral and insignificant cause obscure*(d, censored and conveniently ignored)* alter ego. Consider the following quotes: 'spectrum is nature'. 'form is frequency' (I highly recommend Philip Callahan's work available from Acres, USA, a voice for agriculture; a monthly newspaper with 12.000 subscribers from Kansas City, Missouri in this regard; I was on the their office doorstep briefly as I was on yours years ago, characteristically someone took me in for the night there but not at your place) Australia never was Terra Nullius either! Techno prowess never can attain escape velocity to leave its secretive and deceptive repression mechanisms so productive of surrogates and substitutions. Wolves are the perfect shepherds, they cull, trim and tidy the margins of their victims but only under unregulated conditions free of artificial obstacles. I come to tell my poor hypnotized and enchanted fellow wolves (and emperors) to throw off false and fake disguises, their to make believe and quick fix addicting sheepishness of well hidden but not quite so innocent cannibalism, and thus freed from fetters they may pay attention to the infotec analogous sunlight processing helped along most e- and affectively with complementary formation inpacting decomp-activity; flouring rock is mining raw material for biomass and fresh air. Right of way for living root hair fibre over the compared to that, merely sterile selfaggrandizing fiddlement with lividly optic kinds; you don't have to reinvent nature, prevent and/or speed up atrophy with prosthetics. Learn new skills like pleaching for instance, biotecture for the long haul, designed to grow and keep up with the family tree more easily; life span and lightspeed, eh?, yall are so close, take my little nudge free of charge. Lest we will be confronted with the mental if not physical ice age stealing upon us in the blink of an eye it takes to push a button, send this mail, cry wolf and expose imperial privates. I don't mean to scare yall or burst your bubble, just to help you sober up and lend some substance to the fibre photon dance we seem to have collectively decided in favor of or have we? Can democracy protect minorities and voiceless, minute but proportionately major participants in the chain-toggle-tug of beings? How's that for a more appealing punchline? And now that I'm at it: rockgrinding to use the dust weatherment as itself and sunshine metabolizing receptacle would not limit information processing efficiency to more laboriously and precarious though profitable harnessing the speed of light, but to the prudent provision prowess of soilbank depositing it, succesrates may perhaps not so much boost, but rec- and justify sharemarket optimism much better than anything yet since not only people but the them thus more easily, naturally and healthily underpinned and spun off supply lines for foodchainladder climes and climbs used, regulated, determined and done by all climbers from micropopulations on up in profuse myriads choice. Between the vast regions of inner and outer compulsion lies a land or runs a fine faultline at least of choice. Why expose ourselves to danger and precipitate the reign rainy days we neglect to lay up and away store for? Gilder knows a lot about dangerous males and well he should since he is a prototypical arcangelic one of them, a once and future king and I his dawnfilled, mournful fool. -------

Add on from early summer 98: Gilder's advocacy legitimates, wants to tame, harmess, mount or saddle up, iow seems sure to burden and bog down the so far supposedly useless, wild and free (therefore) energetic 'carrier bandwidths with a cascading cavalry (cash value) which seems comparable to capture and domestication; well I am on my way down, descending the pyramid of bioindustrious follies which Holland of all countries has piled to absurd heights and I would hate to see history repeat itself

Callibration of the masses

The sexual politics of most herds, hordes, harems, hives and other descendants of prime feminine, sunny and social charm, show dominance inflicted selection rendering them scarce (progressively and pronouncedly more suppresive with age, witness the 'social' insects), this seems an undesirable macho mothered exposure restrictions causing the majority and/of marginalized masses to live within and through miserly means. The safety in numbers appears to segregate gender and substitute feminine charm with fear feeding brutality but we will need an aeon of focus before being able to tell for sure if the psycho-mechanical pressure fascist variety of policed species such as ours suffers from is the price payed for evolutionary success of havoc, mayem and macho games. It is certain that circumstances are easily modifiable, even by simple yet social and sexual measures, but the process just described is delayed, and so far only evaded by Bonobo's (see 'Demonic males'). ------- Monogamy is not always a sign of abundance like it seems to be among similar birds inhabiting differently endowed environments; they disperse in the case of abundant nesting opportunity but congregate where nestingtrees are scarce with all the cuckoldry and raucousness that entails. ------- Treeleaves, oceanwaves, birdflocks moving together as one, quarries, factory floors, battlefields; patchinko halls, arcades, computer keyboards moving together has begun, do I nurse and savor solitude, is my race already run?

Shamanic panic and the massive *(bene)*factor

Inventiveness works, but in our case aggravatingly so, cause we seem to make dire necessity bear more both mothered and mechanical misfits with mounting labourpains and crisisrates; what's worse and obvious, these antics are not only harmfull for ourselves but even to the same simpler ones among the very silent majority of fellowbeings we would be smart to realize our, however much begrudged, dependence upon, instead of fooling ourselves with the frantic and costly attempt to emancipate ourselves from them (did you know even a man like Einstein did not need to go to the stars physically to feel their influence?). Fact is that their needs are by the same token such that we can easily fullfil them emptying rock which when wavewashed and particlerolled through the foodchain, has by that time snowballed to prove itself as our and everyone's very one and only, our own internal*(ized)*, signifying protection and best source to mobilize more true strenght from. ------- When you skip a few lowly preliminary stages where the real rub is and should be, no amount of good will and intentions is good enough until it has helped retrace your steps and stamina to this most humbly graceful aging staging, yes I am not such a hands off man after all eh? Meanwhile relativation gets harder as well as more urgent on the move headed for the roots of making the difference that makes a change for the better to them as well. So I try to waste no more time on fighting the former futilities and focus on solutions for the latter direction, starting with a mimic of the most ancient, ongoing and basic one of rock in water.

Jesus and Cernunnos
Memory of the West's very own, early though now nearly forgotten, more modestly powerful and pragmatic parallel to Jesus's in contrast ambitiously overwrought (cause against all odds) peaceful project: traffic control between vertical as well as lateral life and death (which is merely abstract bloodless symbolism by now, like saying: go west) as high- and spotlight star of the present interglacial period for temperate Europe ruled as a Mercury and Apollo assisted God (Cernunnos), a first rate voluntary and -rizing foodchaingang member since he made, bagged and spread powder with the help of a torqued ramheaded snake (most peaceful use of metal tools for rock's thirst to slake). This 'Lord of animals' got sculpted as someone letting a bag of wealth not merely symbolizing coin of the terrestrial realm run out on- and into the ground (was this merely a rare kind of poetic license from the experienced sculptor who was very aware of what his chips and dustpuffs did to the places they landed on?) thus interessentially pouring the most basic and administerable mineral mess as love offer habitually and ritually for the benefit of all beings from single cell on up the vertical trade traffic route right of way between in- and animate *(s)*existence.

Many of these entries begin with the same colour throughout (black in this case) wherein I denote the dates, subjects, adressees and characterizations if and when provided.
Most of this got written straight off the cuff and must (therefore) be easier to follow than the ornament*(at)*ed, longer and longer winding, more and more winding, multiply in-, con- and evoluted material elsewhere at this site.

you mention a number of references but not the to me most obvious one:
Walter Russell, represented at www.philosophy.org.
You mention 'your theory' at it may well be but it should perhaps enter the books as a refinement of Russell's, he is condemned to antecedence since dead already. I will enter a link (in the Russell region) to you soon, saying this is my kind of time telling.

some correspondence with CERJ (Center for equity and restorative justice; a one man operation with a couple of hundred subs): called: "native peoples, justice and death penalties" preceding the following I mailed him the yellow rap introducing the yellow links in the commendablinklist.htm: this is where my doubts come in. I believe the death penalty is not in the least an unreasonable thing to ask for in cases like these (not that anybody does). It was a common (sense) thing amongst most indiginous peoples and a murderer would even be required to commit suicide (see "in search of the primitive" by ... Diamond)

Date:Thu, 11 Feb 1999 16:56:51 -0000; To: nattir@post.tau.ac.il (some israeli person involved with youthful offenders and conflict resolution): scuse me my man but I can't resist pointing out a ref to you: guest_appearances/intro_to_currency_issues.htm; go down to where the contents list for "a way out of the monetary chaos" by Walter Zander sits and waits. ----- Zander fled to England from Germany during the war and later lived in Israel. I don't know anything other than that he wrote a book about Jerusalem and was trying to advocate some sort of ecumenism there, completely forgetful of his earlier subject matter it seems. I think it will go a long way toward preventing problems and creating emblems people can feel and fend for peacefully. yours respectfully

This one went out on the instigation and encouragement of the CERJ list: Date: Wed, 10 Feb 1999 09:02:48 -0000 --- To: khawk@bop.gov: ms. hawk, director of the bureau of prisons. I do and do not envy your job. More and more do I follow the fates of inmates for a fact, via sites carrying the word justice in it mostly. ----- I have some long gestating and tenacious ideas of my own about restorative justice which tie in with some of the old rock breaking routines during earlier versions of penitential activity, except I hope to weave many voluntarizing and very literally all round satisfying factors into me updated solution. ----- This said I can get down to what really concerns me now: the cathartic benefit an acknowledgement of mistakes might have in a case like say: Leonard Peltier. ----- The american public will forgive you such a human act easily. Times have changed and face saving scapegoats for lack of culprits are, especially in the case of Native Americans, who are enjoying and riding a rising tide of sym- of not yet enough empathy, an insupportable anachronism. Times are not far off when a rising percentage of white folks outside of Europe will realize they have been yoked to herdy/hoardy exploitation purposes and try to dissociate themselves from such a desert bearing ethic. Just a matter of finding provisionary occupations for our ballsiest braves who in larger numbers end up occupying prisons instead. Stem the tide, disown the disowners, do not tolerate the intolerant!

Prescript:--hi, I still seem to be getting lots of inCERJengies but oh well, no hurry I guess. An impression of the 3 day, international "next 5 minutes" conference in A'dam, a series of strategizing sessions in order to help activists make tactical use of modern media.
Reports on 2 of the poorly atttended movie presentations: "La pitie dangereuses" (dangerous pity; on the history of crisis relief) and "Slam" (on the DC slammer):
To see the whole range of humanitarian aid since the last century (starting with the Huegenots) pass by in a series of well cut still and moving pictures and to follow the birth and evolution of 'red cross', 'oxfam' and 'doctors without borders' distorted, abused, manipulated bumped, bruised and shouldered aside by and through the machinations of power and megalomaniac "paraditors" with the 'highlights' of dislocated and starving peoples during that time shown within an hour or so is a devastatingly humbling and unconstructively crumbling experience (see http://members.tripod.com/~poetpiet for the opposite). Indeed we humans followed advice that turned out to be a trap. We went to the ants and got inspiration for the art of war....
On Slam (or slammer): It is a movie about a DC cannabis dealer who ends up in jail and thanks to this poetry performance gets bailed out by the heavy's who were closing in on him just as he burst into his declamation (and what a declamation it was!) A piece of poetry so well set and done that I screamed out at the top of my lungs in the *(un?)*luckily nearly empty theater. I will be mighty grateful if somebody could post the text of that rap on the net. I've just unsubbed from the conflict resolution list but maybe somebody could crosspost this for me. ------ Maybe I'll search for it but last time I tried such a thing (the texts of Danny Kaye) I had no luck. It probably needs to be transcribed from a vcr rental tape), the movie ends with a near vertical shot up the DC monument by night, where he (the star, called ray) has run for a breather after his debut poetry performance (about running and timing, lives and times) the weekend before having to go hear the judge slam at least a couple years from him. I have never heard or seen a better and more vividly suggestive series of illustrative hints that some hi holies around a table shared and chaired by a central intelligence/law enforcement/arms dealers pacts did indeed decide that a simple way to put away blacks, return to weird kind of slave labour (whites working to save blacks from getting their hands dirty as if to right what was an equally but other way around) and control an otherwise too unmanagably energetic population, would be to bait 'm with drugs, bullets and expensive clothes; an explosive cocktail designed to scare everybody into coughing up the price (and profits) of incarceration

Its activities include donations of clothing and toys (such as shown above) to Dagara children, and the construction of waterwells, and water reservoirs to help fight the drought, sickness and extreme poverty in Africa. Its leaders include Malidoma Somi and Sobonfu Somi. This web explains the purposes of Echoes of the Ancestors, its charitable activities, and provides some information about the wisdom of the Dagara, and their chief spokes"men" for the West, Malidoma and Somi.

Dear piet B, Thank you for sending me this message. As a short comment to what you wrote I would like to tell you that FPCN (Friends of Peoples Close to Nature) strictly opposes such kind of activities as what "Echo of the Ancestors, Inc" are carrying out. FPCN sees the work of "Echo of the Ancestors, Inc" amond the Dagara as an essential contribution to the ethnocide of this peoples.
1. Speaking from our experiences we do not assume that the group is working in a non-profit manner, as does none of the hundred thousands of missionary and development (also kind of missionary work) organizations.
2. Giving clothing and toys and constructing water wells in saying to preserve wisdom of the peoples is a very dishonest.
3. Human beings are born and live naturally naked. Severe punishment threats, ordered and implemented by a rather small gang of aggressive people in hunger for unlimited power and control over others, have forced milliards of innocent people into clothing as almost everywhere the first step towards ethnocide. Tribal independance means first of all having an independant control of the law system.
4. Giving toys is simply a stupid thing. There was never and there is never a need for toys, but there was always and will always be a need for autonomous land fof tribal peoples. Human right gangs, like "Echo of the Ancestors, Inc", suppress the demands for land in favour of dealing with stupid things.
5. Only unscrupulous and irresponsible people without any concern with a nature dig water wells in the Sahelian zone to get the ten thousands of years old water in the ground with the effect of powering the waterlevel again and so causing the dead of the last trees and other vegetation. this in not a help to fight the drought, sickness and extreme poverty in Africa, as insuggerated, but just the contrary.
6. Help FPCN to fight dangerous and desastrous gangs like "Echo of the Ancestors, Inc".
In case that there are questions on what I wrote, please do not hesitate to contact me again in this matter. I speak after having been living in Black-Africa for in total 10 years, also in far West Africa.
We also welcome any informations about activities of groups similar to that of the "Echo of the Ancestors, Inc". Regards, Hartmut Heller, Freunde der Naturvšlker / Friends of Peoples Close to Nature, Maxgrund 22, D-21481 Lauenburg, Germany; Tel.: (+49) 4152-871851, Fax :(+49) 4152-871875

The 'Friends of Peoples Close to Nature' is a movement of groups and individuals, concerned with the survival of savage tribal peoples and their culture, in particular hunter-gatherers. These were the first and are the last societies on earth to have a non-exploitative relationship with the natural word. Our task is to help them preserve their unique cultures from enforced assimilation, alien religions, the ideologies of 'progress' and 'growth' and absorption into the global economy.

Hi klaus (eurodos@xs4all.nl); maker of a big but I think rather clumsy site with his thesis in fotoscans, etc, not to mention his chronic and flairsome paranoia): I would like to try give you some constructive criticism. The first thing one notices on your site is the fact that a lot of demands are made on top of a mountain or liberal sprawl of money used as a background. Are there any responsibilities to go with those privileges or as you might like to defend basic rights?

probably in for a tough time hanging on to my intro promo bonus prophetics, but by all decent standards these are just a starvlings handout rather than a pushers bait, like unto present day rates of and ratings for biomass accumulation; mere piddlings compared to maxactive multi-story-chlorophyl vibrancy momentarily hampered by rampant poisoning. It's only a justly discovered stone stow away, so, yes, good will yet come of our capacity to think things through our maze a ways. -------------- The scale skip-, hop-, jump-, and shifting golden mean ratio stratifies and extends the reach and range of your vocal cordiality's ringing web and flow guiding what can ripen and grow. ------- On a good day I can put about 98 syllables in one deep breath, is that articulate enough? ------ Fantastic forces for biomass replace frictitious fiction for bullets: See 'The language crystal' by Lawrence William Lyons for more of the following, little obvious and much hidden significance: 'G-ra-dualist; g is gravity, ra is light in egyptian and evil in Hebrew. From our first use for fire to the start of the New Millenium we had a singular direction. Our goal was to find a way to leave the Earth before its eventual death. So during Phase two, our mind-set was suited to the development of technology, but not beneficial to biology. When primates first intuited that the earth was going to die, we could not be mentally free until we had proven that space travel was possible. Now we know that we can save the human race. But the techno spin-off along the way has left us with some nasty habits that are now ruining our health and the environment. Our cosmic knowledge rests in every cell of every organism. Yet, the dividing line in terms of language is where our preconscious answers are reflected in archetypical stories. Our early dreams of flying were aimed at space. And we experimented on ourselves. We burned our witches in one era and radiated our patients in the next to test the limits of human flesh, to prepare for space travel. We confused the bio and techno realms and we did not know that we were being ruled by our own fear of fire." ------ Working hell up and out overhead: We are soil organisms and float on a giant safetynet bubble that runs on photosynthesis, tell this truth to a famously prolific and subversively promiscuous yet visionary philosopher like Lyotard and the man will defend using it all (up if necessary) in order to emancipate ourselves and escape before this precious process ceases to function as all natural resource mechanisms seem to, some time or other, but this doctrine is conducive to neglecting the same dangerous difference between sawing the limb we sit on and waiting till it is so old we drop off with it. Optimize, set aside and safeguard a supply and reserve that will tie us over our orphandom, which, by the way is far enough off to not worry about it so hard (see 'Genisis continuous' by /~hardy from NZ). -------- Matter and magic to mind and match (Warburg, Aby) Ever since vocalizing mimicry and animation came about, the subject object division of playing favorites got started as emotional bonding or early warning systems like alarm sounding soon to allow food find scans, coordinated escape, attack and making a stand, not necessarily in that order. We got around to abstract, symbolize, freeze, reserve, suppress and proliferate some of all that to allow for discipline and subsequent invasive migration that overran everything as severely as or worse than an ice age does. -------------- According to Keyserling the grammatical categories, each having as many manifestations as the number they are asisgned (at least in German as a most fully filled out and in lingo); thus correct, complete and timely sentences present the relevant combinations. His rules even apply to the astro-aspects and time qualities of hairsplittingly precise interacting karmascopes of casual conversants.-------- The symmetree word began the yet unfinished move from paradisial primal screams, hums and grunts to multiob- and -subjectivities past each stage scaling of the unspeakably singular pivot as action pack lack remedy (or remedy pack for action lack), actively attracting emotion lotion destined to solve the incoherently knotted physical as well as mental riddles, that is to say: lessen static chaos to crystalize and cohere languages with and of meaning (to match, (p)reflect and (p)replace that of minerals) with dislexicly dynamic feint and poetic penetration.. Some few resonance and wordmechanics (Joyce, Lyons and me) have dog gone done begun to be on duty with spare time to do prepare and set to run, they designed a hybrid between a fire engine, sprinkler, pen and gun to put a spell on matter, make time fly, show its tensile strenght and stun. -------- What is the use of recording our sins on paper and woodpulped-print-push them around, does that ground them very radically, take 'm back to the source, redeem them? Jesus said to return the Emperor's vouchsaving tokens and see what they stand for, bankfailures became as common as the maligning sacrifice and succesion of any and every oversized figurehead, succumbing to the temptation of massive convenience, comparable to good concept and metaphor hollow and wear out. We need tribal authority, redemptive jubilees and local voluntarism, read on. I am writing this to deflect and redirect energy from war no less than useless reads and writs but you must have guessed that by now. ------- One must not be offended if the best, most obvious ideas don't take at a gentle hint, a hazy allusion, a foggy nudge or a polite suggestion, it must also match gravity and outdo inertia, which takes no less than enthused infectious *(s)*example. The good and right theme is always worth rephrasement during monstration to meet the moment; prepeatment and proiteration must always prove the liveliness of it. ------- The warring factions of undifferentiated, jadedly defaced memory triggered by resonating constellations that rewheel how we prevolve and *(e)*vent clamor for new *(w)*ages. Watch out, flying phrases with stitches loose, whoa, big one coming on to be re-, de-, e-, and post valved. Is discerning speech the cutting edge or healing mediator between fragrance and stench, enthusiasm and the fall or will an internet dump do to effect the affect inflection in fact? --------- Donald Mccloskey:

> A co-co*(on)*sequent metaphor caters to the other 3 main pillars of rhetoric; narrative, logic and fact.

About Joyce: Wordsurfaces wear and tear being much like mental roads and byways. A word is a sound scape, a shape one fishes out of a full spectrum soup, a mental moraine which people like Joyce manage to stir, refresh, abrade, remagnetize and compostpound to new fertility, the various fequencies for dust, slime, grit, debris and decay turning up the humble but densely populated crumble a new crop of shades and hues of every colour, a proleafic meaning deliverance, a stratified, graduated and staged sumphony of words as rocks, as dusts, as muds, floodprecipitants, as composts and as reproductively mutating entities, combining near and far, ancient and promising, the bird business of storm whipped wheeling and quip slipping quills.--------- PS. Why don't Joyce commentators mention the most obvious inspiration for wordplay: his father's drunken slurring? Are they too polite? Or is naming the maso-homo spiting spirit of biowarfare malady for and then of natives in the oldest truely multicultural society in Europe, the same as has run a lot of indiginous cultures aground, a faux pas, a taboo, an unmentionable, a trigger for too much selfconsciousness and unmournatornable guiltquilt cakecrust crookruntiness? ------ To proffer confessions of good faith it must ripen into conferrance of profussions for faith manifesting as choice voice over noice; vivification over vilifaction, vivacious variety over vile and vulgar vice.--------- Joyce reveals and exposes one kind of encryption using another: phase angle and trains of thought track switch flips, tumble twists, unravelling and refolding, tearing and reknotknitting (phase lock) stitches. In a way it all stretches time and spins planets into some arbitrary web (since they wouldn't last long enough to revolvable evolve to the position given through the co-ordinatating assembly and line up of the expresser, composer, becoming as efficient as a faulty web spun by a spider on drugs). -------- Symbolic attrition cut down to size reduction; ---------- joyce's charm and danger, occult dirision ----- multiply mutilating acculturation plexstrained. ------- Overextended, selfinflating deviousness ------- turned into sieviourness (sieve in your niche). ------- Advertizing is cynical, tabooobreaking, evocative, banking on and building peoples will, desire and eagerness to invest in a chain of elusive surrogates. The ad world succeeds in doing this cause the conflation of a generally just, upbeat and so popular, accertainably profitable and certainly attainable since way a while already well established kind of direction tangle and wrangle comes to be represented by halting, faltering partial and misleading stages and their suppositionally preliminary products ('needed' for being) on the way there. We rupture life rather than death (how many times do I mention this altogether?).

This age old quandary of the idiotically nonsymbiotic symbolizations that intend to indicate and reach emancipation from (which as a rule turns out to be a Midas type isolation once there), remind of but destroy desire for not in- but merely adduced unfolded fullfillability of and for understandings, -writings and -pinnings. This tendency was made all the easier cause more traditional timeframes were mixed, rearranged, stretched, bent, morphed, randomized and taken more lightly thanks to a range of influences, from shamanistic through innovative, linguistic through mechanical. These my forerunning taboo breakers and potentool makers I hereby heartily thank and severely try correct. ------- Joyce as most obsessed specialist in matters of linguistic multiculturalism (the reward or punishment for which is the erosion of languages worldwide from his uppering the prestige of Angleash), in the sense of specialized ultimate encrypter, embalmer, perverter and succesful punner blazed a trail for the overhaul and abrogation of slowly accumulated banks and barriers, sentient or no, which raged like a wildfire since his days and life's end, looking like an all out demolition, wether or not schumpeterian and scienfictough. ------- Joyce was captured by and never escaped, even unleashed, condoned and legitimated ultimate encryptian, disembodiment, multiculturalism, rootlessness and confusion (especially after he died); an idiocy based on the proliferating exploration and bataillesk excesses priviligingly permitted to as much as mercilessly imposed upon all intoxicating charm and magnetism, certainly not yet emancipating in any sustainable way, the simpletonic backthrow and 'hark to an earlier, more innocent and insecure, relative infertility of hybrids is the exploitative aim of workforce rulers one and all. And all industry leading up- and into the elaboranth of cloying cloisterment where one gets caught in coils of red tape and bleach, blanch blendbland symbolshuffling land. ---------- I, other than Joyce, depict convolutions of white and black as not so chaotic as all that, nor their interaction as so uncontrollable; I hope to show 'm ineluctably random too, yet recursively personalizable. Did he cut down walls or riddle 'm with peepholes to reveal underlying and relatively longerlasting laws? He burrowed into and undermined mountains, I 'merely' roller coastabilize 'm. ------ There is a war on trees world gone haywire and awheez we croak for lack of taking a humbling and yet fullfire fillable crack at rock while 'fake it' finances finnagle and finish the last stands and stances of old growth under the aeon old adage: no lord, no logo, no law without a gun, 'at's what we want instead of all this foliage, foreskin and fun NFIANEABFM: no fruit in and not even a backyard for me; enclose, curtail and cut, keep the world shut and manupilate the mut.

Dead end Joyce or dead and joyous:

In the book: Joyce and the Jews, its author Ira Nadel repeatedly sums up a number of 'prejudices' against and stereotypes of Jews; she herself comes to the conclusion that the accusations of contempt fostering exclusivity, expropriation, displacement, usurpation, annexation, co-opting and subverting of rite, rote and territory are applicable to what Joyce does with the languages he (as likely as not) immolates. ------- Against this trope speaks the fact that his efforts are a kind of self effacing, poly-perverse, pluramorphous egostumble and humbling crumbling, which is why he was considered as obscene as children are naturally. He wanted and often managed to prove that unbroken, nonbreaking continuity along realistic, lawful and linguistic lines of succesion need not depend on rigidity and singling out the dominant bulk or spinrates of (solar) consistency but can be construed, understood and handled as quite fluid. ------- Bland repetitions in literature are like exxageration, hollowing wear and inflation (M Osteen). Joyce avoids this with outrageous and painstaking compunction, what with all of his constitutional secrecy, he does not concentrate on creating (an in my sense of the word) pertinent surplus value exclusively (if at all (what has academia ever done to stop and reverse desertification)), adding grace notes and graduations, stepping stones and jumpoff points, vistas and swinging ropes, nets, weaves, etc, without introducing and intruding upon and the tips or mere frays and frills of strands of veils which lift, crumble, expode on occasion and unravel in the course of rollcalling a wild array of associations only some of which have a personal, emotivated, closetskeleton, grudge and insult sort of origin. ------ He tied the two extremes of language, being by definition a communicative, sharable, hence social phenomenon on the one hand to the imposing attritions and repressions that concepts are subjected to within as well as upon persons spanning generations and territories. I would go as far as to say: no antisemite understands what he is trying to be on about and suffers from until he has read some late Joyce (and lots of Graves).

These tribes lived in a maelstrom of emotions going public, media gaining and lending power; the pull/push of herd/hoard dualism causing the Jew to feel like a fish in water, the troubledness of it was as ugly as obvious; fishes have never been caught.... to feel.... very much...nor well lately .....anymore. ------ The root hair of Acquarius is dawning with a legacy of communication skills which need to find a way back to vitality instead of just being and/or albeit spectacularly perpetrating yet remaining nothing but Bataillan excess. It requires a swimming against the stream, sentientizing fluids, following you dream.....

He was tempted to seperate her from it though, wielding his penis like an arm, a harmcharm, a talking bauble-club, a sneeky snake. Pay her back her whiles lasting the Eve of his era. ----- Was babylon to set the super phallus ababbling? No the previous diversity constituted a single harmony of bottom line diversity with many a brook abubble. Is the grand unifying babylon abandoned? No, mega efforts to merge and fuse come to a (nuclear!) head more and more regularly. --------- Did these same Bible compilers think ants and termites wise? Yes. Were they really? No! So many incompatible orientations forced to fit a mold will mutilate the gentle in favor of the agressive components which are after supremacy in the first place, they shape a manglefold instead of being subjected to an untangle mold, Thus the in itself viable mechanism: migration loses its discriminating, refining, progressive, honing and fine tuning promise when decoupled from its form, frequency and function evoked gravitation toward likeminded and resonanting wayfarers; to not be forcible bundled but to bundle forces must be the aim when desired result is a closable and coherent front, an at least internally emancipating and harmonically diversifying hi tech middle ages restagement. ------ Whojew the blowjoe reached towards the hardest, holiest and heaviest blessings first, almost the right stuff but alas a merely unsustainable quick fix: ashes the fiery 'burnt offerings' way; no feathers, paper lanterns and icy brilliance holy enough to prevent suffering an enrollment in a ball and chain effective frantic antic drain straining jewels out of and as soon as done discarded as *(k)not a( )*gain rock. Many of these entries begin with the colour white wherein I denote the dates, subjects, adressees and characterizations if and when provided.

Most of this got written straight off the cuff and must (therefore) be easier to follow than the ornament*(at)*ed, longer and longer winding, more and more winding, multiply in-, con- and evoluted material elsewhere at this site.

I would like to know the reasons for the latter and give a suggestion for improvement on the former (first). http://listserv.acsu.buffalo.edu/archives/albanews.html is a list with specs about size which is usefull especially on slower machines. Waiting for a meager 2 lines when you are scanning a few months worth is frustrating not to mention expensive for some. Your response/follow up specs, on the other hand so far simply bead up a long line of zeros to emphasize and hammer on the curious fact there are none. Why? Is it cause we are all right and nobody needs contradiction, correction or even support? Is it cause we're all solipsists and the more isolated the deeper we penetrate the global air strikes, strokings, waves, impacts and/or sharings caresses? At http://csf.colorado.edu/lists/pen-l/ where they are struggling with software switches now (making things worse so far in my opinion) there are some very hotted up and steamy exchanges while your thread function is completely unausgelasted, useless and idle!!! I have long since realized and witnessed that intellectual life is thriving and lively in some favored spots and disposition 'Stateside' whereas the uneducated are degenerating at breakneck speed; they just get fattter, lazier, scareder, and more violent. All of which reflects the larger range and momentum, the greater amounts of time spent at and devoted to extremes of ....you name it: weather, character, health, sickness....in occupied first people land (well, relatively anyway; enough to still (s)tone set and to have done so for thousands of years to come I doubt not)

A little while after the above I noticed the following passage in one of the ensuing posts:

> "I don't see any economic logic for the IMF in having the industrial capacity of Yugoslavia destroyed. The Yugo working class is more productive with capital, not without it. Profits and income to rentiers are more likely with capital. Destroying it makes no sense from an economic standpoint. -------- Somewhere along my progression (at least I think that what it was) from thinking, studying and searching for centrally cooked up and implemented solutions to peripheral ones with central verification at most (and the more so the less encrypted it will be though specially at the start multilang waged), I came across an explanation of war and capital equipment destruction by Silvio Gesell who said that the to hoarding and amassing inclined (who and/or which planetoid isn't or becomes no speck agglomorating hoover past a certain scale and size; that comes with the territory whose bounds are reckoned in aeons and qwillions of biles trifled) need to cut 'm off at the pass that is before the earning powers pay off all small fry debt and start buzzing like a real routinizing charismass (kermis is fair; kerm is groan and the routinization of charisma is a Weber formula for the march of progress which Plato tried to speed by banning poets letting 'm hide and ride along in his solids though, and) which impressed Pynchon enough to make it a life and death struggle. funny how rights, duties and pleasures get confused and disintegrate instead of boosting and buoying each other. When our rights to self-determination and tradition are overruled by neighbours/invaders, the old duties/pleasures of passing on some secure knowledge erode at an equal pace. Now, if your rights are interpreted by a hybrid and to you alien standard, you don't smoothly live up and/or into a situation where your soul and spirit find meaning in the world. Jewish people have an ossified branch which hold tradition sacred at an all cost peril. Fanaticism comes from the desire to restore stuff (often mistaking results for causes and monotony for stability), long memories and devaluing perceptions. In an international court of law with any sort of clout, all whities would have to repatriate before and if they want to earn a right to push back the fundamentalislamic front at their rapidly fraying edges the way they think they are allowed to; and that goes for both russia (chechenia) and the states

(Yugoslavia). Hanging garden fanaticism is not a feudal society's thing I guess. I once had a job surveying for a desalinated water pipeline system in Saudi Arabia, but it's been decades and I hear of no forests having been planted, nor do I hear much good news on this issue from Oceania.

I am still a faithful visitor there but after repeatedly trying to contact him the following outburst and dambreak was a relief. If it ended up in the shamus file i am sorry and will correct it as soon as i can. I am quite logged way back on corrections I am afraid since I have hardly any access to the type of equipment which can do that for me. Current and conventional wisdom seems to indicate that the alphabet, defined as the system of a small batch of phonograms named for its first two characters, 'alef and beth, has origins in the north-western area of Semitic nations extant in the fourth millenium back from ourselves. Who specifically devised the alphabet, and it shows signs of concious design more than a blind evolution although it draws from various pre-existant writing systems for some of its symbols, the origins and originator are a deep mystery. The first alphabetic inscriptions are graven in Sinaitic mines and on cups and sword-hilts found in the hills above the Jordan's west banks. This would seem to indicate a movement toward literacy by soldiers, slaves, prisoners, and bandits, or at least by their associates. The alphabet seems to have been a rebellious reaction to the elitist guilds of the highly trained scribes who used very complex and difficult systems of writing which were unavailable to the rest of society. There was good reason for the originator*(s)* of the alphabet to remain anonymous.

>Thus we simply do not know who created the alphabet, and the Sinaitic mines and hill country west of the Jordan and east of the sea were areas you were likely to run into all the worst sorts from the Levantine, Pontian, Two Rivers, and Mediterranean communities. The mines were likely to be Egyptian owned and managed, but the mine workers were of all nationalities, including Semites and Hittites, the former group including proto-Jews along with Canaanites and Moabites and others, while the Hittitic people in the Levant were Indo-Europeans who wrote with a Semitic script! It was exactly this mishmash of all of our greatgrandparents which both demanded a simplified universal writing system, and which made it possible by a universal selection of speakers onsite. So to say that the alphabet is the invention of anyone or any society is inaccurate. The closest truth to claiming, for better or worse, that the alphabet is the invention of the Jews is that the Jews are a Semitic people, and that the alphabet first appeared in the north-western territory of the Semites as they existed around 3500 years ago. That alphabet was soon adopted and spread by Semitic peoples, but it is not the Jews who are identified with the diaspora of the proto-Sinatic alphabet, but that is rather credited to the Canaanites and the Phoenicians. If one is tempted to say, well that's the same as the Jews, then one should reread some of the more unpleasant parts of the Bible.

I refer to R Graves's evidence of Jews being most skilled and practiced of all peoples in this part of the world when it comes to depicting and using women as sexobjects for and to deliver future subjects. I am a great admirer of the sexappeal oriental women have in general and in more massive proportions (figuratively speaking) than other cultured peoples females, (speaking from very poor and timidity limited though not untravelled experience). That said, I would like to pose that women are, contrary to what you assert, the ones with the better sym- and empathy for the wild, unruly and spontaneous, whereas again inversely proportioned, older males cause, represent and perpetuate the repressive strictures in the bloodshedding and -curdlingly unimaginative and brute way which you shove onto the accounts of women. If they are dumbed down, it is men's work, just as when their leeway is lushed it must be a love's lane leader's, a lank loan lender's....

A case in point: I don't know where exactly other than in an old account of aboriginal life, I came across the story about a folkmore which stipulated the killing of male mixed breed offspring but not the female ones. Now, if that story is not proof positive of the exact opposite you try to find us examples for and tell us so eloquently, I can't think of one that would top it. (continued right after the break)

Perhaps he lived such a sheltered life that the remote control could always remove such things at convenience. In places with clashing lifestyles at close quarters though, the friction is quite literally wearing to say the least.

I will quote a curious sentence and apply the "mythogolem" I so profusely spelled out in my older files (prime you for it and premind you of it):

> "Like our personal dreams, myths or communal dreams tend to express the repressed: especially the dark side of our ambivalence toward what any status quo demands we believe, and more often than not, think we do. In patriarchal ages, therefore, literature pays tribute to matriarchal....."

His: "express repressed.." becomes in my nomenclature: to size reduce is to preduce to expose 'dark' innards, high pressure and surface tension of rock is to make it amenable to photosynthetic reduction. Rock relaxation is lock 'freesexation'. His "..dark side of our ambivalence.." must of course have something to do with passive reactionary resistance, a dependence on being moved by rather than moving anything. Yes indeed the status quo requires us to believe and sure, more often than not (makes us) think we 'beleave'.... Fiedler suffers from the inoculation and vaccination doctrine; the Jewish immunization trick which dictates them to dream up the worst and yet defy such prophecy to become selffullfilling.

My tripod password has been changed and my page either moved (kidnapped) and/or erased. I have backups of the older material but not the most recent month or so and would therefore like to know if I can retrieve it somehow, not to merely mention but emphasize I find this a bit of a criminal joke, especially since they decided to do this on my birth day as a welcome to the real world gift I suppose????

to: nettime-owner@nettime.org: hi yall, my page has been hacked/censored (?). On my birthday! Welcome to reality. Can any hackers out there help find out why (if the tripod abuse service which should be working on it now) cannot tell me)? Hope it was good for you while it lasted. Don't have back-ups for the last month's changes. May all saboteurs and (other than non-imposing electronic) omb-busiers be damned to the type of chain-gang chores I envision. PS: I would like to know if it pretty easy to recover someone's password for people with easy access to the machine one uses. I have been operating from a public terminal in the Library of Amsterdam. I should have known what was coming to me when scolding the little puberty vibe ridden up and coming digital musclers about their (perhaps inintentional mistakes but in that situation surely to be termed) sabotage.

I added this on later today: DATE: Thu, 03 Jun 1999 01:32:59; From: "piet "rotsstof" B" <poetpiet@hotbot.com> To: abuse@tripod.com, winter@primeline.com, thouart@ix.netcom.com, knowware@istar.ca: ....not to merely mention but emphasize I find this a bit of a criminal joke, especially since 'whoever' decided to do this on my birth day ....as a welcome to the real world gift praps I suppose???? -------- Is this what I get for being trusting enough to use a public terminal even though adolescent pubers experiment away trying to muster and bolster digital muscle, deriving senses of pride and accomplishment from the ability to fool people not to mention make 'm all cue and back-up while the umpteenth repair needs doing due to clumsyness and/or wild guess?? -------- I scolded such a would be saboteur when I caught him fooling with the programmature (and thought I had a right to since I had been so friendly with him and in his confidence before. But I know that is not a very good balance even though equally extreme. I know I don't enjoy being praised by me dad in the morning only to be scolded in the afternoon. I'd rather do without both) and told him people like that should be banished from the country. Some criminals of his particular ethnicity actually are here from Holland so that remark may have irked more than it was meant to but I still maintain that hacking to limit access is bad and to increase it is good. Wild guesses should be made at home. -------- Did you even see my work while it was up. Could anybody but the rich and powerful and/or stuck up Jews ever take offense enough to hire a hacker?? .... and I can come up with some strongly incriminating evidence which prompts me to pop the following question to you (no real need to read the next tiresomely detailed, in so far as I can piece it together, and sad account) as follows: Can you determine if the hack (destroying both pages mentioned below) came from this here very terminalwhere both have been added onto for the last month or so? me, maker of:
http://members.tripod.com/~poetpiet/
Blabsabs_Index.htm
and the chess player/astronomer's page:
http://members.tripod.com/ wessali/Page1.htm
The chess player (blessed with small stature and wooden moves) is one of the people making avid use of this very terminal from where both I and the now even more strongly accused adolescent (besides an average of at least 10-20 people daily) operate. Mustafa, the moroccan puberty (and praps migrantitis sufferer), a tripod member, after my example by the way, has expressed antipathy to this man (the plot doth thickon) who lost prerogatives at the place (elsewhere in A'dam) we both had (and still do have) a sub to net acces (restricted to up- and downloading, reading, copying and printing with wordpad to help at most). Funny enough, Mustafa has stuck his new design attempts in my folder. Seems like a cloak and dagger tactics to me. It is not in the least suprising that the frustratingly powerless position and status of allochthonous puberty starts to find cheap thrill amusement in as much as (in my case so easily raised) irritation, friction and havoc as they may inflict with a flick of the postmodern virtual wrist. No sweat! One sees these kids walk around in spotless down jackets as if they need never..... They sort of save it all up to fuel the adrenalin bursts descending upon the poor public transport servants in tram and on the bus. Ps: Access to programming on these KPN Machines in the public library must be encrypted to stop abuse. from the maker of the now missing:

5 minutes later I punched the keyboard symbols into the following sequence:
Subject: previous mail incorrect; sorry: apparantly the menu contained an old adress of the chess player/tripod fellow cause he has no problems; I just had him test his while he was here.
-------- I still suspect it is a hack from someone who retrieved 'historical' stuff off this terminal somehow. But they would have commited the shameful act elsewhere surely. My most urgent question remains; can you help me retrieve my latest files?????? After that I will have to start all over I guess, that is if someone hasn't manage to abuse my page indirectly and got it censured by you yourselves.

>This language gravely disturbs me, and I will refrain from comment. Below you will see our standard response: "Hacking" generally means that someone found out your member name and password and was therefore able to access your files. True "hacking" is rare as regards personal homepages. Our suggestions: 1. Change your password using the URL below. A new password will prevent anyone else from continuing to change your page: tripod.com/bin/password/password 2. Be careful at public computers. Clear the browser history and go to another website before leaving the terminal. Nobody can then come in after you and access your information. We cannot release member information even if we knew who had altered your account. Also, we don't have copies that may have been deleted or destroyed.

Sorry about all the loose grammar, I was distraught. That partly explains my emphasis on what 'gravely disturbed' you as well. I will now try to balance my statement with something like: ...and yet we have no other tribes to be more thankful to for some of the prettier turns the course of history has taken.....etc, blabla...".

-------- Since you had the grace to refrain from comment and fire-fueling, I trust you understand I gratefully took this chance and liberty to amend my lobsided bleak-blinkery without expecting to be praised. I figure I owe you as much as myself, never mind the Jews (whoever they are and/or wherever 'their' mindset is most virulent....probably in all babies and punk pubes who break their heads over what alpha dominance translates to at a mental level). As for what got me in this state in the first place: A 'not found' message combined with a search for poetpiet at tripod coming to a ditto conclusion. Only the second bout of repair performed a few days later (after I was graciously given a day during which to make some back-ups) had some such notice as: 'we are doing some maintenance at the moment...' So now I am happy and secure once more in a tripod home which is cozily cluttered and filled to the brim. PS: Remains the minor irritation that I still haven't gotten my nedstats straightened out.

to a witch: swap some swipey sweeps?: You are cordially invited to my home (which only yester my birth day I thought hacked, cracked and broken into, stolen away with, absconded, dead, censored and is back up now). I've been busy making back-ups and feeling good again, though not as good as I would were I to see you and/or the likes of you at the rainbow gathering in Penn soon. Guess you can't have it all.  I guess my overreaction stems from the worries I've cropped up about living in a drape-shut bicycle shed (hardly any traffic comes by it though) and trying to steel myself against theft of the mostly junkyard found furniture that I totally forgot to cover myself on fronts I deem secure.

to someone who requested reviews of "Nora" by Brenda Maddox: hi, I can't do this via the list cause me and as I discovered yesterday, somebody 'next door' in belgium cannot manage to un- nor resub.

But I did have a very good time with the book you mentioned. I now understand why it is justified to call alcoholism not only obscene but suffering from the worst of white man's weaknesses with good reason. The book also answered all my questions concerning Lucia (the day I finished reading and looked up her birthday, I make closer acquaintance with someone differing almost exactly 60 years with her on that score, This regular loaf, drink, smoke and musicize park squad mascottette is a bit of a, you guessed it: coquette, not to mention that her family circumstandes sound similar). 'Nora' was an exception to that. a lucky find for 30 guilders at the twice yearly market in front of the Dam palace I wrote a peck-and piping sparrow parliament poem about some years ago when I was labouring to get my formulations flowing nearby)*. I wanted to know about Lucia for a few years almost. I have a daughter (or two) I do not get to say and it saddens my life a great deal. Funny enough, I have this spring made the acqaintance of a lass who slugs along with the fairly heavy and fair weather/outdoor/music making drinking crowd in the park and the night I learned Lucia's birth configuration' I realized this lass had a similar one (exactly 60 years and one day between 'm; almost a perfectly full chinese cycle apart), and sure enough, her parents lost a boy child too, her father is a heavy drinker though he works as a doorman at the social services in A'dam where all the crazyest people walk in and out (it's a bit like riding the LA busses) and as far as violence: I invited her for a lap on skates/skeelers since she had her wheels on and said I'd be right back. When I was, here comes a macho-man on a scooter doing the sort of bravoura trick a real man like my own dad was fond of when young: show off his navigation skills. But the rules in the park are: no motorized traffic. I told him to listen to me for a minute as I was going to give him the spiel I do on similar occasions but this guy was having none of it: "No, I'll not listen to you". I said: OK, I'll not sniff your exhaust either then", and went to pick up a cork bobbing on a puddle to put it up his exhaust pipe, all the while explaining what I was about loudly and theatrically enough to muster some interest in the bystanders. I deliver these sorts of verbal fights often in a relentless battle against dust and exhaust in my little make believe fairy land, semi- rainbow land Vondel park, where all is not well. The most hedonistic and hot (weather permitting) smoke and drink department pondside (needs a dredge rreeaall bad) is strewn and sprinkled with bottle caps by bottle top terrorists. Flip and floep, gone, out of my way. The other major and worse menace to happy and lively worms under an ever growing and buoyant sod is the use of park-patches for ball*(sy)*-games where kinetics, expletives and other male prerogatives are zealously observed on a dayly basis too. I sometimes move among them on breezy days and ask 'm why they keep forgetting their watering cans to keep the dust down. It gusts across the road and forces the innocent bypassers to join not the 'stoftrapperij' (kicking up dust) but definitely the 'stofhapperij' (swallowing dust) unless they hold their breath which is not why they come to the park. The scooters also go so much quicker than the other traffic that it dislodges a lot of dust which makes the refreshment factor drop notches doubly and once over again for a minute. Anyway, the particular driver I began this account about wanted none of it and came after me instead. I kept up the theatricals and said: "ok, if that's how you feel I shall put the cork up my nose". He got in a few half-hearted kicks and that was it for in the face fun. I went on declaiming some lines for the bystander's benefit about well-scentedness and such but don't remember what I said and don't think it sank in anywhere.

I will probably be travelling and leave a summer stuffy and dusty Amsterdam with its excellently airconditioned University info center (even got a polaroi AG400 to hang in front of my screen since yesterday) and so won't be able to keep my hotbot account (which is advertizing mitsubishi I see!!!! Jesus, gotta send 'm a letter) tidy so regularly as I'm not planning to own a personal computer. The more educated, apt and handy we become, the more communal things get right?

Arthur, me soulbro, *(re)*sends me some spirit food upon request:
> allright my acount can handle a few hundred K's easily. If you like, you can leave the first 130 K off. I have rendered those in colourful html if you are interested.

Ok, I am resending it. The count I gave you was actually a character count, the kilobits I think is a different measure, but I couldn't find this number when I looked. You shouldn't have any problem though.

I was at a Nofa conference in 82 or so and ended up in Maine after that at the exclusive yet communicative place called caddigar or something outlandish like to How are they doing? I detect that sorta flavor from thousands of miles away.

Yes, I know the people at Khaddigar, still have some of their writings. Have been to see them, have talked with them. We have some profound disagreements about killing animals, and killing land, what is sustainable, and energy efficient. They are very strict vegetarians, I kill animals and eat them. I don't like plowing up the ground, killing grass and trees and and telling all the wildlife to stay out, I would be a herder and roam free, and not tell nature what to do or be. They work like slaves as far as I am concerned, endless work to keep the cultivated land fertile, constantly taking fertility from land here and composting and transporting to "their" fields, and this treatment of the land is not sustainable in the long run, from my perspective. We are as different as Cain and Abel. They claim to be peaceful people, non violent and all that, but their way of life would kill me, it is a scorched earth policy, they cannot have me and the elk and wild cattle and pigs running free, we would destroy their fields.

> you said: "But if you tear apart everything, nothing lives." ---- When your tear rock (nothing) apart, everyting lives; is that what you are trying to say?

> --- No, I don't think so... To tear rock apart requires large amounts of energy use, that is going to tear apart life as a significant side effect. Building factories on living ground to build machinery, roads torn through the trees and grass to transport this heavy stuff, you must burn something in large quantity, oil, coal, trees, this causes air pollution, with bad effects for life, and burning trees of course tears them apart. You will rip life apart to go ripping rocks apart here on earth, no matter what your intentions are. You might think you could rip apart as much rock as you wanted on the moon, or some similar place. But to build the machinery to go to the moon and pulverize rock, this is going to have an effect. I don't see any way around it, really. We live in a web of life, if we go using lots of energy, we are going to rip that web. It is a balance, I kill things in order to eat, whether it is vegetable or animal, I kill and cut and cook and chew and pulverise. People see doing this as good, it is good, if you don't do too much of it.

hi, this is the tail end of a chapter called 'reproduction'; next is: 'leadership' (complete), 'technology' and the first alinea of 'war'.
The 300K worth of text is available on request from this donkey riding goat herd. He has been very sickly most of his life due to a late diagnosis of Celiac sprue. He Arthur Noll, reabel@larck.net) was born at the same time of year 3 earlier than me.

With money and steel and farming, has come the slow but accelerating disintegration of society, notions of independence, marriage for love, prostitution, spectacular hort term success for liars in every aspect of society. The men and women that ignore interdependence, balance between people and nature, do very well in the short term. In the long term, honesty and openness always win out. I don't see that we have to have copulation in the open again. But we need to be able to talk openly about reproduction, and just as a few female apes were able to trust a few males that they would not be hurt, if they went off alone, so must a few women come to trust a few men, that talking openly about sex is not necessarily a signal to have sex, that we have the control of our instincts. Control of our instincts by reason. That will be something new in the history of life on earth.

Well, that was a trip. I started this to close a gap in rational thinking. Did I succeed? That's up to you. The test of rationality, is to specifically say why it is wrong. I'm listening.

____War

If you have a group of people working together, that group can be independent in day to day needs. If a group is independent, why not fight with other groups, if you can win? Well, history shows that the latter question is the critical one. The intellectual and physical capacity of people is so similar all over the world, that wars always end up with no real change in anything. Invaders sometimes succeed, but over time they are either kicked out or assimilated. One group comes up with new technology, another group always comes up with a way to match it. Soldiers with experience usually agree that you shouldn't start a fight that you can't win, but the arrogant pride of culture and race has been ever willing to ignore experience, and fight to the death over these veneers of being. Once again, we are dealing with instinct. For many thousands of years, people fought with each other, small tribal conflicts, often done by rules understood by both sides, to limit the number killed or hurt.

5. More about money. It is a primitive measurement of energy. There is nothing else for it to measure. Matter and energy are interchangable, there is nothing else known to physics. We always buy the moving and shaping of objects and people and animals. When we use money, we inherently are mixing units of measure, just like adding units of feet to units of meters.

One can use 7/8, along with 5/8 and 6/8 musically no? Just like in Finnish music (strongly recommend Varttina) So the above quote happens to be wrong both ways. We are indeed mixing emotions and measuring in terms of them; sacrificing some to others often. Just like your calorie world has to subsidize the side show of make believe monetary value. The system is however not irredeemable. Already tiger's teeth are expensive cause they are so rare. Communism wants lots of cheap tigers!!!!!!!! :)
If money can reflect material as well as manipulations thereof (a good old metaphysical (not to say christian scientific; I've read quimby) concept: like the most-modern alchemist Dan Winter's one: Light is matter with a weight problem), then it and what matters and means most is that they harmonize!!! You can find some of this at: triax.com/bmnfa/science/paramag.htm You might also be interested in the following note to an organic farming email list. It covers a bit of theory regarding how the ORMUS elements might move about in nature: Dear Friends, At 07:32 PM 5/22/99 -0700, Bargyla Rateaver (a respected and regular Acres USA contriburor/columnist) wrote:

But the stuff I want and use is said to be peculiar because the proportions of the minerals in it is claimed to be the same as in human blood/tissue. It has no taste, is just a fine powder, but it certainly does something. For a long time - years - I had the uncomfortable feeling that -- and I now this sounds silly, but I don't know any other way to explain it -- my teeth felt as though they were shivering. That feeling went away completely a couple weeks after I started taking a good spoonful each day, and that feeling never came back. I know this is not a good medical or scientific description, but I do know that something uncomfortable just disappeared after I started taking that clay.

Please do not just eat any dirt. Some of the clays that Dr. Rateaver speaks of might contain heavy metals or other toxins. If you decide to try such fossil clays be sure to have a 98 element assay run on them. There are some such materials which have already had such assays and been found to be safe. Some of the micronutrients in Bargyla's fossil clay have been measured and quantified by modern science, some have not. There is a certain group of nutrients called the ORMUS or m-state elements which do not show up accurately in conventional spectroscopic or chemical analysis.

The ORMUS elements are relatively abundant in volcanic rock and ash (about 5-10% by weight). They are paramagnetic and probably constitute the paramagnetic elements which Philip Callahan talks about. These m-state elements have a strong affinity for water and can be quickly depleted from soil if that soil is not protected from water erosion. Organic materials in the soil bind them and hold them in place. Once they are in water, they follow the water through its phase changes and give water many of its familiar properties. Salt, in water, tends to keep the ORMUS elements in the water so that in the ocean they do not evaporate with the water as readily.

Though these elements are quite abundant in spring water right out of the ground, their levels can drop by 50% within a quarter mile downstream. We believe that this is the result of their traverse of the earth's magnetic field. Since these elements are superconductors and since superconductors exclude magnetic fields, these elements are repelled by the Earth's magnetic field from the spring water as it moves along in the stream bed. Despite this loss, some of the ORMUS elements eventually make their way to the ocean. They carry with them a portion of their original ORMUS load and pick up more of the ORMUS elements from erosion on their way to the sea.

One property of the ORMUS elements is that they are only soluble in water under certain conditions. If they are precipitated out of water and this precipitate is allowed to thoroughly dry, the dry precipitate will not redissolve in water. It will not even redissolve in concentrated acid.

Plants and animals do seem to be able to redissolve these insoluble elements, perhaps through enzymatic reactions. In nature, this will occur where water accumulates in an inland sea without an outlet. Such a sea will concentrate the ORMUS elements as it becomes saltier and as it looses water to evaporation. The Great Salt Lake and the Dead Sea are good examples of this stage. ...... snip ....

Eventually, these salt seas may dry up as the result of climate or geological changes. In this drying process there often is a time when the sea alternately dries out and is baked by the sun during the summer months and is rehydrated during the moist winter months. As the evaporating water concentrates these elements, the rising pH of the water will cause them to precipitate out on the lake or sea bottom. During the dry months the sun will completely dry this precipitate so that it will not redissolve during the wet season. Over time, layer after layer of the ORMUS elements is deposited on the bottom of these intermittent bodies of water.

An appropriately relativating link here could be: ritmanlibrary.nl (an until recently private and large collection of hermetic philosophy)

A simple summary of the Dry Method is as follows:

Take your powdered sample and mix it with four to six times more water. Add lye till the pH is about 12. Boil for two hours. Filter out the precipitate to separate the remaining liquid. Throw away the precipitate. Bring the pH of the liquid down no lower than 8.5. Additional precipitate will drop out. This precipitate will contain the m-state elments along with some calcium and magnesium hydroxides. Wash the precipitate with distilled water. At this point the precipitate will be safe to eat if all procedures have been followed carefully. If you wish to further purify the precipitate, you can thoroughly dry it out by heating it at 300 degrees F. in an oven for two hours. The m-state rhodium, iridium and gold in this sample will not dissolve in concentrated hydrochloric acid so if you soak the dry sample in concentrated hydrochloric acid the portion which does not redissolve will be pure ORMUS rhodium, iridium and gold.

If you separate these solids from the acid and wash the remaining acid out of them with distilled water, they are edible but the body does not assimilate them as easily as it does the precipitate before it has been dried out.

At this point you are probably wondering if there is a way to separate these elements out of sea water where they are already concentrated and in solution. Yes there is and this process is even simpler than the Dry Method used to extract them from powdered clay materials. - This process is called the Wet Method and it is described in the same web page I mentioned above. You may recall that I described how a lake can become so alkali that the m-state elements drop out as a precipitate. The Wet Method duplicates this process.

A few days later: hi Nicki, I wanted to show you the best Daniel Winter has ever done as far as cute graphics go. The multicolour plenty trumpet sort of clump could even revolve around initially; then it became a valentine offering last februari (forgive me for not sending you it then). Of course I tried to edit out all the bullshit fabulation he is addicted to but found I could not edit the attachment when forwarding it and I don't want to figure out how to do it now (I ain't a nerd am eye?). : : : : : : : : : : So please ignore all the text and scroll down and/or page down tap you way to that massive improvement on his buddy the flower of life guy (the one with the absurd new(est st)age name) who has collated his ripped off graphics and stuck em in a book along with a lot of mysticism under a catchy looker of a cover recently. To think that I collected a lot of the same type of graphics (along with people like the Sydney Lebanese Jain and his magic square work for instance) but dropped it apart from my wheels within wheels file /immidged_files/wheels_within_wheels.htm

> Hey Piet, Thanks so much for the UrnaSha info. Coincidence my feet will be India on those exact dates !! Or not? : : : :

Jeezz, I do hope you are asking me and that my vote counts, my council vetos, my vows kindle kindly and counter ones on a par. Nothing for it but to try, so here goes. : : : Or not? NOT; NOT. NOT!!! : : : : : : : Will your soul be ready for the light? : : : : : : : : You know, do you not?, that since I have formed a rather impersonal picture of the ways and means of and for light to reach a soul (pile up in a puddle, soak into the ground grabbing a few 'wet' molecules while others flee for their lives; pass among the contorted ways of pressure; friction, solution, suction, paramagnetism and respiration into a succulant which may nourish my stomach and there fore by osmosis my soul), there no longer an illusion of control on and in my mind to even have a shadow of doubt about. Let light lie where it will, bounce where it must and live where it is welcomed; and you are welcome to visit me. Matter of fact I was shocked to hear you can be so jetsettering as to leave England after announcing your arrival there only just barely a week ago. You hate the place do you???? Not enough sunlight or something????? Amsterdam is surely nice and quiet. Everybody is gone on holidays. Did the description of the Jesus and Mary like conditions I can offer you at the drop of a hat, in advance and for duration should they be pleasing, scare you off? : : : : What does India have I don't??? : : Have you been in England much longer than I realize???? Was that E-mail announcing your arrival in England months old or something, I didn't check the date. : : : : : : : how much faith do you have that this is man's next step? : : : : : : : : : I have no faith in what I do not understand and if this question is one resulting from the cosmo-cryptic clashes Dan Winter rolls, in- and revolves no less and just as often even more than the entire human race in and through, then I have to throw up my hands to express the fact I do not know. I fear though that Dan's next step is to keep on fabulating like a primitive shaman chased by his own dreams and low slow circulation due to all too cerebral and top heavy existence. A thing I suffered from for the last 4-5 years (and that's not even counting the one spent cycling in Oz). : : : : Dearest Nicki, as you may have gathered by now, I am flabbergasted; my head is reeling and spinning, you mean to tell me you are making your London stop over one of a couple weeks only and decline to visit me since i would violate your serendipity? : : : Is it cause I have not pressed you to meet right away? Is that the youthful stormy ardour you would expect from someone qualifying as a lover and mate? Couldn't blame me if you did. Most women prefer a young blood like themselves over a riper, richer but in so many ways slower and spenter older partner. I must get rich and famous if I want to qualify for girls like you. My fame is there (I mean here rather), tangible enough to me but deflected in such a way that it sort of smears out all across town and beyond (the net) with nothing directly to show for. My Nedstat counter has decided not to count my own hits to my own page (may be they have a one count per machine policy). : : : : : : : : Lemme just be as up front as possible. I want a mate and a family. I know I can make beautiful children. I know I need to live in the countryside and plant treegroves and orchards. I know I must pledge a troth to a package of all this to gain and start to keep my (some semblance of) sanity. And I also know that one in a million at the most can make me feel this way. You do. Nor will running to India change that....... : : : : : : : : : : I am not offended but deeply disappointed if you should be essentially on your way back to Oz after giving Europe such a short brush (with me in it). Surely you are kidding, getting my goat, etc. No more of this nonsense please. Get your divine presence over here and marry me on the double (at least come over for a few days to see A'dam, the famous windmill congregation near my parent's place and whatever you fancy......please).

The next day: hi, I'm sitting in the public library of super quiet and pleasant : A'dam; my israeli friend is performing on the tight rope in the park and sounds verschnupft (congested; it's probably cause of the : pixie suit he wears since a NZealandchick helped him sow it in that : squat he parks up at and which has about 100 permanent residents amongst which I no longer count myself since i started my own squatting venture) the message I sent earlier and asked you to send me a copy of is found (see below) so no need to bother. : : : : I got the bike I lovingly rescued from sure bendage due to late nite drunken trample terrorism (same brand as my other 2 grey ones : except this is a female and green one) back from me mate's gal (he is happiest on his own, a quirky vegetarian yoga loving streetperforming, he juggles, walks tightrope (lately with one of them stretch nylon full coverage pixysuits), paints and gets all flusterd when not) : which I take as a sure sign and omen you ll be needing it soon after all....grin..

the day older message mentioned herein and sent along with it (again): I would offer you to share my accomo-location but since it is an essentially open gazebo/ bicycle shed/ glassed lean to walled shanty shack. It is very secluded though (especially as long as zip, zilch and no readers raid my site); on a schoolyard nobody can really look into of any public place unless you beat the bush by the side of the park which leans up to it but the concrete wall is too high really) without running water (I run to the squat complex at the end of the park, takes me 3 minutes) where there is one of the prettiest : toilets I know, a sauna (closed for summer unfortunately since I showered there at the bearable cost of 1.50), a bike shop, restaurant : and studio) and with loads of half wild cats around, I fear that would be not the most respectful thing to do perhaps. : : : : : Be sure to be saved eventually by my frugally and sparingly partaken of savings account but the site it needs to be invested in is yet to be : found.. ..alas; I need help on this one; tell me if you see anything you like in that brilliant though ruthless and certainly fascinating country you are now in; take note that women enjoy more liberty there then anywhere I know to compare such things with. : :: : love .. your piet (please) forward to any whom it pleaseth to love ... in potenti- or reality. : : : : : PS: how's your pal mel*(anie)*? ---Now, let me tell you I bought 4 children's stories and a 'satanic verses' copy by that expat indian and I suggest you come here and hear me read it to you (and the world if you like to start a webcam couple romance ... just kidding) so your craving for india will rapidly subside.

a few days later: However much I wanna be with you, if you don't reciprocate, which : would be as tragic as understandable though not inevitable, you : will be safe in India, I won't follow you there. Not even if you : say you will marry me there...well, I think....to let one's will and intentions be abducted is the least proof of sincerity a man : owes a woman since when and if she gives in it is over with her independence most of the time. : : : : Want me to send you some job offers??? : : : : waitress in the park pub or something????? : : : : : : : a friend of mine (the one I saw in Oz, at the rawfood lecture during : the rainbow gathering, without realizing she was Dutch) has just landed that job. : : : : : : : : : Hope you are happy and not going very far away ever.

To: nicola_keays@hotmail.com; Date: : Sun, 25 Jul 1999 11:57:31 -0700; : Subject: my shameless impudence: hi nicola - laconiek means a nonchalant, dry sort of humor. I hope and trust you have enough of it not to let you chase an old fool : like me out of Europe. If you would rather have me believe you wuz : faar awaaai I would understand. So many people in Amsterdam and the ones I do repeatedly meet cause when if and while they see something : in me (rare enough occurences and usually either inarticulate undefined and innocent foreign sweetiepies, certainly nobody I could try out some live poetry on to see which section I ought to make audible for all the (wired) world to wonder at). : : : : : : : Compare my inane fancies concerning you the ravings of an old man not unlike the ones that Robert Graves needed, craved, cultivated and was famous for his young muses. All of them apart from the 2 marriages with 4 kids each he managed to raise. : : : : : : : : : I need some land or else I will go crazy in this city I keep discovering such telltale warnings in. The vondelpark has more and more bald spots from all the sportsmen who like to play ball with all the single and non or presyllable aaarrgggghsss and oehhhzzz thereof. The beerbottle top flip away across the back terrorism is rampant and the popularity is rising nontheless. But as I said before, tis : summer and dancing the samba is quite the rage this past week or so. : : : : : : : : Another shock which turns out to be discovery and realization in the sense of a dot connection which could have been made a long time ago was the explanation for the mysterious treetop shoots which : I had noticed on the ground before without connecting it to the flying greenfeathered mini rodents; a parrot type bird escaped from : a private keeper and since prospered and multiplied thanks to an old ladies spending her allowances on peanuts she hauls into the park faithfully. : : : : : : : : : Now the gnawing urge of these beasts is natural but all amiss in this land of soft growth and they have slowly but surely almost : killed 2 of the 4 prettiest trees in the park right by the kiddiepaddle pond. A uniquely beautiful branching tree which is probably not : indiginous either. Nothing nearly as dramatic a kind of havoc as what rabbits, cats and assorted weeds (not to mention 'humans') have wreaked in Ozland but nevertheless..., something that makes me long for a piece of land to call me own. How do you feel about : that sort of thing?

to nicki about bio resonance therapy, a fellow patient and chlamydia: don't expect you to make much of that last missive; it is an attempt to teach some of the nuances of Dutch to an immigrant (a fine character). : : : : : : : : : The saturday paper carried a large article about chlamidya, a venereal disease from which 50% of those infected (and effectively carriers if not necessarily transmitters) do not suffer any symptoms. Babies can get it from their mothers at birth and catch eye infections. It transmits via hands, etc if they have been in touch with the cheesy exudations (a very common rotten fish smell) that characterize it (which for women are quite dangerous, it can make them sterile, an effect spared the male sufferers). Anyway, the dutch government is considering an offensive comparable to the hiv hype since it has become cheap and easy to test for it via urine rather than the messy genital scraping mess. (I wonder if you can catch it off of urine too, the article didn't say). My unlucky chances will have it that my last girlfriend had it and handed me a postcard with some info on it when we broke up after which I broke out into a nasty ugly rash (on my foreskin) which had never happened before though I do not doubt I had the subdued form for much longer; the cure is easy, brief and harmless: 1 day of a specific antibioticum. I'll do it next week.

My three expensive treatments in the Reichian orgone box beaming cellular symphonies into the occupant did have no such effect despite the very expensive machinery. According to the doctrine, your own personality specific frequencies can be turned into rifs which by the way can in turn be keyed and signed into some crystalline rocks (if you remembered to bring any along) on metal plates wired up to the battery of expensive computers doing the fourier transforms etc. Basically every part of you constitution operates at a frequency which is then taken as the key and 'rocked', 'added to' with over-, under- and octavetones within a range of oh about 10 or so (of the latter). It's a cellular massage and instruction in the spirit of flexing the voice or fingers with toneladders. This therapy is called bio resonance (see my recent linkfile where I placed it among would be revivers of the legendary Royal Raymond Rife reputation) for which fellow patient Henry's insurance company pays but refuses as the base for health maintenance when so claimed (explicitly so by me who told them I had avoided doctors and hospitals succesfully for 20 years but wanted to use this therapy for which my former Ins. company would make no more than a 10 treat(ment)s per year allowance) by prospective customers who announce intentions to make use of this alternative health scheme (and like me even tell 'm it's the reason for trying to switch insurance company). Henry makes liberal use of his policy and spoils it for all the rest of us I fear. He is as selfish as a child, calls himself the king of metal. : : : : :

With the prospect of leaving A'dam and travelling soon I have started to host above mentioned Henry who is a simpleton type of man living in town and has no money to leave it much (though he skates double digit miles and cycles to the therapist 40 K's away evry week) since he spends it all on metal (which he is in love with) to build nautilus (fitness); he eyes very fit; certainly the bodybuilder type (broad limbed rump with a curiously out of proportion small head upon it) but he is obsessed with his main imperfection, a cast in his eye and believes ladies like him not because of it but he is so soft spoken most of the time people take him for a homo just as often) equipment in a community course complex; one learns everything there you name it they teach it; the lady I have mentioned once or twice -- (the one who criminally refuses to show her child to and/or allow interaction thereof with) the father (who nevertheless refuses to become equally criminal as a consequence, ... but who lately has come to wonder what she would say were he to propose to her; a thing he hasn't ever really done. Is proposing to the right person more important than sacrificing harmony for the supposed sake of a child.... or do all women want the same anyway??... .which probably does not include a bicycle shed for a make shift lair) -- used to try learn clay and pottery there. She ended up on the frontpage of their rag which I picked up from the trashcan by co-incidence long after she had ostracized me from her life (not long after she found out I was not monogamous, hellbent on home making and whatever else this creature who doesn't care for communication realized about us, like that we had little in common and no necessity between and binding us to forget such luxury games). : : : Henry is a weird but fairly innocent character (he even maintains he is a virgin). His appearance deceives for a while till you get to know him. He exhibitionistically skates around barely dressed, nearly bear butt naked (except for a leather cap and a leather jock strap), summer an winter; covered in shoepolish cause he wants to look brown and is very vain as all nautilus infatuates are. He is blond with very weirdly fragmented (multilayered; I forgot the correct iridological terms) brown eyes. He used to make his money in advertising gluing the letters of the now succesful skate making company on his thighs (the friday night skates have grown as big here as they need, to make a decent comparison with similar ones in Paris for instance, possible). : :

> nic: HI PIET !! what's wrong with using real names furcrysake!! : : : : I wish someone came up with the real name of the goddam listmom. If someone does deserve a bit of stretching toward overdraft and quandering it is that aeon long napper; the mysterious behind the scenes listsleeper who keeps many (at least me) against their will. : : : : : : : This has gone beyond a practical joke. I can tolerate hundreds of Elaine's on lists but a haywire robot for serverant is too much. uuyyyaaggggghhhhhrrrr!!!!! : : : : : PS 1: Pass this onto the list for me will ya; I can't stop this sort of stuff coming so I might as well ride along with some of yous here and there till I can get off.P : : : : : : : S 11: I have been guilty of name calling (Elaine, precisely...forgive me <too>) but I do not intensify menacingly; I do not even believe in repetition very much (however good the shivers upon the arrival/anticipation of a beloved refrain/song, etc) and when one encounters such it is a sure sign of unenthusiastic and untransformed muster baiting. Climax: Help, let me off! : : : : : : : : : : : : and once again: I tried and tried and tried again till I got tired and tired some more.

It's a sure telling thing (you are losing ground(ing) bro) that you should go off about plagiarism of some of your former associates and in the same doc by repetition forget to search the place you read rather than wonder where you wrote about capitalism (typified with that pretty term I may as well congratulate you on; hopefully they 'll go over better than all the similar ones I tried to meme and beam into the most rapids of the concho - stream). to: jk@ciw.net, a calmly ruminating art curator and Belgian in France doing a weblog in english. I sent an invitation; here is his thought (at: ciw.net/nqp/ciw_nqp13.htm):

> It Takes One To Know One : If anything is blinked all over the consensus web it is make my community. Not since the late 60's we've been so geared towards sociability for every otherwise egotistic need or idiosyncratic interest we suffer. If 'about' anything, the net is about togetherness. Find me a one click like mind! It is a challenge to connected intelligence. And one- to-one- to-many-to -many media are a godsend: exactly the kind of media our generations deserved, like Michael Samyn once explained to me. The community idea is aslumbering old dream, wide awake with every new communications technology. For my current expat status I find I depend on it very much. Yet it is also the monomaniacal, the extremely focused, hesitantly going public, which is the promise of a web unleashed. If these interests reach a hypermedia aestheticand urgency, even the better, and I'd gladly welcome your examples at jk@ciw.net.

To Madeleine Albright on indigenes everywhere; the UN, NATO and poetpiet : I was encouraged to hear (or read the way you) speak about Native Americans; what could be more logical than to lend the recent American indigenes consolidation efforts some help in the form of a simply outspoken endorsement of the Zapatista aims, objectives and rights in the same sort of breaths it cost you to speak promising words on some sort of reparation procedures (for which some important hints are found at my site; notably the guest appearance directory). : : : : : : : I read a recent cri de coeur by Subcomm. Marcos and it didn't sound very good; if the UN receives no mandate to organize and fund massive volunteer workparties garantueed to be avenged by Nato in case of violence and molestation (arms industrious type sabotage is best ruled out by cams in all critical positions, front lines; board rooms, congresses, etc methinks) and willing to defuse potentially detonating situations getting in the way of the immense planting for instance work that needs to be done, I have little fate that we shake this past centuries horrors still spiralling in the wrong direction before changing all digits at once.
not much of advice to offer from so far away perhaps but certain things are the same round the world. And so here goes:

to a neighbour in the guestbook of: : : YvwiiUsdinvnohii.net/index.shtml : (the people's path page), the first entry in my indigenes and community category as it appears in my fifth linklist has a guestbook entry added which appears next to yours there so I thought I'd say hello, especially since you want to do something. : : : : : : : No idea what you qualify for but if it's heavy weight thinking power, I have some for you to spare. : : : : : : : : : : My fourth miscellany happens by chance to carry a ref to the Oglala (see the bit at the top obtained via sovernet). Anyway, I better get on cause this is the last day they are going to tolerate me here. The head of the info center at the : U here decided not to renew my subscription; no more extremely cheap and air conditioned computing for me for a while.

letter to nedstat on the fourth of august:

> <!-- start of NedStat code --> <img src="http://nedstat.tripod.com/bin/nedstat.gif?name=poetpiet-4" : : border=0 alt="Nedstat Counter" width=22 height=22> <!-- end of NedStat code --> : : : the above is an example of : your 'correct' code, right?? : : : : : Right. : : : So far so good. : : : Well, the following shorter code: <!-- start of NedStat code --><img SRC="nedstat.gif" ALT="Nedstat Counter" BORDER=0 height=22 width=22><!-- end of NedStat code -->

Anyway, the second version went with the only file enjoying an early and totally by accident, perhaps automatic registration. Either that or I did it without thinking much about it for a while. It (your statpage for it) has managed to register about 170 viewers so far and was the only stat working on my no less than 90 registered (file submitted to nedstat and the correct number copied into gif selected link window) files with similar codes lacking the non boldened bits in: : "http://nedstat.tripod.com/bin/"nedstat.gif" name=poetpiet-4" : : : : : : : : So in other words; I understand that counting the gif at my tripod index account doesn't happen. . . .. : and yet the thing (with code number 0) counted 170 viewers whereas similarly fitted out files got nought, zip. . . ..I still don't get it. : : : I guess my big mistake was placing the icon on my page (one in each folder faithfully) instead of allowing the code to do so. Took me more than half a year to discover I was sabotaging my own efforts everytime I used composer for changes and upon being asked wether to replace the gif it had found replied: no. Any- and either, besides by the way, all savings seem to replace the link to the nedstat program at tripod with the icon : conveniently closeby manyhow and -fold over ....have I been stupid. : : : : A reversal of corrections seems to be what resulted after I dutyfully spent a whole day replacing the second one with the first variety (including the corrects numbers, all manually in Wordpad) and uploaded the whole affair. Checked a few and sure enough it seemed to work; but now, low and behold, things are right back where they were: I find the second incorrect variety in my files again. Must be something automatic....but what??????? I would appreciate some help on this. My guess is that the minute you download a file and manipulate it the nasty gif comes along and manages to replace the href to source with that all count shortcutting nearby version. Is that what happens? I tried to cancel saving functions to get rid of the icon after such an occasion but it turns out to have been of no avail. I am happy to report however that most of 'm now work fine. : : : : : : : : The plot thickens another few notches: I have just discovered that certain files seem to have the right codes but are not uploaded properly. : : : : : : : : : : : : OK, all my tripod files now have functioning Nedstat as of the 5th of august!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

to the social tochnology list runner: dpwilson: scuse me but I shall butt in about my bothersome objections with this here bit of a bone pick, peck and polish: basic income (BI): BI is all fine and good to champion and advocate; I was in touch with a fine sample of such people: Mary Lehmann (see earliest correspondence files, we had a longish exchange on the issue) but leads to lethargy and sloth; not to mention the shit people start believing about themselves if they have to think up excuses to get it. Take it from me, I live in Holland (again after much travelling); Amsterdam is the world's capital perhaps when it comes to BI experiments and it's disgusting to see what with and how much people sedate themselves with to stay out of trouble which is exactly what they need: half an acre per person!!!!!!!!! Make that a human right and basic responsibility with free seed thrown into the bargain if you schemes want any degree of success. You Americans have strayed and urbanized a long way away from the homestead type of liberty dream eh? : : : : : : :

> Dear Piet, : I keenly appreciate your caustic comments on my last two posts. The Americans, when and if provided with the opportunity to live modestly without : working, courtesy of stage three of Bertram Russell's UBI, will surely take : to that opportunity as avidily as you say the Dutch have done. Since we agreed on the questionable aspects of UBI stage 3, I revisited your web site and wandered about, clicking a link here and there at random, in search of some tid-bit of human discourse which I might comprehend and comment on. To my great surprise and pleasure, I found some serious thinking about democracy, politics, and human nature at URL : : third_miscellany.htm. : Fortunately, I : had the presence of mind to bookmark the page, otherwise I could never find my way back to the blue page, except by chance. : You concluded your 99-08-05 05:17:54 EDT comments by saying: : :

"You : Americans have strayed and urbanized a long way away from the homestead type : of liberty dream eh?"

> Figure 10 of my global model has been in circulation, by snail and e, mail : since February 1969 showing the GREAT TRANSFORMATION, as Karl Polanyi called : it in 1944, of the United States in the 1890s. : And the first reader to : comment on that great transformation of the U.S. turns out to be a Dutchman. : But then, my highschool teacher of U.S. History was named Julius Van Den Nort, so maybe the Dutch learn more from history than other people do. Let me know if you could use any of Burt's system diagrams to lighten up your website. Enjoying the discussion, : WesBurt

POET][PIET 's fifth miscellany - most of which concerns the struggle of (relatively speaking more modest) indigenes vs more dominantcultures; I recommend consulting the first half of the following doc: http://proxy.arts.uci.edu/~nideffer/_SPEED_/1.2/ayers.html especially to anyone in danger of getting upset about my efforts.

most of the first half duplicates material in 'fourth' .. except colourwise

Contents here: continued from fourth miscellany; second half of a missive to to Jim craven, a very angry man at times, about the anti-fascist rant by some Dutchmen he posted; springing point: sovereignty and third party adjudications : x x x : clinching with some NA on the sovernet-list about rockdust again, though they seem to think it's about Rushmore*(sparked by an old warriornet foe: revfever by the way)* : x x x : a shocking bit of Dutch press news about Milosevic's (in my opinion) justifiable support in matters of border redrawing related to Jim Craven : x x x : a brief hint at what community currencies could do for the Brazilian*(disowner disowning landsquatters movement* called) semterra : x x x : a critique of last year's adventures with 'colleagues' at the UvA, their adcampaign and info center regulations : x x x : to and fro the makers of a new airpressure driven vehicle x x x : From a page on Baudrillard : made by Ben Attias; an addition to the tri- of multiplicities file : x x x : A golden tip: some links to sitemakers who picked up on Roger Caillois and ...oh wonder: me, even.

elaboration on / rewrite of letter to Jim Craven a pogressive economist and fender for first nations, written during the second week of aug 99:

roughly 2 versions going over the same material (the second one more elaborat / convoluted ... i forget how much time was between them exactly, .. prolly less than a week ... they ended up recorded twice in subsequent files with different colouring indicating i had a lot of other stuff on my mind then .. and now, the 23rd of februari 2019 i intersperse them for easier integration .. sooner or later):

: A missive to Jim Craven in answer to an article he posted at pen-l by some Dutch 'anti-fascists. A new installment of the Heller vs Proyect, Craven and newly recruited fellow countrymen of mine: the : "Fabel van de illegaal" philanthropists. : : : I will weave a few stories together which all deal with exclusivity, cantankerous, disempoweringly delegate personality and name calling cultism (also known as natural selection or in the lead shipshapeshop), seperation if not factionalist seperatism and rocky immunity depicted as and only deceptively appearing to be opposed to: principles, 'proper *(un)*ties' and discernment (not necesarily repeated and treated in that order consistently throughout this epistle). : : : dear jim, I am probably still on you black block sender list but since you have a new email adress, I figured it 'd be worth a try and took you citing a Dutchman as a token encouragement to boot. Such a fittingly chosen one too! : : : : : : I've recorded the following intro before (when the caravan thing passed across the indiginously flavoured mailing lists I was on at the time, to be exact). : : : : : You wrote: "support of savages to remain in savages states.' ------ were you quoting verbatim? : : : : : Anyway, it should be: savages ... who choose to .... not only remain but reestablish and maintain ... whatever they wanna call their state as long as it has non-enchroaching, non-imposing, non-polluting and non unsustainable .. * in other words sovereign * effects. if some would start reversing pollution they would on the other hand deserve to receive all attentions and invitations they would wanna handle. : : : : : : : : Some choose what others wouldn't nor should they have to or be forced to unless they offend the above rules too much.

I have just written an article about the dovetailing of Jane Schneider's demographics of Sicily in their times of swarming and big families with that of JDUnwin (Hopousia) in Dutch; bottom line of that: Harbours are the commercial cunts of the earth. Where adornment and consciencelessness reaches new heights and starts up new leagues of baring daring, Madonnahood broods.

Can you agree to that? : : : : : : : Some choose to be anti.. (and once they are it is easy to slip in to a cumulative mode where and cause one won't do anymore. they double and triple the stakes, . . up the anteaze sea to spoke) and that's an immature state of mind rampant in Holland. I live there (again) and was born there. : : : : :

Lemme start over: : : Thank you, craven raven for jetblacking some paper and/or posts, taking the trouble to scrutinize a fellow Dutchman or two. I am honoured. Or am I? Not, decidedly even if I may put myself in a lever staging spot!!! Not to mention my annoyance with this internecine scapegoatism amongst those feeling themselves as elitist opposition brave enough to separate chaff from grain and interlopers from meelopers (the herd); how proyective of them. Seam andue (see older files involving you lot). Well they are good aren't they? : : : : Not just anti this that or\but\and the other! A triple anti faction able to juggle no less than 3 issues. Hurray, giant stride forward! : : They want no races, no capital nor patriarchs and call themselves realistic with a sharp eye for irreconcilables. They will nip budding fascism when it is still easy. Well, wake up, will you, some of us are drowning in, not to mention being bombed by fascism (which is an unfortunate and abused term that simply means bundling) and consolidation is what they are decidedly and incisively not in favour of, they want the split and then spit at their disowned brethren and forefamily, abandoned, given a contemptuous shove and traded in for a dissociated tangle of incompatible perhaps but at least fellow betrayers .. . . oops sufferers; and so it is that they, addicted to agony and friction ever since rebellion seemed to be 'blits' (a 70ties stop- and buzzword) and adoption of the "kick it till it yields and scavenge about viciously if you can't or don't want to leave a sinking ship" type policy. Mutiny is alright. Why not, one may start fighting parents as soon as social support *(was jesus the rebelious visionary and therefore founder of this institution?)*makes it feas- and possible, even fashionably world revolutionary to bank on plans and plots to outrun the worst capitalists and then try call 'm to a halt if you still remember your initial motivations at that point. And by the way: who needs the new or any sort of right's help with that if you are the only thing left, a perfect monopole? : : : : : : : : : :

Your avid support for and claim of mercurial and mutable talent tickling does jive with my message since to react and fight against something is more often than not to feed it. A simple example: I hadn't even heard of Voorpost (mentioned in the article you cite) till that same crowd you bring to the fore (bearth is the word to translate the Dutch te berde brengen I believe) posted a large multicolour photograph of one of those hairless creatures being stompingly hopped upon with 2 feet at once all over town with an admonition to follow this glorious example of reserving arms for hugging: stop voorpost; on top of all blatant contradictions they anagramatized post into stop. What a score: free pr for the bad guys. . . . . is this the bio-industrial evils seeping into a halfway decent crowd glorying in extravagant, expensive and to say the least illustrious and polluting illusion of control? Fatten 'm up then eat 'm? Just goes to show there's no real struggle here anymore. Zombie land of the big ZZZZZZZZ Not a shred of unadulterated mutually supportive incenting and incensing nature left in this part of unsovereignizing earth.

For the third time: The people you cite, many of whom have refused me access to their resources (secrecy is a game good guys get infected with just like the liberatory use of weapons [[Proyect even managed to attribute Sweden's social successes to it recently; I wonder how well he would manage to compare it with Switzerland though]]; how is it they feel that way whenever they have run out of outrunning skills and don't want to run out on their besieged mountains, trees and motherlands? I feel like I ought to come and try help shoot some fascists in Pine Ridge for a change myself sometimes, what withall the trouble I have with mothers of daughters I don't get to see and such), often enough for the most juvenile of reasons, are suffering anti - addictions (third degree ones to be exact).

For the third time: The people you cite (dutch anti-fascists), many of whom have refused me access to their resources (I mean sitting quietly in a corner of theirs twice a month and leafing through the rags they and only they out of all people I know) get from around the world (they did allow me this for over a year but since I made no move to get closer during this time they became suspicious especially since I started rummaging through their trash regularly after I noticed they threw away magazines of interest to me) suffer from anti - addictions (third degree ones to be exact) for the same juvenile and oedipal reasons. : :

I feel like I ought to come and try help stand up to some fascists in Pine Ridge for a change myself sometimes in desperate moods*(what withall the trouble I have: mothers of daughters I don't get to see and such)* which I suffer from too often as it is. Actually I would prefer to work at an admittedly slight chance to teach the lead lined glove sporting lawenforcer a fend for mine: punch a rock to powder. Preferably on prime time : too.

Secrecy, cliquery, etc are games good guys get infected with just like the socalled 'liberatory use of weapons' (Proyect even managed to attribute Sweden's social successes to it recently; I wonder how well he would manage to connect the degree of militancy with that of social engagement in the case of, say Switzerland for instance); how is it braves feel that way whenever they have run out of outrunning skills and don't want to run out on their besieged mountains, trees and motherlands cause they haven't a clue as to how to? Conflict must be and is always sought out and after from afar, leaving the choice to cut a wide berth, swerve and evade much richer and plenty of time. You defend mutability yourself and not only for the Jewish side of you but a lot of native peoples would call that cowardice and betrayal.

Jesus is reported to have said that to change one law one needs to change them all. Don't you agree? How many issues do you think it is safe to try juggle without losing and having to let go all hopes of becoming to enjoy far out and wide enough support to at least get to delegate and dictate to a seccy instead of among your silly soliloquacious selves. Amsterdam has a certified fool who has devoted hisself to this solo ball sport and tries for 7. He refuses to perform though does practice in public places.

Incongruously shaped factions don't cohere (nor need they clash). When (shaky) connections are disowned cause issues don't add up neatly enough to make a fist (or at least pretend one is biding the right time for it) there is no need to fear and expect any divide and rule policies directed against one cause, if and when we manage well enough to do that type of inanely insane damage amongst our very selves.

Commies are the worst hyrarchists (Proyect you know, would you like to check out a certain Hagendorf, Klaus, a prime close up example that one on top of being both paraphrenic and schizoid: xs4all.nl/~eurodos); we started living in Amsterdam around the same time, both on too small a boat to be legal; he still does, I promoted myself into a bicycle shed enhanced with a lean to wall made of discarded hardwood panes); in tribal society the cult of the personality rules, dictates .....and has charm, rightfull place bycause the damage is limited and 10 braves can control one asshole easily enough not to mention women. Well did that remark comment on capital, patriarchs and racism correctly or what. And I don't need 20plus K to do it ponderously either. : : :

I once said (to Valis) you were my fav pen-ller but you are just as perfectly cloven down the middle as a slaughterhouse pig and a certain colleague I could name (if I hadn't done so plenty enough already, even herein once again), though you are that no longer, would I refuse you shelter or access to my resources (like those Leideners and other Dutch consp. buffs have done to me)? No!!!! Unless like that black brother who has replaced me as the favored mascotte at the spiritual sciences dept. of the A'dam U, you accept the invitation and start to unceasingly come sit on my lip practically, break my concentration, etc. etc, ...change the whole mood of the place, justify the presence of equally macho bosses (whereas before it was a nice lady)

..... after the situation got a little ... well: tense (for a few pages worth of conjectures as to how this came about see the appendix).
and after my pause of working elsewhere over a year come out with a name mentioning prohibition (I, marvelling at seeing him in that same old spot, ask about the access stipulations which he apparantly still managed to either avoid or fullfil, and get a pretense at ignorance from the clerk whom I had certainly seen starting work that before I left. More on that later) while hairy dary quite contrary it was he once again defying irritation, trying to establish, prolong and stamp a space (and exceptional 'position' such as mine was at the time) as his with his elbows and all other tricks up the sleeves of such as those who aspire to emulate, learn, mimic, use and abuse positions and proofs of macho power which they lecher after rather than look ascance at let alone try to end the catch word copycatapult, denigrate and/or discard buzzword calling to fool general public. Bluff enough. Even a year after we went our seperate ways I find an incompletely checked document of mine having been in the world that long under his name. He may nurse his image in peace and wish to send out the inquisition to wash his name out of my mouth with his preferred colour of soap (there is a new store in Amsterdam where beautifully mosaiced and multiply flavor slabs are on sale; sniff, pick and they cut you a slice of the block) all he wants but the supplantation secret is out and about. -----------

Well all that is the least of our problems; when I read about the semterras in Brazil, the four oaks in Minneapolis and the commemoration of the Belgian massacre in the Congo my heart becomes a pool of tears. Nato is a clumsy, dumb and stumbling blunderbuster of a blunt bullybeater and can't seem to get its aims straight nor apply itself frugally.

An exampe of the sometimes, as in this case amazingly inspiring stories posted at the sovernet-l list:

> In 1946, the Indian Claims Commission was formed, permitting American Indian Nations to sue the U.S. government for land "takings" both legal and illegal. : If an Indian Nation could prove a "taking" occurred, that nation was entitled to compensation for losses suffered. : In the early 1970's, the Lakota sued, a "taking" was demonstrated, and the Claims Commission awarded a measly $17.5 million-the 1877 dollar value of the stolen property. : "In your dreams!" said the Lakotas. : "We want our land back." : Enter 1979. : The U.S. Government crawled forward, admitting error in its earlier calculations. : "Yes, you people deserve interest on that $17.5 million. : In our calculations, the new figure comes out to a round $105 million." A steal. : "Forget it!" said the Lakota. : "It's the land we want."

.and this is the section in a report about the railways blasting right through a sacred and therefore beautiful and therefore conspicuous landmarking rock:

> The cultural adviser to the Sto:lo Nation, Sonny McHalsie, said momet'es is one of about 100 so-called transformer rocks in the Sto:Lo territory. : : : He said the Sto:lo people believe some of their ancient ancestors were transformed into stone or resources, such as fish, and there are stories that surround each transformation. : : :

As to the authors you cite or some things suspect about your suspicionfilled adducees:

I think Eurodusnie and the Fabel people are close neighbours and likeminded enough to lump 'm in together without thereby justifying grocenesses from them on their part, maybe some subtleties at most; at any rate, I remained homeless and harassed for the weeks I considered moving there last year) decided to refuse me shelter (when I showed up a few weeks after an announced, quite contrary to my show up policy, arrival). -- They kept the doors to their spacious school building shut (and all sorts of movements, once they have done that to me start looking for a spacegoat to highlight so they can justify such exclusionary policies). ------ Take it from a confessed (and debatably!!!) former iso- and insolatinist: none of this world is good enough for me after all. Just kidding. . .. at least I hope I can am and/or be.----

The fears, rumours, suspicions and expectations of dis- and detractions, diffusion, bewilderment, mystification (OK, OK my style faults again) and/or misunderstanding my work seems capable of inspiring hereabouts might all have done their bit for them to not wanna bother and more of that kind of behavious is due to me if their is some sort of not obvious but nevertheless definite reciprocity in the scheme of things. ----- I guess I should apologize for the length of this letter which isn't only caused by overreaction to various news and neither is it solely due to an overdose of after dinner (6 o'Clock) coffee or a relaxing attempt at escaping my own sordid powerlessness. -----

Let me mention the clue, climax and crux on which I rest my case for those who I hope will have better things to do (then reading on) all of a sudden after reading the next line: As far as crowds and generalities are not only inoffensive but equally and also not devoid of the favour of flavour I pose: For humility's sake most enhancers, reinforcements and "tools" of identity would best be bequathed to oblivion , since they have ob-, in-, contro- and pervers effects (see Viements section below). But if, when, just and only as soon as rock becomes the issue*(which upon being fed rock stops being one whereon progress halts though never one wheron it could ever stop hinging; it can easily get stuck however)*, only then is incisive fragmentation at home and in the right place to rouse and roost righteously; then the task is ''fullbright' '= volbracht, fullfilled, burden lifted dissolved, apportionably spilled, spent, composted and sprouting the till then doomed and deemed long gone leg of a new journey. ------

Any other less perfect way of playing st peter (example of his impersonationalisms follows:) at some all too rare and exclusive gate of paradise one flatters oneself all those manage to pile up and push against who follow you across the shifting sanctified watch words which invariably carry the prefix anti (take note Craven!) is painting oneself into a corner thanks to those who fail to make their particular grade of cateschism compilation and scenario moodswing inflections. Off they go to a merry and exciting hunt; expenses paid, they get some grants to grunt (Europarliament recompensatory foibles at street urchin activist levels bribe all out of the ungrateful thumbing career sooner or later), they needs must find a fresh culprit to bring down and confront (so as to help you feel your policing duties are justifiably rewarded in the form of appropriately impersonal handouts). ---------

To reconcile and better yet seperate competitors is true competence; to be a lone socialist, an all too exclusive specie-alist if you ask me, is an unworkable and non-dynamic paradox. To play Adam and "The people" in its myriad translations, Don Quichotte, Tarzan, etc. and/or any other hero*(in)(s)* you care to commemorate/ revive and identify with modestly (=succesfully) enough with is everymans hope, burden and nemesis (except jews of course, they have earned it to be above it all and are taking a break just now). I for one feel I am best forgotten but my principles must become unquestioned habit, routine and unspoken common sense (an ethic to which every thinker will measure up his or hers I am sure, well let 'm, all welcome, count mine in; aint that what Jesus is reported to have meant symbolized and played out? In that sense I agree with my petty tyrants you see; if you can just let me be, no need to mention me).

To hone and tone typing and composition skills requires a great deal of struggle not to make one's attempts too repetitive, especially if one loves one's teachers and petty tyrants but it seems to come easiest for me when I feel justified in scolding them. Just don't be scalded by these lite bites and I admit readily: blind bits of light. At least I never mean to hurt no one and when or if I sound damn provocative it is cause and please grant it may be meant to mean that I am constantly cursing myself for failing to teach yall to know better already. Please don't let me forget it but if you can at all help it don't punch me in the nose to remind me. Consentful self pun easement in the sense of taking aim at humility with oneself as the ammo is the only productive kind. Maybe I ramble on so clipclopper clear cause I read my second and third by Rushdie lately.

Sisis vs Seashepherd involves similar contests in credential stacking and socalled 'silly' but nevertheless indulged acronym associations as dubious highlight, that is the only section where the contest could have become playfull were it not that the references to death and deadly serious reminders of violence seem to be preferred and stuck with most of the time; at least they manage to agree on that much though mirroring each other's viewpoints with substitutive mouthing offs, etc, which happens to be the simple nature of opposing ones. What's left for (the) right appears (wrong)(?) for (the) left right and various vica reversovisions but it does so plainly enough only to the impartial remote third party (a promise of WWwebcam conferring elder-councils) keeping Nato under control of a remote and aloof but respected UN implied since they shall even be voted to hold topdog leash (and swing it): threaten with them effectively before they can afford to threaten ...scuse me '[N]euthen ease' 'm ehr... youth in asia them .... yes a shameful plug for Netscape intended here who's composer I joyfully wield) , iow, eventually dispense with them alltogether. Isn't this the "truth to justice" adjudication your esteemed fellow Canadian brother in sappy substitute arms: Bruce Clark is driving at, jimmy???

Viements for power leave the (people's?) path .... of getting and keeping out of the way; taking the subtlest of nearly invisible signs as omens ever new, changing and significant instead of the mass societies their stock and traffic pile ups, stacked tash leaks and other chronically dizzying signlanguage encrypting in the sense of entombing better than a clash with a comet could. ----- Off the battle and flour fields, out of the trampling rampage mode should be a better aim but to vie for power is leaving no time, attention or energy to invest in mechanisms which would allow the unforced breezes and tides to sweep the corridors of 'm clean and clear of such ghostly ghastly possesions as (perverted peter) keycontrols so they can start to hopper, classify, seperate, propel, catapult and allocate less chaotically (or should I say more? Either way, you know what i mean: with less at all cost favoritism and nastily unaccountable stringpulling) like only a complex of a pulley system, central station and switchpoint can).

To cipher oneself away is a trusty Dutch saying, a thesauric synomym for humility. The plight principle of parodic and tragic paradox though, has it that those with ciphering ability, talent and skillhoning opportunity most often and only logically so*(see my explanation of the crossword in the ground as a perfect symbol for the most essential, decisive and weighty leg of long term success: selfpreservation which when its requirements are curbed and kept at a minimum the blessing of an all beings blessing spring springs up)* turn it the ob-, per-, etc. uses mentioned already. I will not tire of pointing out exceptions to that when and as soon as besides whereveer I spot and can present them. Prime hit on that parade of mine is the German Ulrich von Beckerath, dead since before I was born;

I hope to have pointed out the flaws and blind spots (lack of an emphasis on ecological aspects for truly universal value standard faciltator, bearer, investee [[amorphous, cheap as sweat types of dust unadulterated with the poisons to extract fabled and fabulous untouchables like gold]] if not imperative) passably.

Who are today's cipher giants? IMFers? Day traders? Astronomers? Satelite launchers? Casino capitalists? Bible code thumpers? -(Brendan Mckay has a site defusing those rotten and blackminded selfsacrificial jews' hype with any big enough book you care to mention)- I'm sure suicidal braincell killers (even though eating 'm is pretty much a global taboo now) shall find freakier and uglier forms, rates and altars yet to man*(y)*handle destiny.

Spicy host and icy ghost must remain ever too close for comfort and result in slight distordance. ------ True death and peace requires an awful lot of learning neither will they escape each other in the long run. ------- Thus ends this email from your crucible kindled kinshipper, close enough for trouble, anywhere, everytime.

Third thread and tangentially related storystrand: My personal experience with (courtfool / mascotte) niche exploitation at ccl and other partitions of the UvA continued and concluded (after a pause of over a year during which I had my dirtcheap external sub at the Uva infocenter, down the street) and during which mr Lucky came to face me but once in the public library, willing to part with a piece of his mind (though he prefers to call it: information) as follows:

> "the reason why you were not welcome there anymore was your sprawling paraphernalia; your food spread out around you, etc. you were making yourself at home too much".

I had taken to rescuing single sidedly beprinted paper from the recycling bin where it had landed exactly twice as quickly as need be, a doubly premature discard: smoothing out wrinkles and stacking 'm for a second run through the printer was my aim but I made few converts following my example. I ignored him whenever we met by chance). That one time he says (threateningly, with that finger wagging again, which he did right under my nose once but not coming very close this time) that I am not to use his name (in vain?) and leaves me wondering why he should not be happy to be enquired after (rather than investigated by the immigration police; he almost got me riled enough to put those on his scent a year ago). ----- What could be wrong with asking about his obviously exemplary if not exempt status? I had done begun doing so the previous morning before seeing him sure enough at work later as I was quite peacefully too but the next day when asking about changes cautiously again the people in charge (who knew me well enough) pretended "their noses bled" (not to know) and were either eager to protect their new mascotte *(who skillfully elbowed out the previous one everybody had got tired of: me; no wonder after 4 years but the employee turnover had been fast enough not to cause worries for either party)*or this man I myself am responsible for sneaking in there initially (on top of his living quarters since then) and saddling them up with had inspired the fear of God in 'm and sworn 'm to secrecy succesfully. Either way, after I guessed they just happened to still tolerate him since he made use of the old apple equipment nobody bothered to even install a login on, I sat down to see if they would tolerate me again as well, besides (different room this time luckily). I was asked: "are you a co-operator"? I should have replied 'I didn't know' just to get even but said: "Well, certainly not a controperator". That proved not good enough, I was asked to leave and so I vented the guess just mentioned which brought on the stormy approach this section started with (black text).

It is all surely ironic that I am the one knuckled out while I thought to hog my position a little longer. With him displacing me as the mascotte and maverick free agent now though, I further guess they can make 'goede sier' (show off [[the proof that they are nicely non-discriminatory and are now hosting a black street urchin for a badly needed change]]). To be forbidden to catch up with someone you feel owes you at least that much is nothing like to investigate or win info as the dutch say, let alone emulation atttempts not to even dare mention reversals of fates (not that I aspire to it; if he is entitled to his stint in the eyes of his underling/ supervisors/ benefactors fellow macho misers' eyes, who am I to argue).   The conditions and stipulations which allow him to continue to make such easily tolerable, proper and responsible use of the ccl.edu facilities being off limits I wonder about gratitude, a tricky substance with a treacherously schizzy sell by date. Every sale is a sell out and birth of pretense in a sense. I feel Don (oops, sorry donnylad, a little sacrilege don't hurt do it?) is attaining the status of perfect mimic when it comes to the worst whitish western man offered the world to try escape or remain unaffectedly non deflected by. We all have lost the moorings of independence and non-imposition and not only just since the moghuls played Euro tribes like a harmonica but since continents clashed, it seems, to me at any and especially this rate. Bottom line: my condolences, mr unmentionable; your blackness seems to have *(b)*leached away.

Anybody care to transform some rock with me?????; we'll pick some common and non-disputed enough ones, those with little burdensome history, that'll keep us out of (WRONG) trouble and put us right at the source of *(RIGHT)*trouble (fresh paramagnetic growsome mud full of brandnew airbreaths and unsuspected miracles). There is life to had upon dealing rock right. Indeed does rock turn into all resources; shrewd observation . . and my site must be one of the hottest on the subject. All welcome. Especially lead loaded glove sporting machos; they must really be able to punch some powder for us (and I mean us in the sense of all my relations lowliest first) ... if we get 'm to see *(sun)*fire catching reason : :

:a critique of last year's adventures with 'colleagues' at the UvA, their adcampaign and info center regulations: I, marvelling at seeing him in that same old spot during a pop in after my yearlong mostly ligit stint at the infocenter, ask the desk clerk about the access stipulations which he apparantly still managed to either avoid or fullfil, and get a pretense at ignorance from one whom I had certainly seen starting work there before I left and ditto from another who had known me a long time. My enquiries make the good man come out of his corner in a stormily determined fashion, he utters a name mentioning prohibition from 10 paces away and storms right back. But hairy dary quite contrary it was he defying irritation, trying to establish, prolong and brand-stamp a space (and exceptional 'position' such as mine was at the time) as his with his elbows and all other tricks up the sleeves of such as those who aspire to emulate, learn, mimic, use and abuse positions and proofs of macho power which they lecher after rather than look ascance at let alone try to end the catch word copycatapult, denigrate and/or discard buzzword calling to fool general public. Honesty bids me to admit he highlighted the democratic deficit of the grand Euro push and his verdict on my work wasn't far off the general consensus so far either: inaccesible. As for name abuse: even a year after we went our seperate ways I find an incompletely checked document of mine having been in the world that long under his name owing to his settings on the machines we shared. He may nurse his image in peace and wish to send out the inquisition to wash his name out of my mouth with his preferred colour of soap (there is a new store in Amsterdam where beautifully mosaiced and multiply flavor slabs are on sale; sniff, pick and they cut you a slice of the block) all he wants but the supplantation secret is out and about as of here and now till somebody gainsays me and makes me see it differently at any rate.

Bunk, hype and hypocrisy as it turns out cause after battles over the light intensity spanning several years and during which I managed to make a corner here and there quite tolerable for months at a time by choosing strategic moments to stand up on the table and turn the tl lighting off reducing glaring by half and allowing me to dim the screen emissions (criminally tolerated substance that; we ought to have : radiation screens, such as I enjoyed only during the last month of my subscription, : installed on every computer by law for the sake of general health), not once causing fellow users to complain and later when I fended for whole sections to receive this treatment (obliged to do this since the switches were whole sale serial and my corner policy had been discouraged after which I operated under an umbrella, several in fact, since I left 'm on my bike and they got borrowed by passers by but not faster than one finds flawed ones in the trash hereabouts, especially after a windrain combo) which I thus happened to win both on points (graduation instead of homogeneous light intensity) and votes (fellow users would actually choose to work in this section, hardwon and constantly under siege, dimmer and more naturally shaded, of their own choosing; that is when they could have opted differently). They saved face and threw me out cause . . . I worked on homepages; a regulation no no. : : : : : : Not very much in agreement with either this verdict or their ad campaign I made no bones about using fellow user logins for a few days but alas I was not a number in the crowd anymore, rumours caught up with me, easy enough since I am among a handful of longest haired males and double average age here, not to mention the *(english newspaperbag, a ground score at a Glastonbury festival, full of broken dairy containers at the time)that faithfully followed me all these years, and so was hounded and out of bounded. It would be more justifiable to prosecute sellers of phone cards if they made phones off limits than the card swappers and passer onners right? I would not have gone this far if the facilities were booked out but there are plenty machines free and idling away at least till the start of next term and even then most early mornings; the net economy dictates obsolescence sets in before wear out so any policy to keep churning stuff at full capacity ought to be welcome right?) no matter who uses it (a 'valid to tender' function); whoever paid tuition should be allowed to lend the login to his greatgrand or whoever just like the owner of a cicle disposes and lends it to whomever he sees fit. yea, sure will, arthie, hope you and the land are one.

Where was that again incidentally. I toyed with revisiting stateside this year since the rainbow gathering is in pennsylvania like itwas 13 years ago when I was experiencing my first one. That became 3 in total plus a number of Euro ones and a couple of Ozzie editions.If I was sure about the statute of limitations concerning my thousandsdollars worth of accumulated and auto-increased fines for minortraffic offences, not to mention the deferred investigation concerning my green card, I would come play tourist again. I have a Euro-communityguide and intended to go visit about 30 of them in 3 countries as soon as I got wheels. Still haven't though. You have probably heard about that Formula 1 cobbling team who came up with an compressedair powered vehicle. Output is negative pollution for starters. Apparantly Mexico City has ordered 40.000 of them (there's linksto this under techn. innov. in my recent_links.htm). - - - - - How many K's is Harmony in total? - - - - - - - - I had the same ideas about your work as you do about mine: coulduse some recollating and tightening up into themes. I have spentyears trying to do just that with my first batch of serious work; the second third of my site is made up of 'guest appearances' and the last is a rambling bunch of list posts and semi-chrono-correspondence. My counter doesn't work so I don't know how many people visit and steal concepts but I hope (and think) plenty. - - - - - - I enjoy making my kind of web page. Somebody offered to put up a bit of audio-ed poetry of mine in canada. Sounds exciting. If you would want me to make you a page it might inspire me to finally get a computer of my own. Access is still very limited in Hollandand often unnecessarily constricted as a cost of security as well. I will look up your posts at darwin and darwinism, Envtecsoc (Environment,Technology, Society) and ecol-econ. - - - - - I'm having the same trouble as you. Got chucked of off 3 lists and one cantine so far In the latter case censure tightened more and more first but I inspired the hell out of everybody there; they are still on about it!!! (details in my files). - - - - PS: I think word mechanician is magic enough for me but very dangerous if you don't have some sort of serious anchor; look at what happened to Joyce. Pretty scary stuff really, I'm just reading Brenda Maddox's biography ... gruesome ... his daughter went completely bonkers but a lot was involved not the least of which was of course alcohol. Let's suppose the German countryside - produce and industry was turned to gold which slowly and slyly accumulated and wandered into the vain, protsy and posh pockets of nobility and their collab-bankers ----- (post-script: I saw a movie about Kapo's yesterday, the 28th of nov, the director made a point of pointing out that the subject was and still is hard to bring up though the punishment is light and conviction difficult; I told him afterwards [[many of the directors for the docs and semi-documentairies premiering at the IDFA are available for questions]] that if the bottom end of this sort of morally speaking relatively clearcut and clean hyrarchy [[they had no choice, no more than most Germans anyway]] was hard to discuss, how many decades will it take to tackle the top end of it????). Native American gold wandered into Jewish pockets a bit more forcefully, precipitously (see the atlantic monthly article with the plumed indian on the front, written by Frazier and called: "on the rez").
------------- The various immaculately superior, formula-virtuosity flaunting, migrant, the singular and severe sunlight worshipping desert patriarch progenies ply their trade*(midas like monetairy appreciation eroding succulent diversity and sumptuous culture into a highly inflammatory rompruckus amongst themselves)* with sparrowlike brutal yet often gay bickering amongst themselves, which impresses and stops their enemies short in mute amazement. Their identification with the purity and homogeneity of the sun and space, stars and sky inclined them to hinging all their doings on a singular rationale and referent boosting their confidence in reaching out for a reign as extensive as their God paving the way, succesfully; revolve the world, direct the rain, cling to the old testostrament, go for gold, stick together, mind your sponsor cover for a shylock the latest yall: join and/or finance the gn.apc.org/nattytrust effort. - - - - - - American Jewish credit sent to stabilize the aforementioned gold which was under threat of a militaristic movement (Hitler) gaining power was the sort of quit or double gamble financiers had been familiar with since equiping ships in the Middle ages. Instead of the desired appeasement effect the Germans wanted to use the bait to catch up to and get even with the baiter and retrieve what was already lost (their tranquil countryside autonomy). Jews scattered of course, something they love doing, maybe cause they have a long memory of the need to streamline, cull and prune, let money do its solidarity corrupting work: splitting the tribe into factions of unimaginative will to survive strenghtening and selecting for alpha-dominance type victims versus the choosy, sleigh of head handling victors in order to look tight and commit one more Biblical genocide. - Their books are home always festivals will fool all folks everywhere into a hospitality which turns into an eviction. allanelm@hotmail.com, dko5303@vip.cybercity.dk, havn@svanholm.dk, >andpa@post.tele.dk: greetings, dear danish communards, here is a report from prospective colleague (me) about conditions I for one am hoping to escape .. perhaps by joining you. At least that is the plan if I can get more reports and info confirming the tiny ones in "Acres, USA, a voice for eco-agriculture", about the vigorous growth of organic husbandry, horti- and agriculture in Denmark. I now as yet know little about the present, nor much about the targeted succes rates If i read the little Acres blurb right there is some sort of blanket coverage involved (i'm all for the consolidated and consequently consecutive, consistent, constant and conclusive application of traditional beyond traditional as well as state of the art mineral metabolizing rates, my favorite aspect of organic organiculture; a subject i have followed closely since the early eighties) all of Denmark's farms must comply with organic standards. Is this true and if so by what date? So much about my query for now, more lateron in the PS's.

"Tenacious aspects in Dutch politics and agriculture": The gaps between intentions, policies, targets and legislation besides those between practice and enforcements here in Holland regarding these issues would seem far behind Denmark's if the already referred to Acres tidbit proves right. I don't call the poldermodel succesful when the airquality still reaches levels below those of an average smokers every couple of days due to a "tiny but annoying aspect of the manure problems", the very wording in which this nosesore of a subject are making political headlines once again just now. The pig population is up to the levels of 3 years ago before the latest outbreak of a pest which prompted some prominents to advocate and plead for better conditions. A flood of wonderful intentions ensued. Of course the European norms are not reached here yet but still the farmers figure they wanna keep at their old tricks with that proverbial toughness we find among most professionalisms. Public outcry over pigpest-virulence seems if no longer the only, certainly the first bone of contention proving capable of unseating politicians over here (discovery of condoners and even exploiters of drugsmuggling high up in lawenforcement echelons couldn't even budge or punish anybody very much nor manage to cause that sort of deposition). It's not that I haven't tried to put up a bitfight first. A few sizable articles about the correct and necessary treatment of manure (stirring finely powdered rock dusts and perhaps a ditto carbon source into this agressive bloater, diluter and fouler of values, synchronous and quite on a par with speculative capital), such as I eyewitnessed somewhere in Switserland 15 years ago which resulted in nonleaching, stable and rich compost, have been online at my site since 97; hopefully elsewhere also. If I had no qualms about the high transport cost factors of concentrations and specialisations I could advocate and endorse a thriving regional biodigester producing gas and compost but I am an untypical dutchman in this respect also and prefer simpler as well as more local solutions (especially to food problems). ----------- PS: do starapples thrive anywhere in Denmark? I have some capital set aside to start an orchard and would like to compare some land prices in different countries. --------- PS II: y'are welcome to host-post this onto the gaia discussion list; I got chucked off it myself do to some cursing i did at winged wolf, a female technocrat. ------------ PS III (on libraries): I read the ecotopia gemeinschaften directory and wonder if anybody has an email adress for "hesbjerg befoerforingen"; I have almost a hundred boxes of books in three languages to place somewhere in a community library and my ecotopia guide says there is a multi lingual one there. Any other recommendations of community libraries where high traffic in folks studying my subjects (see below, especially the bibliography) can be expected is very welcome. ----- Date:Fri, 15 Oct 1999 05:30:37 -0700 Subject: Re: query and offer To: "Allan Elm" <allanelm@hotmail.com,

A quick note re Bogdanov: As Lou Proyect has been concerned to point out over and over again on these lists, it is important in light of subsequent history of democratic-centralist parties to point out that Lenin did not attempt to have Bogdanoff expelled from the Bolshevik faction. I believe a good deal of both the honest concern and the sheer hysteria that the idea of "party in philosophy" stirs up comes from this tradition of outlawing from party politics those who are judged to be philosophically incorrect. Hence MEC does need to be read in the context of Lenin's continued political relations with Bogdanov despite both political and philosophical disagreements. Carrol.

It so happens that just about the time I read this on the net, a stream of Saul Bellow books went through my hands during the 4-5 weeks I was 'busy' chauffeuring my mother to hospital (only now and then cause sister and uncle shared that burden) to visit an operating and recovering father. In one of them I came across a passage where the following anecdote about Stalin was told (Bellow was a Kojeve connoiseur and that was a violent Stalinist so he knew): he came back to a polish town and asked some officials whatever happened to that attractive so and so, apparantly not aware of the fact that he himself had condemned her to death. That is the dangerous attitude Proyect projects without realizing it himself neither. Woops, perhaps I am at fault here. All of a sudden I realize this is about Lenin not Stalin.. On a different note about mother Russia: I went to see the Prince a documentary at the IDFAmsterdam which is sort of a rainbow flavored thing about revolutions. A since 1917 repeatedly assaulted and meanwhile roofless castle is owned up by a heir of the prerev owner with his wife and kids who returns from an increasingly menacing situation in the Ukrain. He is a jovial sweettalker (tales at a counter about the role of women during the retreat of Napoleon) who tries to pierce the ground at a supposedly suitable site for a new well (earlier shots (the maker took about a year perhaps) show him rolling a 6foot diameter sewage pipe through the slippery forest to dump in a hole dug around an old well he remembered from childhood and during which he proudly exclaims it is the only usable well in the wide vicinity) with a pipe to which new pieces are welded as it is beaten down. His optimism at the start of this (parading in front of his wife with swollen chest to whom he constantly plays out little lovesickness dramas except when she invites and leads him on to) contrasts sharply with the disillusion when he does not succeed. One day in summer volunteers from Moscou (only thirty miles away where he probably goes to court in futile attempts to regain title to his ancestral property; a fact told but not shown) arrive to help him clear some rubble. >> ALLIANCE FOR BETTER FOODS SUPPORTS CROP BIOTECH The Alliance for Better Foods (http://www.betterfoods.org/) is an organization that has been formed by the 'Grocery Manufacturers of America' (GMA) to bring together the various sectors of the food industry to encourage the proper use of new technology, to encourage scientific-based discussion, and to disseminate factual information regarding the origin and safety of food ingredients. The organization believes that 'biotechnology is a safe way to produce healthier food in greater quantities, ensure a cleaner environment and aid in the fight against world hunger'. ----------
> In a separate announcement the Vatican came out in support of transgenic crops.... VATICAN CITY (CNS) -- Vatican experts voiced a 'prudent yes' to genetic engineering of plants and animals, but restated Church objections to human cloning and other biotechnologies that modify the human genetic code. Members of the Pontifical Academy for Life presented two volumes of documents Oct. 12 on ethics and genetic technology, the result of more than two years of discussion and study. ----- 'We are increasingly encouraged that the advantages of genetic engineering of plants and animals are greater than the risks. The risks should be carefully followed through openness, analysis and controls, but without a sense of alarm,' said Bishop Elio Sgreccia, vice president of the pontifical academy. -------- 'We give it a prudent yes, ' he said. 'We cannot agree with the position of some groups that say it is against the will of God to meddle with the genetic make-up of plants and animals.' -----------

RAFI COMMENT: The (Holy Roman?) Empire Strikes Back For the past two years, the Gene Giants and the Food industry have been reeling from one media disaster after another and retreating from mounting consumer and producer opposition. The Alliance for Better Foods is the belated and bothered counter-attack from the U.S. multinationals. In launching their dialogue with the public while simultaneously announcing their determined support for biotechnology and GMOs, the industry is trying to pre-determine the dialogue rather than listen to its critics. By linking their announcement of the 'Alliance' with the Vatican s ill-starred pontification, the companies look more manipulative and self-serving than ever. Never the freshest tomatoes on the shelf, the food industry is setting itself up for failure. This past Spring in Europe, food industry reps told the Gene Giants that they wouldn t 'take a bullet' for GM seeds. Apparently U.S. food companies and the Vatican feel otherwise. Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition! ----------- The industry had anticipated that the crop acreage sown to GM seeds in the United States would double from about 65 million acres this year to over 120 million acres in Y2K. Biotech companies were projecting seed sales in the U.S. to jump from $1 billion to $2 billion. Instead, one report in the Wall Street Journal predicts a 20% sales decline in a market and at a time when momentum means everything.* ------ Privately, industry spin-doctors concede that theGene Giants Generation One products (unabashedly tying herbicides to seeds) were tactically stupid and indefensibly self-serving. Many also fear that Generation Two (featuring traits that save processors money) will prove an equally hard sell. The Food industry s pointless defense of Generation One will confirm consumer opposition to Generation Two. The Empire Strikes Out. ------- Corporate Cristi? The Vatican s faith in the foodindustry is hardly justified given recent events in Europe and elsewhere. After only 4 years of commercialized GM crops, it is both impossible to prove risk or to prove safety. Given that Generation One GMOs offer us little more than seeds that can shower in toxic chemicals, it is hard to understand why society should take risks so that the food industry can make profits. The Vatican has not expressed an opinion as to whether transgenic grapes and transgenic cereals are compatible with the doctrine of transubstantiation (the transformation of bread and wine into the body and blood of Chr1ist as taught by the Church). One transgression at a time? ------- NOTES: The Alliance for Better Foods is a U.S.-based industry lobby (whose members have annual sales of more than a trillion dollars) comprised of 26 trade and commodity associations defending 16 GM (or transgenic) crops dominated by just enough food multinationals to make a fist. The Vatican is the postage-stamp-sized temporal state of the Roman Catholic Church, with humungous financial resources and stock investments in the food industry; a half-billion members, and a two-thousand-year history that should make it old enough to know better.------- RAFI is a postage-stamp-sized cyber CSO with a half-million dollar budget, 6 staff members, a 22-year history and smart-assed enough to tell the Vatican so. -- * = Kilman, Scott, 'Seeds of Doubt Once Quick --- Converts Midwest Farmers Lose Faith in Biotech Crops', Wall Street Journal, Nov. 19, 1999, p. After 2 years of silence I find my former mentor and semi-employer John Zube owner/operator at LMP has onlined his entire alphabetical catalog and some of his obsessive rants about cheap (microfiche) publishing (not that he is wrong about it): Hi John, is there any sign of that big black diary crammed with notes taken in A'dam and Berrima returning yet?????????? If only I had dared wake you to go get it late at night. I felt too tired to cycle all the way back to that fateful phonebox. Never did get to see the girl I was calling then neither. Oh well, let bygones be bygones, I don't have access to academic books here anymore anyway since I worked on my homepage against the rules at the infocenter which is tied to and in with the book loaning facilities, . . . oh hell.

> Later response from John and my reply to that spliced in here: I found only some toilet articles of you and received one letter for you. I mentioned the latter in our last tel. contact. I don't know what you did with your "big black diary". I believe it was your "book", which I read while you were here and which you had, I believe, also on disk. Nor have any notes to it appeared anywhere here.

A big black diary stuffed with my notes from that whole year and some months beyond was lost on the night i went to make some phonecalls to a lady i had met (at an anti-squat) in holland with a child by the son of the Dutch bank director (who wasn't helping her much). I carried the second half of a cooked chicken with me, the preparing of which was the last thing you allowed me to do in your house and which i had tried to keep cool in a bucket filled with water. Eating it on a park bench before the fatefull phonecall (which led to nothing other than leaving my diary behind) must have made me too sluggish. A poster promising a reward on the phonebooth itself over the next week and repeated visits at the police station not to mention the trash dump (all of which you are meanwhile repressing obviously) didn't get me my diary back. --- It still pains me no end though it is not the first and probably not the last such a thing happens to me. ------- Anyway, yesterday was Dutch Santa Claus and I found your site plus that of an English rawfoodist (or fresh networker as I'm sure he will prefer to be called) who did a diss. on Rockdust. He did not find many more webresources than I already had though and strangely enough doesn't list me although I am the only one to have actually onlined a piece of work by Julius Hensel, the great classical proponent of our cause. I am less suprised you should not list my guest appearance subdirectory although I am now and always will be the first to upload and expose some translated Bth to the world. Never fear though, nobody much goes over and looks at it much, not even people who should, like the ones at transaction.net (Bernard Lietaer et al), a ghostly quiet place too. I do expect you to take a look at least even if you don't plan to link to it. It is the MFN material mostly which Sigi has in German on his site and the big light orange PP on insurance you still have so many paper copies of. ------------As I see it, your slide to the right has caused you to appear like you are holding people like Bth, who after all was expertly juggling leftist concepts hostage, at least in the eyes of present day leftish thinkers who look upon libertarianism as a dirty word leading to things like the WTO which is a great lie based on subsidized transport which will wreck climates as fast as primitive use of firestick cultivation even if that did not get out of hand 9 out of 10 times either. another time splicing spit: My supposed slide to the right is news to me. Libertarians are simply associated with that side of the spectrum John and they are associated with neo-liberalists even before they would be with the origins of the hippy movement for instance... at least untill your fiche shine a light on that big time yet cheap and easy right??????????????? Anyway John, welcome to the web, and would you send me the content listing fiches for the ones you have made since I was down under?? Much obliged. ------------ If you decide to look at what I did to Zander, Beckerath, Rittershausen and Vaubel please point your browser to: http://members.tripod.com/poetpiet/guest_appearances/intro_to_currrency_issues.htm

> You did something to Zander, Beckerath, Rittershausen and Vaubel, you say. That sounds ominous. I did not change the text anywhere; just left some mistakes in which escaped my scanning induced need for corrections. I will look up the URL you gave for this - and some of the others. There are numerous sites on the Internet that I have not yet looked up, far less downloaded. Their hints accumulate in a box.
> PIOT, John

Reason for Bth's low visibility: at least as far as my site is concerned the low trafficrate to my site must account for something but on searches for Beckerath I usually show up; probably not when searching for zube or lmp, but I have not tried that search anywhere close to as consistently over the years. ------ Here is the start and remains of that second contact after a 2 year hiatus:Hi John, I thought you might like to alert the following people to your efforts:

---------- So, it may be a while before I straighten out my metatag mess (my computer access here at the moment is cheap but restricted to office hours and somewhat shaky (frequent system crashes and oddities plus interruptions from the halfbaked (which wouldn't matter but some of them are nevertheless imposing) people who concentrate in this community house offering courses in all kinds of things). Soon there will be one of those halls seating 600 like Easyjet has already up and running across the channel) and then perhaps I should get a mention again when a search for you is done, your fiche catalog (I scanned and poem aged :o) I mean homepaged about half of that little bright yellow '85 one has been online for almost a year now anyway.--------- I have decided there are basically 2 kinds of people *(reminiscent of that little booklet in your conspiracy pile/corner which divides them into individualist and mass societies... what was the name of that US west coast guy with his birds eye view of history again??)*besides man and woman (in varying checks and balances much like Otto Weininger proposed), namely those with an eye to the future *(that's you lot, J Neil Smith and that flavor ilk)*and those with one to the past (most indigenous peoples). ---------- To compensate and prove I really do understand you I present the following post which will resonate with your views a lot better:

I am always interested in the fiches which show the tables of contents and such. Welcome to the net John, even a oneman show has to diversify you know :o]

this is to a colleague of mine, a man who put his diss. on rockdust use, etc on the net at: ocities.com/HotSprings/Sauna/1432/SoilRemineralization.htm hi, I will be looking more closely at your findings tomorrow and invite you to the same with mine soon. We seem to have a few things in common and as far as I'm concerned we would be perfectly suited to link reciprocally (frankly, given your thoroughness and lavish spread of related sites, far outresourcing me ... on second sight I find there is only one more than I had already gathered but it is dead), I am a bit suprised you haven't linked to me yet; I realize it may have something to do with the crummy state my metatag make up, a pretargetting tool my site is badly in need of refurbishing with, but nevertheless... anyway, what do you think???? the next day: I should like to invite you as a special guest (if you ain't been by already). You seem to have found the same webresources except one (drbuche is not reachable nor is his website. any news on that????) but if you copied them at my place I would have gotten a mention too right??????Can't imagine you didn't come across me in your searches so let me start over. Why am I not in your linklist??????? What is the reason for ignoring me???? We seem to have plenty in common (though I eat meat again now due to the proximity to me mom and dad the butcher couple perhaps). I plan to figure out a way to plant a big piece of land to trees pleached, in calender circles and as attractive as possible. Making such places open to the public gets you a lot of support here in Holland at the moment. How is it in England???

There are a few tastes of him on the net. I just formatted his latest to get as manysignsymbols per page (came to around 6) as possible (the first printing I've done in months). Lemme know if you need help finding it. ---- "A URL link would be simplest." ------ I am now able to give a more complete answer but as far as pertinence... none of these URL's have much to say about his forthcoming book called: "Acting out in groups", perhaps a rechristening of what is referred to below:
an older set of urls (woven by Peter Krapp; hydra@umail.ucsb.edu) for Lawrence Rickels material: hydra.umn.edu/twd/ecki.html --- hydra.umn.edu/twd/twd.html (9 URL's, some of which are slightly outdated cause Nazi-psychoanalysis is not his next forthcoming book anymore,. . . for the moment anyway) newer location:arts.ucsb.edu/terminals/rickles/rickles-0.html (Mine A little something added to the "hydra" site material, this parallels the Manuel Frank book called "das kalte Herz; all about the relative immortality of crystallizations).----- http://huizen.dds.nl/~poetpiet (een half Mbeetje in't Hollands; de rest bij tripod) door Piet 'rotsstof' uw pionier in het leiden van een persoonlijke printjes, and machinerie (computer, auto, telefoon) vrij loven, oeps, leven vol fantastische plannen. This post elicited one response from my fellow warriors:

> Piet, Thank you for sharing the Thompson material. It is truly thought-provoking. I am also reminded that superstition and far-out Christian cults are now on the rise throughout the world. Both have historically been symptomatic of societies under stress. Arden Buck

dear Arden, thanks but as the dutch say: no thanks .. like the french say: de rien = nothing; meaning 'no trouble') when they wanna be polite but I see it as my human right, duty and pleasure, that is: as self evident and the very least a self balancing, 28 jointed adapterbase bipedalling being, an electrochemical reduction plant, integral with segregated stowages of special energy extract on storage batteries for subsequent actuation of thousands of hydraulic and pneumatic pumps with motors attached to 62000 miles of cappilaries in my position can come up with. adapted from Bucky Fuller, quoted in the latest Wired Magazine; a new Bucky source on the web is a dissertation angelfire.co/net/marksomers/ggc.html; it's called: a fuller explanation. Of course Bucky split the back to basics movement right down the middle with bell bottoms and long locks flying in all directions laterally; rockets vertically. His is an all too practical/penetrant cosmology to avoid the unfortunate side effect of making the impatient crowds even more so. Not until a year or so I saw the '72 book about (and called) space colonies (put out by the whole earth catalogers) which Bucky helped inspire and underwrote on both sides of the fence. (damn gemini qualities) What I mean is evident starting from the very first page which shows two indians and one horse staring up into the distant atmosphere suggesting sight/site of a launch; the comics thought bubbles contain: "good luck" in one and "good riddance" in the other. In your opinion, what exactly would "bundling forces" entail? John I shall try to be brief in my answer, so expect some pointers only; plenty of follow up material to be found at my site. Bundling/ weaving/ strengtening/ cohering/ harmonizing is thwarted by the following fact more than any other: Incongruent and antagonistic transactions are mediated by one and the same means of payment and unit of account helping wolves to sheeps clothes. To remedy this we will have to facilitate a lot of allegiance reshuffling. If you take the trouble to go see some of Beckerath's work via guest_appearances/intro_to_currency_issues.htm you will surely see what I mean. ------

This person must have pondered the pot baggy with rosehip seeds in it, emptied them on a plastic cherry tomato container lid and at some point put a turd on top of all that. He shat on it. What a top off. Couldn't wait until the always hypothetical and absent owner consents /instructs/ stops holding off out on and about stuff. Followed irrepressible urges; no need to dig any up laboriously. Here comes one now. Sudden. Praps triggerd by contemplation of what potentially grows up into pretty purges. An amateur and fanciful landscaper's savings.Production capital however latent and organic, minimal and merely promising like a rosehip seed. Cute little things, all different shapes, not like a coconut or an avocado seed at all. Soak up the shape of its energypotential and a taste, a foreshadowing, a lure, a knowledge floods in; bypass all theseformulawarenicheties of morphogenetic and paramagnetic resonance penetrations to involuntary answer a compelling call. Adam where art thou, where is thy turd, where drops the boin? Did you start up a seedball company (found one on the net this weekend). What will he do with it? Or rather, who's turd is this? Can I call that person to account? It was probably a playing child; one who's reproductive fires are budding and barely awakened. Anyway, I now have to plant these seeds I guess instead of storing 'm away with so many others (I have some 2 year old black walnuts, lots of hemp seeds, etc). there must be 20 or thirty of them sticking to this goo. Must I dilute it and stir it all into a bucket of sand before burying it somewhere. Another old lady, who unlike me, has, in consultation with the school, ripped patches of the yard pavement up to plant'm in a little botanic garden flavor arrangement was worried about my waterclosetless unsanitation a few days ago.- ------Although I am grateful no truly respectless and raving madmen showed up at my vulnerable abode yet I would have preferred calling my own shot on my own seed though. I don't mind unbridled curiosity but it is best satisfied when momentum, turmoil and spins from ricochet effects have settled a bit. Be a purely passively acquisitive absorbent black hole and learn. But travel and adventure have, apart from the quickening effects of breaking routine, nice and longed for aspects cause they constitute future oriented elations and nourishment due to perfect digestion and finished mourning, short memories, deadened conscience, a succesful escape. Pioneering is usually offensive and full of misguided optimisms attempting to hide the nervousness of the displaced. Just one more paradox I guess. praps I should have a conversion and rebaptise myself parade ox piet. The territory one has and what's more important, shares with people like commons, trade routes, noman's lands, ethers and oceans are the potentiators ofamplitude; the polarizers of contradictions. It is much easier to trace the radiant regeneration of Ulysses. Since the force of Finnegans Wake is so polymorphous, it is almost a contradiction to search for the imprints of its pattern. If you turn on your TV tonight or today, the 3rd of May 1999, you will probably see three American Nato soldiers freed yesterday to the chagrin of their political leaders. All eyes are on them, from many nations and perspectives, and they have become identified with their now famous camoflauge fatigues. Those fatigues are the products of the surreal art movement which has been the supposedly strange yet undeniably dominant and seminal force in 20th c painting. In Macbeth's day, the poor footsoldier was reduced to wearing real trees, so camoflauge wasn't so popular. No one would have produced camoflauge clothing before Picasso came along, and if so, no one would have been allowed to wear it. Linearality was the essence of civilation, and its epitome was the military. My line against your line.

------- Surrealists developed an eye for "over-reality," a view which was so literal that realities became thick and superimposed in a satirical irony where things became unreal by virtue of too much reality. Camoflauge clothing required the admission that what we see in a forest, its reality, does not look like pictures of trees. For the most part the eye registers a more abstract pattern of light and shade and color areas. That's what you have to look like if you want to look like part of reality -- like garret paintings by a surrealist! It took the highly trained, self-disciplined, and ourageously innovative rebels of Bohemia, the Nobel Scientists of Shemland as it were, to isolate and redact that perception to the larger population, who remain of course and as they wish clueless, since they prefer in Shaunland to have their mysteries solved for them without them. But the servants knew. ------- I want to find this sort of intelligence in somebody of the female sex. Their souls never are as refined and beautiful as yours in my experience. I wish we could sluice refugees to all parts of the world (preferably islamic regions for the mostly islamic displaced). I wish we could thus end up with a pile of corpses soon ploughed under to fertilize the fields and a heap of scrap metal to start making rock grinders. :: In the most recent Groene Amsterdammer I read that instead of protecting minorities and allowing them to carry on their own (in surrounding majority eyes offensive) ways most conflict resolvers benefit more from the fit in or get out and no guarantees tactics. A reversal of sorts. Just as the Nato announces no goals but all methods clearly. Perhaps it is a manifestation of the still all too dearly wanting psychological insights concerning the "step at a time" approach. And indeed, on nettime which I took a good look at for the first time today, the suspicion crept up on me that a lot of impartial/amateur and other flavors of do gooder commentator/instigator/referee types sling concepts which grow a corresponding amount of guilt/fingerpointing more sweeping (and broodingly, suffocatingly, oppressively, constrictingly conspirational and feverish) the less these people work within their means and tackle the nearest fucking rubble heap in their own neighbourhoods.

To put it simply: each country (or region) should produce what it can produce most effectively and import from where ever the same applies. A free trade argument. migration of solids: : I am charmed by the migration stop advocated by the variously reinnovating 'right' lately, inasfar as it concerns the involuntary and/or misguided form just as much as I am against bribing artist to come up with a thrillingly cynical awakening of desire, succesfully locked into sensate-psycho appeal. I know I equated, indissolvably connected and connated it with free trade and free banking (multiplicities chapter)but though I still see them as related as ever I would like to emphasize the solid fluid gaseous dynamic of the compound picture made across time and space. : :

the famous Schindele cookietin packaged rockdust

One of my favorite and lasting inspirations that motivates my decade long advocacy (justifying it from the relative perspectives and standpoints of the respective major disciplines and mixing 'm in various proportions) for the use of rockdust is Julius Hensel *(find him in my guest_appearances subdir)*who used some short lines by Paul deLagarde as motto for some of his books. : Now, I haven't read much by the man yet and next to nothing by the manyfold company he is placed amongst by the "new rigt" along with the defamations poured out over other faves of mine (Gesell and Keyserling) by the likes of Biehl and Ditfurth (Janet Biehl RESEMBLES Jutta Ditfurth when she gives Mcquinn - jmcquinn@mail.coin.missouri.edu; he is archived at spunk press) - a hard time over his interest in militias. Her master of course is the (to me boring but probably just the right speed for a lot of people) Murray Bookchin : (link to 'democracy and nature' malfunctions at this institute for social ecology); a start is made here: stealth.net/~deolog/links.html (articles by PLWilson and about Nietzsche, Krebs, etc) I wrote them: looks like you could put our most eminently ecumenical philosopher and fatnet presence Arnold Keyserling (chanceandchoice.com to use in your linklist) : : :

To Carrol (a marxmail and pen-l participant) about the repeated blundering of listmom Proyect when he brings up Hensel's teacher/rival von Liebig:gudday Carrol, : I wish somebody would set Proyect straight when he spouts off about the great strides Liebig made, etc rather than voicing what the poor man himself is justifiably famous for admitting at the end of his life, namely that he "got it all wrong" referring to the increase in bulk of artificially fertilized crops were concomittant with a lowered vitality and damage to the soil, thus future crops. : : : : : I don't expect a bunch of progressive *(more like reactionairy in my experience but I keep coming back cause a potentially good and lively site like transaction.com is still, inexplicably dead in the water)*economists to know much about agriculture let alone its relatively unknown mavericks, like Julius Hensel, a student, admirer as well as critic of von Liebig. : : Since some of you come through for me regularly; in fact pen-l is most visited site on my tabs, I shall try amend and allow pen-l's ignorance to contend with mine for what it's worth. : : : : Just to mention the most obvious defect: If you pay attention to the bigger participants (NPK) only, you focus on meat and forget the bones (ain't it the same with non proportional and unconsensed demonicracy and with all obsessive clinging to the manifest and tangible in a materialistic age where manipulation and control count for more than stimulation of innate tendencies?). : : : : : : : : : A less known defect: Liebig's idea of burning the crop and analyzing the ashes is OK and usefull when comparing quality changes over time and distance but disastrous when deducing that since x% of y is in it one must make sure to match that percentage for the total weight of the crop plant (often even before it is grown which is especially disastrous since the [[elementwise]] bigger fractions are more aggressive [[volatile]] and lack the "earthyer" ones to settle, frame and stucture them). Such was the terminology Julius Hensel used and his advocacy of rockdust was legendary enough to cause the first prosecutions of such wholism by the nascent and climbing fast chemical companies. Unfortunately I have never seen any material on or about those trials. A search in Germany didn't get me much closer than to a recently disbanded remainder of some of Hensel's commercial concoctions but attestations as to their effectiveness are extant as is an excerpt of Hensel's work (in my guest_appearances/ subdirectory). : : : : : : :

GUERILLA MONSOON :: :: The Colombian army is claiming in a recent report that leftist guerrillas, far-right paramilitaries, and the illegal drug trade are causing ecological disasters within the country. The army says that pipelines blown up by leftists have caused more than 2 million tons of crude oil to pollute 1,625 miles of river in the last 10 years, and that the drug trade has contributed to deforestation and contaminated soil with 200,000 tons of chemicals a year. high tech: luck. In places like Silicon Valley, no one bats an eye when you disclose details of your bizarre personal life or announce that you've modeled your management style on the Spanish Inquisition, or declare that you intend not only to dominate your market but also bury your competitors in shallow graves. But suggest that your great success was due as much to luck as brains and you will be shunned like a leper.

<nettime> Fw From: geert lovink <geert@xs4all.nl> : : : : : Date: Sun, 3 Dec 2000 Enemies of the Future By Russell Mokhiber and Robert Weissman : : And you thought populism meant the movement of citizens to control, through democratic means, their economy, their government, and their lives? Clearly, you have not been paying attention -- to editors of Fast Company, Forbes ASAP, and Wired magazine, the authors of The Millionaire Next Door and the Beardstown Ladies investment books, to George Gilder, Tom Peters, Lester Thurow and Thomas Friedman, to the Nike and Microsoft revolutionaries -- and the myriad other business hustlers who would have you believe that popular democracy is reflected not by unions, activist groups and communities of human beings -- but by avant garde, internet connected, tech-savvy corporations. : Revolution is the air! Forget the fight against the WTO in Seattle. We're talking about fast companies leading the way to a new marketplace -- fast companies that express the will of the e-trading people, who are buying and selling their way into millionaire status, and upending the hierarchical corporate order. : The incessant bombardment of this drivel drove cultural critic Thomas Frank up and over the wall. He landed on the other side with One Market Under God: Extreme Capitalism, Market Populism, and the End of Economic Democracy (Doubleday, 2000). : : : : Frank, a social critic and editor of the Chicago-based Baffler magazine (www.thebaffler.com), has had it with the idea of "market populism" -- the notion that markets are identifiable with the "will of the people" -- one dollar, one vote. -----

My view: Hey, it depends on what hyrarchy of dollars (as votes) one contracts/emits for; if the 'basic necessity of life dollar' don't get some priority and right of way over 'amassment at any cost money' types there'll be hell to pay. Latter should be strictly limited to a fraction of and not to exceed realistic expectations of the former's diversity guaranteeing dictats]] . .. . Don't throw away the baby with the bathwater; sounds like the: "love of money" syndrome again whereas the "love of many monies" is the true sign of cultivated priorities. ---------

He's had it with the corporate hucksters who continue to paint this rosy picture of the 1990s: Corporate profits multiplied. The Internet liberated a new entrepreneurial spirit. A new generation of millionaires was minted overnight. Not just the rich -- but all Americans -- prospered, adapted easily to downsizing. : Or as laissez faire energy specialist Daniel Yergin put it: Privatization plus deregulation plus globalization plus turbo-capitalism equals prosperity.

> "From Deadheads to Nobel-laureate economists, from paleoconservatives to New Democrats, American leaders in the nineties came to believe that markets were a popular system, a far more democratic form of organization than democratically elected governments,"

Roland Marchand's classic Creating the Corporate Soul: The Rise of Public Relations and Corporate Imagery in American Big Business (University of California Press, 1998), in which Marchand points out that for all the legal legitimacy that the courts bestowed upon corporations at the turn of the century, corporations

> "conspicuously lacked a comparable social and moral legitimacy in the eyes of the public."

You seem to be quite active in the field; I have a question: Why do you think the half an Mb I posted, about an era (I still hope forshadows a future age) when politics and economics were an integral whole of daily life, is so unpopular? : : : How come I draw zero response in a couple of years time? Which they manufactured, in some cases, many years ago, but which are still used to tally votes today. The real scandal of this election is that most of the problems in the voting and vote-counting systems have been well-known for years, and no one has done a damn thing about them.More than 11 years ago, I wrote a detailed article titled "Vote of No Confidence" for the Silicon Valley weekly, Metro.

min.net/~kala/fed/index.htm : "Federalism and electronic democracy" byKala Ladenheim : : : Overview : Electronic media, and particularly interactive media, create opportunities for new modes of political action and interaction. : : : : : community and action: At the other extreme from the thinness of plebiscitary participation, the two-way media are already showing their hospitality to political discussion and a diverse array of other political communications. They may be used to reach out to like-minded individuals at a distance in order to organize and plan political action, to educate and inform the public about issues below the radar of the mass media, and as discussion spaces in which views can be developed and compared. If votes without discussion are not enough to constitute political involvement, however, can discussion alone, no matter how rich, be defined as civic participation? Schudson distinguishes between uses of new media forms to expand "the repertoire of political talk" of which he approves, rather than to, dangerously, substitute for politics. Ritualized "politics" becomes palliative rather than substantive, while plebiscitary decision-making is easily manipulated by how issues are framed. By contrast, democratic theory places emphasis on the process of collective decision-making rather than on the specific choices. The on-line processes are evolving rapidly.

> /rosenstock-huessy/This group is for discussion of the work of Eugen Rosenstock-Huessy (1888-1973, a German-American social philospher who taught at Dartmouth College from 1935 to 1957. Among his many admirers were the poet W. H. Auden and the theologian Reinhold Niebuhr. See web site www.valley.net/~transnat/erh.html)

2 of the people there are Eugen's sons apparently Here I go there: ------- Hi, having started reading ehr after a lapse of some 10 years between first hearing his name (Peter Sloterdijk was who spoke it in a promising enough way to stick with me that long is a true wonder; I won't bore you with repeated losses of note-, adress- and planned readinglist books to prove how unlikely the timelapse is were it not for PS's recommendation). I am happy to be able to share my impressions here, especially since they seem to touch upon much of the work I did in the past decade: http://members.tripod.com/poetpiet For starters I would like to point you to page 363 in Soziologie (has it been translated?), 58 edition and tell me what excuse there can possibly be for the blatant and/or professed igorance of the brutally rapacious way colonizations tend to work, fables to the contrary ..... sectarian', fanatic, thus overburdened nomadism taken off of US tribal life' shoulders mercifully and absorbed by the 'mainstream' invaders leaving natives 'free' to not just vary amongst familiar 'roles' but mutate into professions notwithstanding.

Was this kind of looking away necessary for somebody following in the tracks and wakes of such dubious waves? O, wait, it dawns on me that the answer might be: well, when the right time to give up the ghost to and collapse in on your father has been missed all that is left to you is crying over the toys taken away. They should have become good christian instead of putting up a good fight; neither of which euro-immy's were very good (and if you ask me, got progressively worse at). The last line of that section has a wonderful connotation that makes me wonder once again how people can turn perspectives so vastly 'on a dime' so to speak; there he implies that the ties to tribal determinants must hold up and remain the basis and foundation for all the other and later achievements of our great late (in coming) civilization. You find me making similar arguments in the realm of economics; staggered sets of currencies; covering progressively wider territories, always traceable back down to the very people and particles participating AND affected can hold up in real storms and ignore fake ones - hypes. A pyramid is not a rocket; I am sure ehr could make that into a juicy lucy story too. Did he? Here is the first response:

> I love your friend Sloterdijk's book on cynicism; I am pleased to think he is an ERH reader. Not to condescend, but sarcasm is the least effective of all the figures,almost always reversing the message maker's intended effect. I think it is important to be open to moral shortcomings in the writing of ERH. It would be interesting to see a study of passages where he idealizes Christianity and whether or not in those same places he rationalizes the violence of European peoples. Or, whether, when ERH puts forward an idealized Christianity he does so in a critique of the force and fraud of the dominant culture. My guess is that he does both. And, yes, I think it is critical that there be an assessment of ERH as both an historian and as an historicist. I write this regarding what I take to be "Piet <pensi's" sense that ERH miscalculated the agonies of colonialism. Some fine historians have found ERH either insightful or at least not seriously mistaken when he got near their specialites. Both Stan Johanson [sp.?] and Lionel Rothkrug said as much at Waterloo in 1982. But I think those of us who are not historians may reassure ourselves too quickly in this area, perhaps putting too much stress on Page Smith's loyalty. Personally, I have more trouble with ERH's historicism than with his history. Some people on this list seem to accept very literally ERH's assertions that there was this age and that age, each with a compact description. Handled with a light touch, I find that stuff interesting and very useful in moral critique. As in the wonderful essay "Hitler and Israel." But hardened into exclusive terms, made into a strict progression, injected with theistic intentions, and buffed to shiny simplicities about the complex and contradictory lives of historical peoples-- these claims can only serve to mislead. So, "piet<pensi," whoever you may be, welcome to the ERH list!

> "The various creeds and denominations and national beliefs will be small parishes in a world-wide economic society" otherwise expressed as "[m]any sects, many creeds, manyraces, many ways of education and self-expression, but one unshakable bondage or freedom of economic organization."

He appears to have been correct. this is certainly compatible (fits To a T matter ofacT with Beckerath's views on the gold standard's background role in a myriad and profusion of monies [['community currencies both both private, national and international]] indymedia.org///57986 has some dirt on present day golden boy deals). How about a riddle: anybody know how often the david star constellation appears as a possible projection into horoscopes (assuming planets constitute the points? Please expand - which the person who bases a website on above 'fact' doesn't enough)

By the way; the intrinsic nomadism ERH seems to want to graft a projective attitude into tribal life (only derivable - incriminatingly and or derived [[unconsciously]] - from an acceptance of overpopulation tendencies and suchlike immoderations) which are, as i said i suspect, bubbling up from behind his ears and eyes ('onheilzame' = unwholesome anthropocentric imperatives spelled out and hidden between biblical lines) unbeknownst to him at best bycause reality is that most tribes (youthful wanderlust notwithstanding) take care to leave buffers and don't bump up against hard and fast border bits that turn out to be remote controlled suction devices in their very midst.

One must remain grounded and embedded in tribal comfort as the basis on which a super structure rests. ehr says so hisself schizoically enough at the end of the passage I objected to --------

> Wayne: Rosenstock certainly does that. On the other hand, coming from Australia where I see this all the time, it's so easy to use the suffering of the indigenous for one's own political purpose

------ sounds myT sadistic -------

> so that the indigenous becomes an emblem of moral purity and their spritual traditions the stuff of Disneyland.

----- I like your conflative alignment and confa bull ation of spirited, polite and boral gone moral but I am missing some economics for taste. > second reply: Re: colonialism, etc. Piet: If I may pick up on yesterday's topic: ERH in Out of Revolution wrote at length of the issue of universalism, both politically as the internationalism of communism before the invention of socialism in one country, and in religion. The heart of the issue is the universality andcommunicability of truth/truths. 2x2=4 is not contested as a mathematical truth anywhere; mathematics as the sole method for reaching or stating truth is contested. If christianity and communism are true, then they must come to pass/power. ------- why? If I divine your intented meaning correctly I would ask: is truth all pervasive AND imposing; some quality that accompanies 'success' as a telltale sighn of 'uprighteous' Calvinisms? You guys are sure some bunch of feintin' phantom fence offing fighters and dualists. ------

> It cannot be colonialism/imperialism, whether the Church/Party assumes power through democratic elections, deceit, a social contract, war, mass action, genocide or at the request or whim of a beleagured government.

---------- boy, which of the 'or's are you allowing to override and or obfuscate their synonyms here? Don't you mean ands instead of ors? In which case I would put democratic in scarequotes. Pfui, I'll take sarcasm anytime over the giddying concept whirl -- topple top [heavy] headache çausery {which} intelloids manage to spout. You guys manage to make light and dark seem intrinsically and inextricably specially spacial rather than sequential, to spacial specialize thought and impose linear time upon space is tying the cart before the horse methinks. The chuckle I got out of pass/power dichotomy (since I associated it with turd twist for an inspired moment, inspired cause indeed metabolism is the issue as always but it doesn't come out in the open name and surname view) -------

> Marx in comments on the US war with Mexico wrote in an American newspaper that the Native Americans, Mexicans, Hungarians, Slavs, etc. had no historical mission and were destined to be absorbed and dissappear into those nations who had History to make, i.e. the English, the Americans, the Germans. (I do not share these views of Church or Party) ERH went much deeper into this matter than Marx or anyone else I know of, and this is evident in his touching on both ends of the matter. I am writing to you and this very act demands--if we are to have a common life and humanity at all--that you [the readers] read. There is no self-assertion, no rights, without their corresponding demands and obligations on others. My voice may be tyrannical, but the reader who submits in the act of reading is not thereby "colonized". Is it possible to share, to accept another's ideas--political, religious, cultural--without thereby being oppressed or colonized? When an American musician's works are heard in Africa this is cultural imperialism, yet when Paul Simon works with African musicians (as in Graceland he is accused of stealing African music!); ERH's writings on choral singing, the liturgy and the language/nation beingcreated each time someone Speaks are very important for understanding muchof his thought. Those of you who are more familiar with his work please correct me, but he seems to say something like this: the German language and people are born with Luther's speaking; the Italians and their language with Dante, etc. His meaning is NOT that no one spoke German or Italian before Luther and Dante, but rather that the Nation and the language became German and Italian rather than innumerable dialects of Indo-European, Latin, etc. because people joined with Luther's and Dante's voice rather than broke away from them. --

The real breaking is still done by bullets buddy; no matter how much you idealize concept clash and clutter. Even as recent as the Navajo receiving their high honours and given this sort of context, you can't see fit to suit this constitutive and seminal fact commemorating more recent history around our present topic rather than . .. but I won't let you catch me giving in to overblown empasisis an privilege given to scuse me, mere fucking naming; the distinction between 'versachlichung' off life, the mumbly humbly crumbly amorphous 'fuerwoertern eroertern' (=prewordage? and the Spade calling is negligible compared to the ones between handfest and ephemeral.)

> I do not intend to advocate or justify the European colonialisms and empires, but I do think the discussion of these moments in our past are often either willfully blind or ignorant of the depth of these matters. Prior to European colonization of Africa there were African kingdoms and empires and wars and slave trade. After decolonization, civil war, tyranny, and a rush to membership in what Reagan called the "Evil Empire". The simple plea that people should be free, nations self-determining and international relations peaceful is a worthy goal. But it rests on the notions of "free" "nation" and "self-determination", and everyone having his own ideas about such matters and what they mean in practice, would require 6 billion free selfdetermining nations.

----------- No, only some rules about what constitutes fair fighting; Mad Max style Mohammed Ali style; Gladiator style, free fighting style; actually you are right prefer my style (running gauntlets with buckets of dust and plenty of spray power to go with it).-------

> Does spreading the gospel of Christ or Marx or Free Trade or Science eliminate or produce colonialism? If these beliefs or dogmas set men free, lead men to the truth, are we not obligated to propagate the faith (whichever one? I do not myself believe that one can condemn colonialism wholly anymore than one can so condemn capitalism, communism, Islam and christianity.)

Sorry, I disagree totally, but not too totally to stop me from beginning to explain: The good and the bad obscure their origins through prolific offshootery. The primary split is where this goods and bads begins the circus ------ It is only through specifics we can make (a [[re]]start and recognize)distinctions [between and sense of them, not to mention borderlines] that count, but i'll give it a rest for a mo ..... these last lines replaced original ones in early 2019 btw ---------

> why was there an Inquisition and what was wrong about it? Why famine in the Ukraine in the 1930's? Why do thePuerto Ricans not decide unanimously whether they want to be part of the US, a colony of the US or independent? (I will not tell them what to do. What can self-government mean among indigenous peoples in China, Indonesia, Burma, Cameroun, Ghana, Algeria and Montana? Can we join with others for our mutual benefit, or must it always be as Lenin said: If the peasants won't do what is good for them, sometimes you have to force them to).

Ask them if they object to an optic fibre cable and some public libraries (with inviolable slotties for everyone throughout THEIR territories instead of bunchining in into cities with a paradoxical clogging effect for starters and see if they won't like to learn about their neighbours).

> If Lenin was right, colonialism was justified. But was he? And could the justification ever be complete? I believe not. David Bade --- third reply: I can only cheer you on in what you say David. When Rosenstock looks at history he looks at living powers, most often active in language, but also in our institutions. That's why he is no moral philosopher, and thinks moral philosophy is a complete waste of time. Likewise, the terms good and evil, he says, are for children. He's no idealist, and he knows that history is one long bloody human tale about sacrifice, both just and unjust, and conquest. But this isn't to imply that Rosenstock thinks history is a picnic, and that he has no heart for the victims. I think the greatest respect one can show to indigenous peoples isgenuinely to appreciate the greatness of spirit which blows through their traditions. That means both recognising the uniqueness of that spirit as it emerges from the life conditions under which tribal peoples laboured,----- little, at least a lot less than us repressed judeochristian 'grecogypzi led ones will ever learn to do without and the continuity of that spirit through other more complex social forms (complexity in this sense, not a moral term one that is merely tallking of technologies and increasing divisions of capacities and labour)..

...'div. of labour 'dispersonales and never ends well. One must remain grounded and embedded in tribal comfort as the basis on which a super structure rests. ehr says so hisself schizoically enough at the end of the passage I objected to ------

2007 (attempting to finish a thought): The left infamously tries to substitute services for force which stifles and throttles all with an inclination for and hankering after highly kinetic and deeply transforming action (machoism for short). I argue for redirection of force (rock grinding, large scale waste and spillage minimizing compostage, etcetera). All potential along these curves are much less a provocation to all those who thrive from selling gadgets that condone, abet and nourish application of environment and souldestroying force. Pure Gentleness finds itself subjected to the vagaries and devastation of force. But greater gentleness does not contradict greater vigor. It may seem that all bias, every specialism, each exceptional talent evokes and conjures a widersacher but in fact neither end of the pole can arise in isolation. Look at me, i have a mongoloid sister.

Well, what do you know, I live surrounded by a pack (or what is the correct expression for multiple felines? Pride right?) of stray cats also. I prefer birds myself but you know 'prior appropriation' or what's that Nozick term again? I've been here only 3 years. They are 'cut' but like to leave a scent now and then. Know any remedies? Just found a book about erh on the second hand market today; it is the one I have had in hand all those years ago before but I'll finish Soziologie, die vollzahl der Zeiten first; despite misgivings about his fabulations. I will leave you with a riddle; what is more inextricable: time/space; light/dark; morality/mo(nst)rosity; seasons/zodiachouses? And now that I am on it, I urge you all to go see chanceandchoice.com (or org) which is inspired by Arnold Keyserling who loves working with 'folds', a fourway one being favorite if not prevalent; erh reminds me a lot of AK's systemic almagamation of I ching, astrology and a whole lot of other schemes.

One more unacquited effort (spent on a lesbian):
hi, here is a little report of the gay parade in A'dam yesterday, which this time I was far less annoyed about than 2 years ago when I witnessed it from the library where I was trying to work on that beauty of a fast capable machine (which got sabotaged once pubertoids acquired a taste for testing their digital muscles) and I was annoyed they didn't turn the music down out of respect for this sort of in my view only sort of place to merit the name holy after such with living leaves, woods, of course. Well, this time I cycled up and down along the water the parade floated in and found at least one boat (the one with the countercultural contingent)worth sticking with for a song or 2, it was chinese music but modern with choir and full, vast range voices. The only other boat that captured my attention was one with grey wigged girls (lesbians?) dancing to soul music on a noticably lower budget than the rest but in the tastyest violet coloured dresses. Ps: hope you are still around; how goes it anyway? You will find say the blue chapter accesible from the top link below to your liking.

I've become a member of a borderline delusional group where some heavy hitters on the monetary front (like turmel who spends time in court on behalf of medpot it seems) fi(b)re a way groups.yahoo.com/group/cea-usa, the 'mom, Jon Chance Citizen & Chief of Staff group/jpchance recommends:

> One of the "classics" is TOTAL RESISTANCE - SWISS ARMY GUIDE TO GUERRILLA WARFARE & UNDERGROUND OPERATIONS by Major H. Von Dach. Might be somewhat outdated, but solid and simple.

-------Jon likes to be hard to get a hold of; he claims never to read conspiracy literature but mentions Larouche and Quigley only sentence away. My intropost: explanation for grind rules I apply and am constantly grounding (if not better at least differently 'keyboardEfi(n)ed', albeit impromptu, briefly below) I would attempt to direct your attention, skill and perspicacity (how else would you get back bout me bones?) at the links in this subdirectory: /guest_appearances/ it contains 2Mb worth of material on the subject from the 30ties.
I'll try to give the gist in my own words after a much deeper stab (via W Herbart) in the first sentence: Money started off as the tokens proving dues were paid and templeslut service secured evolving to the slot/machine footing but money is (not causes, IS) the wrong kind of trouble when getting hung up in the taboo selection department on its way to a local manifestation of universal principle in (P)revolitionary fashion. ----
Money was happiest (most dignified non-inflationary) during the days state and private moneys made each other toe the line and held each other in check thanks to international ties of the inflation wary(and punishing) and their fast info monitoring the (free enterprise and fedfed) feed in(tax 'n' time, product and plan based) monies (as lube)which trade and taxoffice traffic would bear/need without spilling any (which would proclaim and taletell the wastercurse of ineffection and unaffection, war 'spending' notably). -----

Private monies 'exuded' from and represented the gamut range between brief basic necessity perishable backed voucherlike stuff no less distinctly than the less tangible and informative yet more collective 'promissaries' of long term consensus (its representational success substituting [[displaying a paradoxical inverse proportion regarding the need]] for solid backing, in it's worst case stipulating gold as exclusive payments instead of using it as a background reckoning unit and stable standard of measure - I propose and predict photosynthesis rates becoming a future one) - ---
Thus gold demand is passive agressive security seeking which ignores any and all refs to weights of this, that or other present or future good or service which as a relative reckoning unit it can 'fathom', tackle and get utilitarily hitched onto in order to become 'productive'. -----The confusion between gold and money stems partly from the fact that states were first (ar)rivals at the stage where tightrope dancing skills navigating between trust and consensus on the one hand with clout, notoriety and manipulative speculation on the other obscured the fact that any money worthy that name is principally a VERY WELL SPECIFIED, and consensed by all involved and affected 'QUALIQUANTUM' and not a soldier's soldi decided upon by more or less witting pawns of arms industries. I doubt the war tribunal will find a check from daimler/chrysler in Milosevic' records for instance. Many problems around hyrarchies (leading the desperately unreal- and idealistic to try deny its viability and do away with it altogether) stem from the fact that the stage which launches and spawns a next thereby disqualifies itself; this sort of rocket blunderblustery is a burnt bridges policy that gets family feuding with tribes, them with confederation, the latter with nations and now tnc's are doing their own lateral crossreferencing to the detriment of vertical and always primary types. > But above all, at a cost beyond counting, our monetarily driven behaviour has utterly disastrous effects on our society and the global environment. That's the bad news, but you probably knew it already. Now here's the good news - all these problems can be fixed with money that's better designed. Money is just information, a way we measure what we trade, nothing of value in itself.

--- If we let go of the issue and emission duties inextricably linked with rights thereof, let go of consensed AND unopposed as widely as possible, earmarked, moored to physical reality kinds of info yes, that indeed is part of the definition for worhtless money; parasitic versions thereof include those called into existence as betting, speculation and derivatizing contracts which by no means merely shifts entitlements but erode reality with it's tug of war between greater efficiency and power accumulation on the one hand with a viability serving diversity on the other.

> ----And we can make it ourselves, to work as a complement to conventional money. Just a matter of design. There is no good reason for a community to be without money. To be short of money when there's work to get done is like not having enough inches to build a house. We have the materials, the tools, the space, the time, the skills and the intent to build ... but we have no inches today? Why be short of inches? Why be short of money?

----- If you have all that already inches were used and it is better to formulate differently, namely that you ran out of them (out of money to pay wages would be a fitting analogy). I would use a different analogy to bring the energy equity aspects out better. For instance: say, you want to build a house in a solid rock wall; you start with zero inches except the ones accumulated in their lack attenuating, acquired ingenuity, all you can bring to bear. After all, life don't start in empty space as much as in niche-like places (before all rather, where money is tight, literally so if you wanna go along with my fresh dust as money analogies) ---

> Open moneys are virtual, personal and free. Any community, network, business can create their own free money - "free" as in free speech, free radical, freely available - but NOT free as in free lunch, or free ride. It's not something you get for nothing. Open money is money that must be earned to be respected. When you issue it, you are obliged to > redeem it - your money is your word. It's just a matter of your reputation in your community. Open money is flat money. It confers no power of one over another, only one with another. Exploitation is no problem; when you have your own money, you can't be bought and sold so easily. You can choose what you do to earn your money. And there's no monopoly, all systems coexist in the same space. Flatter than flat (piet: fleeter than a flatterer?) - open money is superflat. Open money is virtual and not limited. Physical things exist in space and time - which makes them limited - in number, mass, place. Virtual things don't exist and need not respect any such limits. So any and all things are possible in open money space - any form at all. It's just a matter of devising a scoring system for those who consent to using it - money is simply a social arrangement. Of course, a system won't work as a money unless it's well designed. A scoring system that nobody wants to use isn't a working money.

> The Solutrean Connection Question Immediately on discovery of extinct-animal-associated Folsom, Clovis, and Sandia projectile points (in reverse order of their production) anthropologists recognized West-European resemblance and possible derivation, even across the Atlantic, but could hardly outgrow an assumption that all Paleo-Indians entered the New World afoot from Asia via a verifiable Bering land-bridge and imaginary ice-free corridor during the Wisconsin Glacier, nobody before Clovis points.

Comment (comments) on the two long quotes below (from a guy called 'cyclone') and all this sort of epigraphic (Barry Fell, etc) broad brush sweeping, in one sentence the globe severally covering formulations about the evolution of language and races) I feel it is more than a little absurd to believe we are all one, were at some point or are becoming so more and more; however nice the diction and much the writing arsenal and palette's range extent of multiculty phonosemantics improves performance (in theory and symbolically anyway) it is one of those paradoxical double edged swords (one side always idle)where you could as easily defend and say that factions mutate into barely and unrecognizability pretty quick as that you could always trace heritage to .. . .yes well, to where? Then again, it fits a rainbow spirit to a T (examples from these camps are in the next prfr; toc below the quote)----- There is a retired clerk who reads this sort of thing year in year out; and occasionally he disputes with and debates 'Kloosterman the catastrophist (whom I taught to look for his obscure and maverick thesis supporting colleagues via google; he thinks the world burned down all the way at some particular time and he chased all over europe for more evidence about the thin layer of soot proving it). > A U.S. PERSPECTIVE ON ECONOMIC AND MONETARY UNION IN EUROPE Remarks by William J. McDonough President Federal Reserve Bank of New York before the Association of German Mortgage Banks Frankfurt, Germany November 17, 1997 [...] But should a different international monetary system ultimately emerge in which other currencies, such as the euro, play an increasingly important role alongside the dollar, there would be benefits for the United States as well. Such a development would, for example, impose greater market-led discipline on the United States and, in the process, help us address our chronic low-savings problem.

Don't wanna get to get too emphatic about it but what does the fact that the US has low saving rates really signify? It means borrowing is high as lending is (from) abroad; people in line to take their monies to the sachverstaendige Juden, nicht? --- Now, isn't a debt/due interest payment problem akin to encryption pandemoniae? To afford no hackpack any slack your lock must be large and fast (which don't necessarily make it too cumbersome these days). And to service a debt in the sense of simply keeping it on the books in vaster and vaster magnitudes (core capitalistic concept of mass production, narrow margins melding nicely with trendily low interest rates dripdropping usuryfiend jaws all around the place). Thus old monies save 'mselves from new. (Reverse assertion substituting continents).

If, the gods forbid, you should for instance develop terminal cancer, this might be an interesting tactic to contemplate. But, for here and now, I respectfully suggest such an action might not be the best one, for at least three reasons: : 1) If it becomes known that you suffer/suffered from depression, your principled act will simply be written off as the work of a "nut." : 2) The military and much of the rest of the world are already tolerating the most appalling consequences of the existing system. They would not trouble to notice your death for more than an eyeblink, if that. : 3) You can only suicide once, and that will end your usefulness. Alive, you can educate and influence others, and annoy : The Existing Order an indefinite number of times. Depression or no depression, we need you alive more than we need you dead. : : One last thought: Depression is, frequently, the response of a sensitive intelligence to the experience of oppression, of : oneself or others. The arms industry wouldn't even take notice. Please don't do this, we need you to keep fighting, we love you.

I know the arms industry couldn't care less but that is not the point. I advocate the choice in tax monies destinations as a way to show that civilized people will care and show it if they got any say in the matter. Why do you think that just about every agricultural society has harvest songs, planting songs, and for all I know weeding, watering and fruit picking songs? Herding societies have songs for hauling water from the wells for their cattle. Potters sing while they turn pots, Woodsmen sing while they saw logs, and weavers sing while they make cloth. It isn't the select few with the best voices who sings these songs, it is every worker. : : : : : : : *To make repetitive work more enjoyable, they sing songs whose rhythm is that of the work at hand. Not only do they make the work more pleasant, they often help people get into the rhythm of the work. Apology / explanation for the lack of updates in the near future: I have proven a few points with a sober low cost lifestyle; running on waste discard, surplus, etc, the only thing I did not stint on was organic produce. One can find experience, knowledge and even intelligence when hop skip jump hitching from organic farming oasis to another, from one U town to the next and from one kin to her cult sure whole bookstore / action center to a following one on practically no dough / mulla at all. I have made some sacrifices to comfort and gained some insights from a sense of adventure. An example of the first would be the fact that my preference for using public terminals kept me in buildings that do not open doors and windows, though I like to continue the former I can no longer put up with the latter nor even with being in a city if I want to keep some semblance of health flowing through me; on top of that another one of those (despite promises) cursedly unsharing parent is the drop that tips the bucket and I am off, afloat, dunno when to resurf ace. Gristmagazine.com item: Be ALL THAT YOU CAN Be Thousands of workers in the U.S. may develop a fatal lung disease because companies have exposed them to the highly toxic metal beryllium without safeguards or warnings, according to a Chicago Tribune investigation. Beryllium disease, once only a problem with the defense industry, appears to be on the rise in the electronics, recycling, and dental industries. It turns out that the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration rarely inspects companies that handle beryllium, whose toxic dust slowly damages victims' lungs. Beryllium can now be found in golf clubs, cell phones, and computers, but experts say they have found no evidence that consumers are at risk from the products.

To John Zube: question regarding privatizations of national monopolies One of the books I read at your place while visiting was about the different and competing mail-services in the states, i don't think it was the one with 'allegiance' in the title; as you might know, the dutch have more or less followed english scenario's, though not quite as dramatic, concerning the rail management and running thereof. Privatization is now starting to be looked on as a culprit for the chaos, in- and accidents. I would love to reread the book described above as best I could since it tries to break a lance for the 80's tide which has now turned. just today parool.nl tells us about privatization incriminating experiences with our electricity in the (Dutch) past.

It is true that public displays of anger should be avoided due to the snowball infectiousness of it; however, on the other hand, anger expressed well, creatively and inventively rather than in repetitious or even worse with a threat in tone manner, often manages to voice feelings of onlookers, witnesses and fellow sufferers; no need to be clear, sharp and precise greater than in anger. Those who lack faultfinding with self capacity are ironically the first to delegate this business to people who's anger they provoke. -----Ps: plutorus, send that girl-friend over here will you, maybe she can convince herslelf that legal/condoned pot is still no sinecure for frontfist making or else I would not be so damn lonely.

> /gilder.com/ Commentary Wall Street Journal 08.06.01 Tumbling Into the Telechasm By George Gilder. Compounding Telric were "open access" and "unbundling" rules that require companies installing advanced Internet gear to share pipes with others. The goal was to stop monopolies, but what regulators did was to bar Internet investment by privatizing the risks and socializing the rewards. No entrepreneurs will invest in risky, technically exacting new infrastructure when they must share it with rivals. --- draft 1: To Gilder, open and undetermined doesn't mean friendly, sharing and vulnerable I guess. I say this cause the passage comes schizoically close after one expressing hopes the forces and military advantage remain good enough to deter, that is,

------- unchallenged = A: to be maintained in far superior condition, at what cost seems not important all of a sudden; just as in his rants against enviro's he can't seem to concede or even mention that siliconhell is a reality ---- I mean silicon valley's clean up problem Georgie boy; do you deny they have the cleaning people out plans down pat but that examination of how they manage doing so after themselves is, causes and constitutes exposure of a blind deaf dumb and sorry state of supply side, about and on which it is tricky to get any feedback

... hmm m????? GEORGIE, are you there? I am getting sick of pretending we have a dialogue here george the scourge.

--------- unused = B: though the US must keep taking on defense as a task in the name of freedom no less. Look we have this nice virgin soil but we won't pump the fuck out of it with our chemicals .. oh no, .. not to mention actively yet covertly discouraging such aspirations (to attain equal footing on this score even while stimulate a catch up on other fronts; Gilder said the US should vie for the favors of immigrants once they are educated and claims they get booted out after that against their will [[perhaps to have a reason to develop weapons at still snappier breakneck speed?]]. Is this true?). To dominate is a justifiable virtue in and only in the most fair and open competition. -

me: Who said we 'openers' want half of it? Besides which ever portion you choose to betoken that indispensible show of goodwill (even if it is only a show that feels like a bleed and throttle to your sense of security and d(e)rive) would most likely become and remain a non-profit sector which chews on fast boy serf supply but never directly on his profits. Maybe it makes 'im look ridiculously fake, shallow and phony (atavistically resorting to the super- and artifical, most feminine dazzle effect; that's why smart societies set their women gathering; in nature's mopping shawl) next to the co-operative openness of voluntarism but bribery and false hope foster-festering won't be out of style from one constellation to the next (since they come in series). ----

me: How can you speak of collapse where there never was much of a drive to begin with (not that I would like it to be focus; I'm more for bundling public function(alist) places in giant new infrastructure dotting the landscape), everybody was too busy geting their shot in at becoming central station, jostling to the point where the big thick bundles installed would stretch very far if allowed to, if only obtusely unsharing modes could be seen, as cross-culturally as possible, for a deficient one (unless you wanna glorify the predatorial as desirably majestic or something which I know you do and I too do but only in an olympic sense, not going so far as to say that hype and sleigh of hand allowing global grip if allowed to run rampant is evidence for and justification of it) if democracy, justice and fair share are to be left any and as much meaning as they have had evolutionarily speaking --- Gilders insistence on the unproven global warming leaves the question of wether there could be a polarizing (extreaming?) iow differential effect begarred no? (I am getting pretty tired of the fact people don't see this; maybe cause the changes are too slow, memories too short? I thought Rosenstock-Huessy 'proved' that we civilizees have such splendidly long memories compared to tribal ones, the latter 'never exceeding 7 generations') -----

> -------- Gilder again: You can't constrain good. It has to be freely chosen. This is a religious belief ultimately, hearkening back to our own creation as free creatures. The key flaw of socialism is its denial of the ultimate reality of the human condition, which is that we can't control the future. We can choose the good but we cannot choose the outcome. Reaching for control and certainty, we end up in the embrace of evil.

------- Yet at the same time (well, like I said, practically, a bare few alineas ago OK?) he professes certainty about immanent war once and when defences (can't they of all things be awarded eminent ambodiment of the concept control??) are 'let down'. Is such certainty to be excepted from the prohibited 'reach'?

> Gilder: Conventional economists have long favored equilibrium--economies that gravitate toward perfect balance, blue skies and moderate weather. This remains the ideal of Eurosclerosis. In equilibrium models, lower prices normally signify lower value, lower demand, and decreased productivity. High pressure means good weather, and investment flows toward the high pressure, high-priced regions.

More light working (demanding the supply side to come up with that clean fresh and unmistakably lazy sweat verdrijvende (= removing) consistency to be wrestickled from chunks of promissory and pure potential bedrock known as liquidity) the more minerals demanded.

> Kessler turns the conventional picture on its head. Lower prices of key factors of production are prime signals of value and opportunity. In entrepreneurial economies, low-pressure zones such as Silicon Valley concentrate energy in spirals of growth, twisters of creative destruction. -------

Hilite low pressure to pull sucker and soak 'm in to further effeminate those hardyrock crutchers. Now if this could be Israel's motto: to go where no man not even nomadman can or wants to, to be able to go to the most desecated and searing severeness light can make work and the fight to feed it that makes light work (let's not say "man has made light into" just to get georgie not upset OK?) cause we use the top of the line tec in growing home; God knows they might even find traces of an earlier one and once again earn rite of day all over the Middle East this time not with greed but a hallowed re-green-w-eaving way --- - -

> Gilder: Economists distrust the low pressure paradigm because low-pressure zones run a capital surplus. People want to send their money to them, invest in them. ----- Many hands make light work. ----- With a regime of tax rate reductions, two of Europe's least likely economic successes--Ireland and Sweden--became entrepreneurial stars. Without cutting government spending, Ireland recently achieved average incomes higher than Germany's, and Sweden recently reduced its national debt by 20 percent. Bad policy, on the other hand, can drive American venture capital overseas, just as bad policy in Japan and Europe shifted capital to the U.S. over the last two decades. But the Telecosm will still prevail and investors who understand its dimensions will be able to spurn the catastrophists and prosper from the largest opportunity in the history of the world economy.

Let me loosely equate a couple of seemingly disparate concepts yet nontheless cappilarily capacitated correspondences amonst many a substance in process: inflation = emitting amounts above what traffic will bear (Beckerath) = supply beyond assimilable amounts = stockpile = glut = netcasting = robbery and preparation to assault ('roofbouw' en militarizatie) = bad software = cause for recklessness = supple ply style of rock (dust) administration beyond photosynthetically reducible amounts = debt, its dilutions and dissolutions as shameless claim on and irresponsibility for the future (if I can't have it, they won't either' sorts of sentiments; for some painfully split seconds (cause firsts were good) this mad sentiment has ruled me when I had to live with a promised and willing but then de facto rejected fatherhood and I argued in favor of foster parents) = dust without ties nor moistened touchdowns and light boucing back off and away unengaged. 'Tecgnowsism' (schizm) is gonna level the playing field (as promoted in Gilder's book 'life after television' which I will still admit inspired me) but first we must disproportionately reward those themselves excepting levellees, who manage to herd, tame and set us going in serfdom, us, the potential levellers????? What is this ponzi pyramid Balkanization or sumtoing?? Prophecy gratification and practice postponement.

This file tries to pilot you through the knottier of the crossroads rapids in my digital existence (to wit, the year 2001)
In the year 2000 i made some extra site guide files for the oldest batch and in the next started a fourth directory. During the one after that I had to move half the site someplace else and that adress too lasted only 3 years before conking out on me altogether (they are around but i didn't take them up on a branching out offer quick enough to prevent misunderstnadings over alloted space amounts and god knows whatever else these idiot lycos europe guys and gals don' t communicate and leave me guessing about.-- /2007)

INDEX2 - summer2001.HTM
Ex frontpage that stepped back a notch in favor of this one:
INDEX - (december 2001)
i produce a fresh crop of internal link rich files in 2001 and tried to sort it into 4 distinct formats and though within 2 years I was left with one single lumpy stream of not only crazily quilted colour but also category collections, failing to transition to the very categorization feature on blogs i myself had been repeatedly clamoring for while that code was as yet to be created as well as failing to make the appropriate subdirectories but that had to do with my nifty quick upload shortcut. Anyway, 2001 saw me perform some transitioning hybridity (all as yet within the tripod domain) which by itself was enough to make for a type of confusion this file is designed to clear up and better yet, prevent but failing that, for now at least, guide you through.

Hmmm, humble crumble, here's a quick liddul grumble: Not sure why i do this so patiently yet compulsively YET AGAIN!!!!! Considering i put versions of this kind of guidance IN EVERY SINGLE FILE I EVER PUT ONLINE (especially during the years in question). It must have a lot to do with my take on productive polarities, just as the formation unpacking (grind rock in order to speed its compostage process, a far cry from rainbow and religious hype and hysteria i tell ya! sutainable staying on stage powder, that it is! the path and stepping stone/building block to heaven on earth, etcetera).

The 4 varieties faintly reflect of course, not the 20 branches of my interests but merely my style of quadrantizing them (with the main divider being off or onscreen readreadyness) as follows:

logbriefer (without tables, early 2001) All the logs and some specials (stretching from may 2000 after the green inbetween [[miscellanies and lugalogs]] issue.

logbriefer - logs n specials - july 2001 the same but with all content tables placed in coloured tables (hence, still more and yet 'containing') colour added.

The names of these files are person or theme related.
It was not smart to call both the black on white and the colourful specials specials but there are 2 files where they overlap yinyang like (titles of both next to each other at the top, then one or the other kind more fully beneath):

person or theme related specials This file lists only the colourful ones more elaborately and the one coming up only the black and white versions: print-rf-reads (very few files are featured in both styles).

the same with less colour quilt crazyness (everything black on green): plainfiles1

Linkfiles for the Black on white print oriented versions (2 tables filled margin to margin through format stripping through flattening to text and saving as htm files for which i nevertheless made colourful content tables):

print-rf-reads2 these tend to be named with dates and later, after i cease uploading them (in 2003 I believe) with simple numbers print-rf-reads3 - plainprintfiles2 -- plainprfrguide3
later on i start making docs cause margins can be set narrowers and they can be made larger sizewise, but then cease listing them separately from the rest of my bloggage.

Indymedia - up to 21
This run (on foolfile run) stop at 41 sometime in 2002 but after that (till early 2005) the logbriefer content absorbs my newswire activity 'evidence', proof, hold over, residue, back up, mirror, notes, reminders

Early 2001 i started naming the surf residue accumulating files (nowadays named weblogs) after months (instead of logs with a number, up to 18 early in the year 2001) once they became so big it slowed down program speed (which, back then, happened at less than a hundred K in filesize when using Netscape Communicator, as i am doing once again now, but this thinkpad it is running on doubles that limit easily); here's the first such run: logsbriefers 2001.htm (covers early till end of 2001

Look what our voluntarization gradient, no sooner risen, Look what voluntarization grade, no sooner 'made' and risen, has wrought, as many more of the free get locked in prison
it also raises the rates of the free being locked in prison

In the first of the four rows one finds the files filled with feed for my gregariousness appetite, bunching anyand everything looking, disapprovingly more often than not, from the hard edges of economics where volunteer, slave and addict of decency meet, mingle, mix and mate, backwards towards the more fully organic and systemic, as yet less meddled with cycles......

-------- just as i try to look ' the other way' (for ways out and forwards) from the make believe cut up world of 'opposed' parties and opposing shores with the socalled indyfile series in which i try to find partners to focus on the ways demographic hygiene relates to the ethics of techniques (technicalities of ethics, etcetera) and vica versa --- or, if you prefer, where i try to recurve and connect what has become blown up and beat flat within our sphere of influential reason, treason and treezinceasin -------
......towards the most (pardox alert) luxuriously dematerialized of fads, fetishes, symbol creation, religious fabulation and other no matter how mature and cultural, clutsy cultish clutters, that is to say, the imprints, scratches, scrapings, polishes and patterns of which the bulk remains tainted with the distaste and distemper of cults.

As i said, by 2003 i had dropped 3 of the 4 ways to be on the net and carried on with row 1 till 2005 in the following years i kept taking notes (the quotes that give my also saved comments some context to hopefully lend them a longer life of relevance) but apart from a little selection (indy files and Arguelles related material put on googlepages in 2007) my digital karma wasn't (being) driven all over the global village all that much. After receiving this here thinkpad i didn't even mind being offline a whole hell of a lot of the time very much either.

NEXT: the text of what served as my frontpage for a few years from about 1998 on. NOTE: IT CONTAINS A REVERSE CHRONOLOGY (AND HAD LINKS TO ALL THE OLDER FILES):
If you are going to try but one file (of the 140sumtin'), allow me to recommend this core n current one ¤¤¤¤¤

October and november 98: My first guest appearances folder filled with all sorts of currency issues: symbolic (22 files), subtle (2 files) and substantial (2 files)
bodily, soulful and spirited currentsees:
Come this way for an extensive intro to all of them; or read on for a brief one. --- More than 4 megs of text, spread over 26 colourful files *(and 2 more in German)*About the authors, adduceds and citees: As it is and turns out, I am happy to present some of the most rigorous concepts I have ever come across. Beckerath, digital in English is even a world premiere. --- Most people featured here have long since died (Heinrich Rittershausen, Ulrich von Beckerath, John Hamaker, Julius Hensel, Walter Zander; yet alive, fortunately, are Philip Callahan and Roland Vaubel and me too) but so much the more reason to re-embody some of the even during and after their lifetimes still valid principles, right?

About scanning:
T was a blast to get to generate some Joycean twists here and there; only mechanical ones since I scanned these pages, most of which were written in the 1930ties, any mistakes left are not intentional, disrespectful, flippant and nonsensical; they could be called careless at the most and I am hurrying as fast as I can after years of waiting for better candidates than myself to step forward. --- x x x bodily bits:Files here concern such matters of such uppermost import as only paramagnetism can be unobtrusively. Though of course not all eyes manages that to see. The precursor of such revolutionary and what's more: measurable, empirically and what's even still more: palatable and pleasing in the widest ranging sense possible, insights are easily traceable, even on paper up to at least a hundred years ago: To Julius Hensel, for instance, one of the first to be pestered by the evil magician's descendants: chemical companies, or more recently to John Hamaker who was some likable and approachable enough one in this line to make into godfather and God knows I am still trying to be a good sun to him.

Regarding symbolic (and spiritual) currency aspects:
Most of these new 'guest appearance' files are about technical aspects of more potent remedies and more equitable solutions for money emission monopolies; most of them involve and employ selfhelp supplies of means for payment in some form or other, meaning creation of such ones, manies and monies that not only make but hold and keep promises and values stable. --- Of course DIY selfhelp as put forth here is not an encouragement to pilfer the existing ones however Robin Hood like that may seem. About the relevance of a thirties pamphlet called: a way out of the monetary crisis' . --- --- I think it is not impossible and even imperative to help all peoples kick IMF addictions. It's OK to federate but all distinct stages along the way of getting there must be respected and they need be progressively more transparant and public the further up along into the corridors of power; that's where we need full time all revealing surveillance camera's the most. --- --- I just completed a 5 part bit about insurance as it relates to money issues and issue of monies by Beckerath with many juicy details and unacknowledged insights concerning the French revolution for instance and the history of war, slavery and monopolies. This is part one. The major lead to and conveyor of all this material is John Zube who operates a microfiche business: more than 1500 issues (still a buck apiece) called peaceplans so far; this file has excerts from the '83 catalog, when the collection was a almost a third as big as now are here. --- --- A worthy updater of most of this material is Roland Vaubel; his currency unification strategies are sensible at a level I have no illusion to become conversant at. --- --- --- I 'pi' 'rated' the summary to wet your appetite for this 400+ pages tome. By way of encore in honour of Aphra Behn who showed the inverse relationships between money and sex: sex and money Some excerpts from the 'anthropian' book 'Hopousia' by J D Unwin. Thus far my guest appearances. I tried earlier to present and wet some appetites for these documents at a nominally and divergently Marxist list serv called: "progressive economics", archives of which are at the in many ways quite impressive U of Colorado based: Communications for a Sustainable Future site, but it wasn´t as well received as hoped. > Fri, 1 Oct 1999 From: "the recent past" <thouart@ix.netcom.com> Subject: don't read this one either --- To: "jjoyce" <j-joyce@lists.utah.edu> --- Jack shocked and irritated me also when he objected to my usage of "symbol" in writing on "The Dead" several years ago. We exchanged posts like tennis balls during one night, but after awhile I had to step back and I decided that what really bothered me was that Jack was trying to get me to work harder and mine deeper in my analysis of the story. His challenge to use Mr Joyce's own words to justify my theories got to me especially. I think (therefore I am probably wrong) that what is to be avoided (and my feeling that now I can pass myself off thusly as a more enlightened writer on my chosen subject has taken away that abrasive pain caused by Jack's little grains of truth) is the sense of symbols as semiotics which bleed away meaning from the text and drain into a sea of generic presta-ply which may lend itself to brilliant manipulation by the gifted, and to mesmerizing sleight-of-hand by the sophomoric, but which do not lead us farther toward an author's storyline or intent. ------- I do not say all authors using the "s" word are guilty of the above. But I do think Jack is trying to lead us toward light more than dark (damn, those pesky symbols again), and at no financial charge (it costs plenty have a Kolb perform a prostate probe on your precepts in class or seminar), so it's worth running the thing up your flagpole for a salute-check. So . . . Rudy does not symbolize death, let alone the death of innocence. Rudy is really dead. And truly innocent. --- Blazes fucking Molly does not symbolize the exploitation of artists by the managerial class. Blazes actually does fuck Molly, apparently rather definitively, maybe we could stretch it as far as fucking Molly seminally, but Molly does not get fucked symbolically . . . or if so, it is very peripheral to the reality, and until Finnegans Wake, his insistence on "reality" is what brought such heaps of opprobrium on Joyce -- and what saved him at length, for Judge Woolsey was sage enough to point out that legitimate art must be given the same boundless freedom to explore reality that is granted to science (and not necessarily more, restrictions may apply in some states). -------- A parable (a form, by the way, which is allegorical and not symbolical -- that is, a story given which invites you to more universal horizons, rather than containing things which are more properly to be understood as other things): a man next to my campsite walks up uninvited and holds up a discarded wine bottle he has refilled with mossy water from a nearby river, and tells me rather aggressively, "Do you know what this is, this is God's blood!" Well, I think, that is . . . what? A bit poetic, a bit unsettling, but it leads to an ultimate so what? because frankly, to me, it is more interesting as mossy nearby riverwater. God's blood is surely very interesting as well, but what has been gained by substituting one for the other? Do I really want to go swimming in blood from any source? Am I learning something I don't know, or need to relearn? Is the earth then God's body, and are rivers keeping God alive? Will God die if the rivers dry? Or is it not much more gracious and refreshing for a stranger to walk into my camp and say directly "Look how full of life this river water is, how it grows this moss which in turn supports these little nematodes and diatoms and look you, a caddis fly larva . . . sometimes I worry about what will happen if we purify too much water on earth." Then perhaps I can jump in and say any number of things, "Well, I wouldn't drink it with nematodes," or "yes, even with nematodes it tastes better than chlorination," or "something did seem to take a long time to make river water so rich in life," but "It's God's blood" is very preemptive, I don't know what to say, the conversation is already dead, because its reality is too vague. I am afraid even to say, "Get the hell out my camp now!" --- Then there is the "everything is everything else" problem. Yes, it is true, of course -- and for that reason, boring and pointless. OK, the water IS God's blood; and the earth's tears; and any thing that flows, or is cold, or malleable in form, and in Hindi, apsa, the sacred waterfall of the breath, and in Greek myth, the ring between life and death, and the Mayan rain god, Chac, and the perfume of Lady Nut, the Egyptian night sky, and it is the urine of frogs in heaven, and . . . and . . . what were we . . . . Most seriously, symbols when overused lead to inhumanity, to casual cruelty, because we forget what something is and treat living things as machines -- most senseless killing is a symbolic act, to take the thing to its limits of absurdity. When Wordsworth aw the world within a tiny delicate flower in the cranny of a wall, clinging to a smattering of windblown dust for nurture, in reward for obtaining both an ecstatic moment of mystical empowerment and a poem in every English textbook and anthology for a century, what did Wordsworth do? He ripped the little bloom which had been so good to him from its wee roots, and without so much as a comment, thereby killed this little universe, which was not really the whole world, but just a little orphan looking for an occasional bit of pollen and rain (not too much), but what if it had been the whole world? Wordsworth just killed the whole world! --- And brags about it! Handle symbols with the care of a sword. They can be effective when used as a last resort, pressed up against the old crannied wall, as it were, but Wordsworth lost my respect for his poem by seeing the flower ONLY as symbol. What I think Jack is more tolerant of is what are called associations, at least this is how Bill Buttler explained it to me. So when Bloom ridiculously "disguises" his hand in the letter to Martha by using Greek ees, they are not a symbol that Bloom is really Ulysses, but rather that there is a flow from the past all around us, and the Greek ees are like little atoms of air once breathed by Ulysses that lend an irony to the letter, because Bloom's disguise is so bleezing lame, whereas the disguises of Ulysses were these super-hot form-changes engineered by the master mind-fucker herself, the goddess Athena -- and yet Joyce is also being very subtle and reminding us that had we really known Ulysses, and not just the literature of his poet, Homer, we would have found Ulysses to be just as silly and ineffective and embarrassing as ourselves a good deal of the time, and actually, in later classic sources, particularly Sophocles in Philoctetes, Ulysses is an asshole, and so on and so on. -------- So the more Joycean approach of my happy camper would have been to have the bottle of mossy nearby river water in hand while talking to me about the truth, that he was a blazing alcoholic and that he only stood sleeping in the cold with no cover by drinking cheap wine, and didn't know what he was really turning into. Then could I entertain my mind meanwhile by making a little witticism I might or might not share from the fact that the label on the bottle says Christian Brothers, and that causes an internal laugh, and reassuring feeling my mind is still operating beyond TV parameters, when I think on how this shaggy wino IS in sense a Christian Brother, who drink wine after all said to transmutate into God's blood, but now has rather been changed into nematode-prone run-off river water -- yet God does provide for this derelict a warmth in the night though it blow his liver into smithereens over time, and thence to how Stephen looked down his nose at the Christian Brothers for teaching less gifted children, and blah blah, and none of this is symbolic because it is leading wherever I feel like going, and not to any overplan I might interpret correctly or not. Rather, I am riffing . . . or is it riffling. According to Paul Foster Case, the mind associates things which are similar, opposite, or adjacent. The purpose of a symbol, I think, is to disappear in front of you in favor of a more dominant reality. Now do you really want that bell-ringing garter belt of Miss Douce's to symbolize the elasticity of fin de siecle mores, or the ceaseless round of earthly pleasure which forms the wheel of endlessly tormenting incarnations by which the poor soul is enslaved lifetime after horrid lifetime to reappear on earth in pursuit of the chains of its basest desires . . . or, Judge Woolsey aside, are you tilting to the other view, and wishing Mr Joyce might have lifted Miss Douce's hem a tad farther into the smackwarm tropopause of woman's thigh? Oh, for the right reasons, of course -- there is a reality up there we need to know more about, the odours of linen straining the variotous fumes of their respective orifices alone being as noteworthy as sucking the last fat violet syrupy drops from any tiny chalice, not to mention all the better that our ear be pressed against the source of this belle's resonance, her brazen wee clapper. The, er, point I set out to delineate, then, is that what we seem to sea in play is not that Miss Douce is really a bell, or that she is a plaything of time, but that Mr Joyce has used French, the stereotypical language of love for English speakers, to call her "sweet" and "clock" because it enhances our sense of who Miss Douce really is, or more truly, what her creator wants us to feel is her living presence, in the ways we would in a real hotel piano bar at happy hour, by a myriad of details far to rich for us to sort, but which we embrace as a tapestry of threads, a few of which may be picked apart safely by an experienced worker in the field for purposes only of responsible research to be shared with others in the proper context -- here, where we seek to detect the master at work. Or, as Bishop Berkeley refuted everyone from Plato to (posthumously) Kant, if it walks like a duck, and sounds like a duck, and smells like a duck, then it walks like a duck, and sounds like a duck, and smells like a duck. What it will never do is be the shadow of a more perfect thing called duckness, and it may be not even a duck, but rather a goose or swan, or a duck who is more importantly known locally as Irma la Duck. Sonnez la cloche. Yours, in her grace's watch, the Riverend Sterling thouart@ix.netcom.com

Date: Mon, 22 Nov 1999 --- Subject: Re: symbols (& epiphanies) -- To: joyce@es.unizh.ch, j-joyce@lists.utah.edu --- Hi, Fritz. Good to see you again. (Fritz have been a good bud, to me, over the years. He inscribed his "Hades"--in German--and has sent me T-shirts from the Foundation, that his "fans" made especially for him). I can't find the shirt, right now, but there's a line from _FW_ w/"Senn" in it! But, come on! There're no "symbols" in Joyce? Please. What does the GREEN "symbolize" in the Dante episode of _Portrait_? What might the chalice "symbolize" in "The Sisters"? Please. These are sophmoric questions. The mere act of writing is symbolization (if that's a "real" word). Letters in and of themselves are "symbols". amm . . .

>From: Fritz Senn <joyce@es.unizh.ch> >To: j-joyce@lists.utah.edu >Subject: symbols (& epiphanies) >Date: Mon, 11 Oct 1999 17:23:03 +0200: This is in platitudinous confirmation of what has already been suggested. Long ago symbolic readings were all the rage in Joyce criticism. The job seemed to consist in explaining symbols in the text, and everything can be one. So patristic discussions might hinge around: "Is the snow a symbol of Death, Paralysis, forgiveness, indifference, or whatever?" There were reactions again this procedure, but it can be revived. As has been pointed out the main danger is reduction. To say "A (in textual reality)= X (death, love, phallos, etc.)" is indeed reductive nonsense -- because of its apparent terminal certainty. Symbols, if they are worth their pay, never just mean ONE thing; there are other words for that. My trite advice is to avoid the label "symbol" altogether and try to put into other words what is meant. Which may not be simple at all. Generally it is something like this. Almost everything in Joyce (not only there), thing, object, name, green, finger, potato, horse, abstraction, etc., is not only itself (and often very much so) but is in some (widening) relation to something else, often connected with major issues, whatever those are. This can be expressed in other ways, at least approximately. Avoiding "symbol" may even challenge us to find more precise articulations for the relations we think we find. While on this banal track, what about a companion piece to symbol -- "epiphany"? Not that there is anything "wrong" with it in itself, the term after all has been authoritatively canonised (by, incidentally, a very young author who later on did not solemnly perpetuate the term). It just does not convey very much, or if it ever has I never noticed. So instead of someone going through a text and underlining certain passages that appear to radiate more than others and calling those epiphanies and then fold one's hands in contentment, we would be better served if we were told what exactly, what EXACTLY, this bit of text does or reveals or manifests. To me it always sounds a bit like saying: Attention, there is "meaning" there! Labels have a way of sounding erudite while clouding the issues. The game is too easy. Everything, including the clock of the Ballast Office, can be an epiphany or a symbol. -This note is neither. What the voting and polling rackets are displacing and preempting is (and this is the subject of many of my recent efforts here and elswhere) the harmonization of politics with nothing less than the entire gamut of economies (from gift through black market and monopolized ones), no less than an anchoring to and true reflection of peoples evolving states of personabilities and commitments reflected in the popularity (here simply meaning the literal extent, the geographic spread and range of acceptance --not neccesarily contiguous of course--) of their particular monies (specific about and invariable returning to them to be redeemed by them). :: Fluctiations on stock markets are a reflection of the delusory, inflationary and what have you sort of rifts caused by to violently pendel-potion -motion- moodswinging; the emotions of expectations wether fear- or hopeful tend to veer away from reality by shear charm of evolutionarily speaking unbeatable fireside fabulation*(now displaced by carefully dosed and minutely choreographed mixture of chaos and kaleidoscopy on the tempting tubes wether or not manipulable)*. : :: :: :: :: The value of Schumpeterian enthusiasm is unhinged from the moorings it needs to constitute a co-opetition of truthfulnesses :: (creative destruction lost its commitments to cleanliness and compost heaps; unfortunately industriousness evokes and is associated with adverbs such as 'cottage' as much as if not more easily than 'creepily poisonous' and that is where unrealism and the eternal scourge erosion rears it's ever more potent invincibility). :: :: :: The socalled 'value of voting' :: conveyed by yet more copy and counter copy (to cater to the concept of charisma and piety with a pretense of solid accuracy though a mere cardhouse and weatherlike one is all they should allow hope for) is instead covering over and for this reality: people's disempowerment for the 'sake' of decisiveness resting with one person who has to demonstrate a measure of impulsiveness, arrogance and haughtiness to qualify convincingly for a position of leadership and then the word is: people 'trust' ....(?) such and such such as in this case. :: This atavism harks back to battle orders long past. Instead of one on one heroism we have schizophrenics with frighteningly far reaching powers .. . .. . like Chirac killing some reefs on the other side of the world a few years ago and announcing a strengthening of policing forces to look for criminals in almost the same breath. Obviously unskilled with inner mirrors that dangerous man.

Unfortunately deadly confrontations with the law: Just yesterday Holland enjoyed the almost verbatim enactment of a recent book about Byzantian times*(with their horse races and political intrigue resembling today's sporting events)* which is written by Guy Gavriel Kay who has legal as well as 'Tolkienesque' training (making for a couple of breathtaking trilogies so far). :: :: :: :: A supporter of a local sports club caused a call for cops upon himself by disturbing the neighbourhood peace; in the chaos ensuing a second round he was mortally wounded by a threatened and panicking copper (unrealistic reputes may have played a role here too). Hereupon the mayor forbids that night's game. . . and .. .all hell breaks loose led by hooliganic vandals and the oppportunistic reactionary or two; public buildings, brandnew schools and a couple of cars at hand gutted and torched; 200 riot police and firedepts. are doing overtime. At night around 9 the mayor is on TV and :: recounts the sordid events, after rambling for a few minutes he says: "...terrible cause the supporters didn't understand this had nothing to do with the game". ?!?!?!?!!?? In other words he (conveniently forgets and denies his own decisive involvements in actions of just hours ago [[cause if he stood for and by them then though not anymore now he might instead admit his mistake and resign, but no]], schizophrenia oozing into the camera he blames the supporters for what he himself is first and foremost guilty of. . . Classic proof of the widespread disease). . . What I don't get is the fact that the whole police corps could have foreseen this as easily as I can understand the unfolding of events even though it is mere hindsight. I am supposing one of the following reasons may have played a part: :: :: :: :: 1] :: To them it apparently didn't make any difference wether they were going to fight around the stadium or in the part of town where the trouble initially started nor that many more supporters than strictly necessary would have plenty of energy left to show some frust. :: :: :: :: 2] Perhaps they liked a change of scenery for the usual supporter wrangles. :: :: But away from the game it seems to have attracted all Dutch arabs waiting for a chance to play Palestinian martyr without the risks bycause the turn of events has upended the for Dutch conditions normal course of events. :: :: :: :: :: :: :: 3] Maybe they had a clue but also knew it was hopeless to budge the authority vested in people like mayors and presidents, :: mere puppets and decoys of covertly geno- and ecocidal policies yet placed above small fry shepherds, the monopoly of violence maintainers in democratic countries (again, this case turns things on their heads though). :: :: :: A few days later polling is once more a 5 comment post and I :: (repiet) :: :: repost the above (pea tree peat) meanwhile slightly amended and smoothed version of what I tacked on as last addition there (as it probably will be here at this also 5 comment one): :: :: :: PS: that riot turned into a 3 day one so far and the burial of the killed supporter (2 chest shots; sort of a dumb place to aim if you ask me) isn't even till friday. His brother has called upon the rioters to desist but they love to target practice on passive and for the moment guilt ridden police; and get some of their own back in for all the destroyed dope plantations perhaps (news item right after the riot one) and what have you they might have built up some resentment about. Hi Piet, Thanks for your message. This has been a > pretty frustrating period, as you can imagine. A bunch of us who have been working so hard to make Indymedia as effective as possible have been trying to figure out the best way to do so. Most of the comments on the ratings system are helping, but some people just keep sending expletives and threats and that's not fun. I'm not 100% in favor of ratings, but I'm definitely not in favor of people writing in all day and night to call hard-working activists "neo-nazis" and "fascists" because they're trying to decentralize the work for and editorial control of Indymedia. Indymedia will make its way through though, and I hope we all make the right decisions about what to do. I appreciate your message and I'll forward it to some of the people who are more involved in taking comments on the rating system than I am.

A gristmagazine item: IT'S A HARD-ROCKS LIFE FOR US Theamount of toxic chemicals emitted by industry in the U.S. grew by 5 percent in 1999, the U.S. EPA said yesterday in its annual Toxics Release Inventory. Two-thirds of the 7.7 billion pounds of chemicals came from hard-rock mining companies and electricpower-plant operators. Four mining states -- Nevada, Utah, Arizona, and Alaska -- headed the list, as they did in 1998, the first year releases from the mining industry were considered. Environmentalists said the data show the danger of > rolling back environmental protections. In particular, they criticized President Bush's decisions to rescind new regulations that would have reduced the amount of arsenic in drinking water and pollution from hard-rock mining operations -- two moves that favor the mining industry. straight to the source: San Francisco Chronicle, Associated Press, John Heilprin, 12 Apr 2001 sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?file=/news/ archive/2001/04/12/ national0327EDT0454.DTL do good: Take action and write to the polluters in your neighborhood

Consistency as a stumbling block is indeed a ligitimate criticism of anarchy (such suprises as unpleasant ones do exist, even for BB's and Faq toters), it is also quite a different 'qualintity' depending on 'sphere' in question; in physics a rock can be said to be consistent until you zoom out for a big enough time lapse and see that spun into a greater scheme of things where rocks are in turn giving way to flours, soillife, greenery, flowers, seeds and flours again (just a bit more palatable to more complex organisms). Rates of soilbanking can be 'comparutroterouted' so as to come out and up with a product from diversity, parity, equitability, proportionality and in a word: justice. But sociologically speaking, our value standards aren't as consistent and stable as our genes say (and just like the mentioned photosynthesis rate and mineral metabolisms, not ameliorating). In matters of ideas and manipulations thereof a transistoring 'combpiuwtur' is said to work consistently until we zoom out and take siliconhell.com info into account. This 'trip-licitude' is thus like a moebius-trip in that the flours are (at least) threefold: (the bottom variety of) consistency given some leeway, slack and 'air' are like an inbreath complemented by the consolidation of sunny energy. Ample leads to tie into all the practical inseparability and coherence of particular substance with universal principles, including an equally magical as consistent way with necessities, monies, legitimacies, identities and intimacies all rising from the fresh made dust so to speak, can be found at my site.

Means and ends must harmonize right? Must ideally even be indistinguishable, 'rite'? Depends on how far we strayed from the once upon a time easy but now gone problematic reality in question. I suggest we allow two kinds of censorship (which is nothing but a sort of selection after all; even and maybe even specially anti-censorship folks don't want too much of a good-for-too-few sortathing and so the dominance/tolerancebalance is identical with . .. . well in fact just about every polarity you care to focus on, state vs private money; check my earlier efforts thereon hereabuttbouts) in order to prevent any one of them drowning or drying out the other. Here they are, perfect in-, ob-, per- and reversions of each other:
--- (1) No censorship at all (once inside) but migration restrictions in the sense of intensive courses, drills and routine assimilations (braintuneups?) given at the borders (ultimate aim: fatten the latter till noman's land resprouts and buds out to swell from those nowadays all to sharp edgy thin and schizopolarized area's gone obstructively linear and very often quite dangerous) or
---(2) Plenty of censorship and free migration (a practise that would shift all populations to the bordersome regions [[described in the seventh set of {{{single}}} brackets]] and rolling through their varying conditions if they know to adjust). Now take the 'homam' (conflation of Homo and Imam) issue in Holland (an oppropriate subject to stir up since I started reading this year's bookweek gift by Rushdie 'Anger' or do they translate it 'Rage'?; it came out here first so I don't know), very much a case of tolerance vs censorship. Quick *(P)*recap: Homam's are catching public attention now (strange cause the excessive incident leading to it was really no more than that. The gay parades are held in the rich parts of town and not many a fanatic Muslim lives there as yet. Nor are the homo distributions rivalling those of Islamoids anywhere); is that cause Islam is fearing, tending to be on it's way to and is only a sublimated, ritualized and suppressed sort of homosexuality (and are homo's really arch patriarchs in that they do not so much fear and hate women as they tend to [[aimiably they claim]] ignore [[but impersonate, do them some better]] them altogether) or is it the same old butch vs femmes polarity we know so well from Nazi struggles? Whatever. Did we need proof that mixing incongruous (too highly polarized) stuff (like eeerrhhhh .. . gunpowder ingredients?) will get you 'recipienvitreating' your self to the inevit- and predictable, plain as picture parfaction? Mix night- with day livers too closely and you exhaust both, take down both their standards, etc. Alright, forget buggery and desertification bits for a moment (though by no means marginal) to try get back to the difference between the agan dual views possible of global turnover
---- (1): whatever survived a selection/ promotion/ approval/ pass-it-on process (harvests in the sense of having something to spare, wether a revolution or profit) (unless you are talking about little choice offering comets) as suggested by Mr. Mr. yesterday (yeah, conservatism and radicality was ever akin as also noted by Jared Diamond ("In search of the primitive") for instance) and

Apology / explanation for the lack of updates in the near future: I have proven a few points with a sober low cost lifestyle; running on waste discard, surplus, etc, the only thing I did not stint on was organic produce. One can find experience, knowledge and even intelligence when hop skip jump hitching from organic farming oasis to another, from one U town to the next and from one kin to her cult sure whole bookstore / action center to a following one on practically no dough / mulla at all. I have made some sacrifices to comfort and gained some insights from a sense of adventure. An example of the first would be the fact that my preference for using public terminals kept me in buildings that do not open doors and windows, though I like to continue the former I can no longer put up with the latter nor even with being in a city if I want to keep some semblance of health flowing through me; on top of that another one of those (despite promises) cursedly unsharing parent is the drop that tips the bucket and I am off, afloat, dunno when to resurf ace. > Dexter: The State loves it when such moments happen. When we pick up a stone, it can pick up a gun, and get away with firing a bullet into flesh. In fact, the State even works to CAUSE such moments.
> --------This canard has been repeated so often by dogmatic pacifists that it is becoming quite funny. What the state really loves are protesters who cooperate with the police, who tell the police where they are going to march, and who set up their own peace cops to police activists. -----I don't see how Dexter's views are any less valid than Chuckop's here. > The resurgence of Hindu nationalism in India is illustrative of the relation between religious nationalism and the problematic boundedness of the nation-state. The 1992 destruction by Hindu nationalists of the Babri Masjid mosque at Ayodhya, the birthplace of Ram, the foundational Indian sovereign in Hindu cosmology, took place against the backdrop of major challenges to India's boundedness, its sovereign skin. On the one side, there were territorial challenges by Muslims in Kashmir and by Sikhs in the Punjab. On the other, foreign capital had finally penetrated India's long-guarded national marketplace. The great politicized pilgrimage that razed this central mosque took place against the historic decision in 1991 by the Indian state to open the country to foreign investment. A centered divinity is arrayed against a de-centering coin.

The government treasury origins of the IMF are indicative. As John Makin has noted, the IMF serves the interests of the treasuries of its member governments by flexibly accommodating their borrowing and debt-servicing "needs" at minimum cost. By charging low and uniform interest rates, the IMF protects its members against market judgments and helps insure them against the electoral damage that a visibly poor credit standing might otherwise cause. ---------- 2] Rafi: Twenty years ago, intellectual property was largely a rich mans sport confined to non-living material. Dear folks, I landed here on account of the fact that somebody cited a file of mine here a while ago ("exit_monetary_chaos.htm" by Walter Zander); I am not very active in this field but did place some similar documents online by some friends of Zander's (who fled to England during the war and later pleaded in Jerusalem to make it an international city with multiple governments), his friends name was Ulrich von Beckerath, an insurance mathematician with strong views which are barely known anymore (except perhaps amongst the free-banking 'crowds') and Heinrich Rittershausen, a quite popular economy professor though the volume dedicated to his memory does not reflect his early and wholistic views like the pamphlet cited below does. I have given a (green, almost futuristic) twist to Beckerath's perspective on value standard stability and incrementation (particularly regarding the symbology of gold and effects of mining it) which I hope you will enjoy, it sits in the file introducing all these documents from the thirties: google.com/search?q=cache:members.tripod.com/~poetpiet/guest_appearances/intro_to_currency_issues.htm+poetpiet+beckerath&hl=en A relevant file written by myself (elaborating on aforementioned aspects): /value_standard_and_weather_stability. -- Wondering about the funny 'detour' URLs? My server (tripod) has very recently 'dismembered' me (for only knows what reason; their dutch daughter is leaving me alone as of yet) which means that the already little visited files are now not even accesible except through the cached version of the google search engine. In other words I actually agree with a good deal of the pouzzer man's plans. <<<the more lust for screens, the less love left over for light>> ------ 4 days later: after following up a link (to 'Grugyn') I came across a file that fully justifies my initial intuition, it is called: "who is native american" and is the most shameless and blatant flavor of racist ilk you can find, the kind that 'argues' inability of preoccupation (my term) natives to populate and fill up the continent; really disgusting stuff alright, no matter how much I try to cut the crooked out and off; getting to the good stuff is a dirty job and you (and I) are lucky my salvaging skills are up to what strikes me as a blatant contrast between this (and similar work quoted at your site; eco-psycho's full of quotes condemning any sort of green thought for instance) and your simple proposals at the file called: mega.nu:8080/innovism.html Proof positive once again that anything, once even just barely visible at all will soon start to boast totally and diametrically opposed viewpoints. Nobody escapes Hegel. Congratulations on rescuing some sane rules from such inhospitable quarters (rugged and bristly individualisms the outflow of Stirnerite, supposedly selfish and antithetical to Hegel [[but still just as sterilely <<none too bestirringly>> idealistic]]). ----- Question, why don't you differentiate your work from others much in your ampp menu frame? (just found out it is posted more prominently at [[the top of]] mega.nu). 56119 About violence (critiqueing a BB critique) by piet 3:51am Sun Jul 29 '01 One more peak peek, a creed eeking try to inviolately enviabilitate VIOLENCE Encore: critiqueing BBlack on Bufe (from subsitu.com one of the very few reciprocals with me)

> This pamphlet purports to explain why the revolutionary left isn't running the country. For Bufe, this is cause for regret; for most of us, it is cause for thanks. Although he claims to be an anarchist, Bufe makes clear that he is a leftist first and foremost; his anarchism is an afterthought. It never occurs to him that for anarchists, the "disarray" of the left might be an opportunity, not a misfortune. .... Bufe has not only vulgarized Wilhelm Reich, he has severed the link which Reich strove to sustain between society and psyche. If he understood the logic of his own position, Bufe would have to concede that what most people (who, he reports, don't "think very well") need is not revolution but therapy. Whereas I think revolution is the best therapy there is. --------

Me: I agree with neither, individual therapy is a conundrum (doesn't exist even [[even especially not]] for the individual his/her self) but so are mass hysteriae and hypes wether for mayhem or purportedly sustainable rites and rotes (not even test of time standing traditions excepted; the latter are up for cross cultural modifying fructification but in a very careful manner [[such as through internet and well quarantined but widely publicised and scrutinized location]], not the relocate, mix and mingle type blandyblendblinding ways).

> "You can't achieve a noncoercive society through the use of coercion," he says. Since we have never achieved a noncoercive society at all, through coercion or otherwise, there's no way to verify or falsify this sweeping generalization, Violence is a natural and normal dimension of social life. It occurs in all forms of society, including anarchist band and tribal societies.

---------- Me: Yeah rite, it 'll happen in mine too if you want to count rock crushing and dust dosing (compost, mountain brook, etc) as violence. It will certainly usurp/absorb transform exactly those energies and needs now embodied with life into death breaking force rather than the other way around. (you with me now benito?) -

> --------- Most anarchists hope and expect that in the anarchist society they strive for, violence would be drastically reduced. I share their hope and their expectation. But "getting there," in Bufe's phrase, is something else again. Without glorifying armed struggle, it's possible to point out that there has rarely if ever been an entirely bloodless social revolution.

---------- Me: The bloody bits were eye opening lead ups, it is absurd that the 'Revolution' consists or or embodies it. ----- The authorities are violent through and through, ------- Me: come on that's too naive to merit contesting efforts; there are thresholds here as much as the coherence of rock is a condition for it to hold out the promise of remaining a rock in future

> ------- so there will be violence whether or not the anarchists refrain from initiating it. I really don't see why the anarchists should swear off violence altogether-does anybody think the cops and courts will give them any credit for their forbearance? The Wobblies were almost always nonviolent but they got long terms of imprisonment anyway.

--------- Me: a post earlier this morning sort of explains why you catch hell for being certain places more than others; massive permanent relocations rather than temporary protests are the way to go (check infoshop.org/paz = permanentautonomous zone conference at the end of next month in Kentucky); here is a site linked to: anarchistcommunitarian.net/ ----------

> Bufe is big on vague foggy generalities but weak on particulars - a serious default in an essay about "getting there." Repeatedly he holds up ZEGG, apparently a German commune, as an exemplar - but he never tells us a damned thing about what ZEGG is (or even what the initials stand for).
> zegg.de/2001a/englisch/eng.htm

---------- I go: It is an experimental community, some say a sect, a cult, a scary art colony; a glimpse of the future; if you ask me, it isa polyamorous according to fair share schedules place where they spill/spoil the broths n paints in between their lapses of brilliance. Why is it ambitious people (wether fight or family oriented) always have [[selective to outsider and socalled equitable to insider sorts of]] schedules)*. Keeping a little idealistic *(p)rev(s)*olutionary pressure on the kettle is a better way to go I reckon (come on you dumb women take back what was once yours and help transform the ways you used to keep it); this is in their linklist: eurotopia.de 300 community adresses throughout europe (the majority has a religious basis but the range includes anything from squatted ones to newly built or to be built ones - scandinavia mostly). At nfnc.org the network for a new culture (where they have a soberly dribbling posting board: nfnc.org/nc/list/Jul_2001/ - couple a day) with titles such as: "looking for land"; they translate Zegg thus: "Center for Experimental Cultural Design".

> Bufe thinks that "model communities" are the way to go, but he has nothing to say about the history of the hundreds of anarchist or utopian socialist intentional communities which were set up in America in and after the 1840's. Anybody thinking of starting up such a community should, at the very least, become acquainted with the experiences of its predecessors.

---------- Me: I haven't seen the text BB is on about here but what can you do in a pamphlet? Some risks are inherent, but others are avoidable. --------- If the point of an anarchist intentional community is to set a good example, then everything possible should be done to ensure that the example is good. Bufe doesn't do this. ----------- I don't know if he does or if I do either. You be the judge/ beneficiary. Don't hold b*(l)*ack.

> 56415 = an editorial in defence of the BB " ....value of groups like the black bloc, who hold together and stay strong when everyone else is panicking or falling apart. And what is especially important is that we do not lose sight of the goal: a world without suffering."

------ to which I go: 11:56pm Mon Jul 30 '01 rock is pitchblack inside agreed? It holds together the harder it is right? All others are sissy's (what a rightwing argument by the way) just like there is nothing left left of extreme left so that from there everutting looks right (want an example? trend.partisan.de on Sloterdijk; they should go wash their filthy brains once in a while). OK back up from down to basics we conclude the editorial argument purports to proclaim and laud themselves up- and outstanding hero's in an otherwise toxic-trip-trick-trippy-tip-topical world (examples included even and the much much more common pyromania conveniently forgotten) but what is the reality analogous to the fact observed above, namely that they identify with and impersonate dead material. In what sense do they see death as glorious again? No, I am not going to argue: where have we heard that before; aint the little death enough for yall to contribute to a common good called the migrant search for room to improve. I mean, common sense dictates repeatedly clearing up whatever threatens to work/ rot itself into the right to enter and deserve 'compost-age' certainly does contribute to further the glory of those who are adressed up to gaining thereby in the long run. Now, forgive me for circumambulation here; this prey deserves stalking; if I can't do this painlessly it will shame me on top of not tasting good however hungry I might have gotten by then. That brings me round to their 'crisis' argument and their hopes for the future which I suspect of a sneakily suppressed melancholia, looking back to an earlier state of development, the one and only state "without suffering" (yes, it's that unintegrated crystalinely non- or not yet sentient one once again crying out for neglect and clamoring for attention). OK, suppose the crisis is them (as many others think and feel after all) and they are looking to escape themselves (witness death bravering) in a more attention grabbing way than rocks are usually want to sport, unless the latter's sheer precipitousness calls attention to itself that is. I fully feel and wanna fend for the finer distinctions trodden underfoot in this crude and rude analysis of a taletelling slivver of a slice out of this epicpie as much as the next blockbuster so don't feel too taken apart . .Can I take you out one more time? ConCommitant hey girl get goin' with and on your baby fat filled arms I don't think I like 'm very much less than the macho kind of charms. Actually, what I started off trying to say is that attritions and frictions inflicted on the system to call attention to it's illegitimacy tend to make it even more so (same as wars only less so); they have to make up for losses and get more people stuck in aggravating routines and vicious cycles. (may2007): statistification that counts and counterwise has been sheer and utter failure i'd say, when folks like Todd Boyle - ledgerism.net (down last time i tried) have to waste their talents cause their sociability and sensibility prevents them from excercizing them cause they have to try prevent their freshmen fellowman being sucked into and sacrificed to 'service' spreading industrial strength terror (impoverishing to the point of provoking people into seeing, seeking and finding relief in becoming cannon fodder) in the name of the least possible reconcilable, purest hypocritical banter about freedom.

Comment contributions by Dylan at 57951, an item by Flaco, (a very articulately dangerous person indeed but .. . .) 'whereto now?' -x-xx- care for a flaco sample? ==>> See the quotes from and my comments on The Case for Confrontation, by the same author: http://uk.indymedia.org/display.php3?article_id=673 [[19 comments]]-x-xx- Dylan inspired me to spell out such thought as appears in the summary of this item.

> Here is Dylan: Despite the noble efforts of the anarchists and their admirable goals, engaging the enemy on their own terms will not result in the type of change we want. I believe the best way to derail the speeding train of capitalism and corporate rule is to expose the system for what it really is. The strangle-hold the elite have over the masses is dependent on the maintenance of the perceived parent/child relationship dynamic. The state is the provider and the consumers are the flock. Until the majority of us realize that the Earth is the provider and that the State has co-opted the role of the provider, we will remain disempowered. How do we do it? We start by attacking the corporations. Not with bricks and firebombs but by shining a light on them.

This is where the summary (announcing BB criticism) finally applies==>> flaco on confrontation (at the UK 'branch', 19 responses, see last item also):

> The accepted view (wheeled out again by INPEG in Prague on September 27) is that property damage and violence damages sympathy for the causes we are trying to address. With a total lack of irony, the non-violence lobby mirrors the system they apparently oppose: the conclusions drawn (from media reports) by affluent, overwhelmingly-white, western minorities are more valuable than those drawn by the (not-so-white) less economically-influential majority, from politically impotent (globally speaking) countries.

right, now, about your use of the word 'apparantly': I assume and am almost sure you mean to imply 'appear to', adding 'only' to strenghten it maybe or 'seemingly' to tautol it up a bit praps? Anyway, you intend to convey that we are supposedly nothing but selfdeluding, 'without irony' etc. Now, you on the other hand are not only without irony but far worse, purely malignant since violence and property damage are still the opponents basic tactics despite their impressive imprimatur of postal, profitable and pompous paper shuffle and sign the gyn brand that baby act. So, who did you say was aping the big baddies again? Scare yourself with 'm no longer, pick up a mirror, hold in front and stare a while. Newswire mirror history:

little missive to indy-maintenance: yesterday (9/20), item 65205 reported white outs such as I too have experienced ever since the terror attack; no matter what the causes (hints in the subject line) here is the solution: you place one or several links on the front page around the 2 that say newswire with the following content: link to same stored elsewhere or alternative access or 'same at less congested location'. -- I have resorted to quickly saving all newswire pages early in the morning (even then I have to keep probing for gaps to get at 'm) and looking at 'm later. I could upload them to tripod and that would make the links faulty but not more than a little copy paste diy will remedy. Deal???? -- Keep it up; I'll remember yall in my will when I get around to it; guess I'm waiting till the 2 mothers (with a 3rd threatening to), who have chosen not to let their kids know who or where their father is, get a chance of heart. -------

Recap: 65763 First (latest) 7 newswire pages 'mirrored' (contains the text unhypered); 65765 (same hypered; both on /24-9-01-22.htm) --Some diy reassembly required for easier sailing to the individual items and around the bottlenecks and 'obstacles'. The newswire pages are much more difficult to poke for from www.indymedia.org than the individual items once you know which one you would like to see.Suspected cause for the need? Front page may have been given much more traffic load right of way over the newswire to favor frequent visitors? Or the poker gets bogged down due to infinite routarounds in turn due to clogging bugabouts?

------ 66095 past 24 hour newswires mirrored (more or less) ----- As of the twentysecond, already redundant formerly vital info: Ps: Once on a newswire page, you gotta fiddle with the links before they work since they are not quite identical; some diy reassembly required, you'll figure it out. - PPs (9/22): not true, they work anywhere now since folks at indy probably added the root yesterday!!!

66669 last 48 hours newswires mirrored by piet 12:44am Mon Sep 24 '01 People posted about drawing blanks and I sure as hell have been since the Terroubble. these files bare the date when copied and simply follow the numbers at the bottom (but due to the relay, some of them become redundant in the process and are skipped). Today's batch reaches all the way back to where Daniesh and I hit on the same idea at once. Ps: no article. --- xxx what 'd i ps you?

So far, indymedia-newswire-mirror contains:
21-9 (28 files)
22-9 (11 files)
24-09 (15, with a -9a.htm)
25-9 (7 files)
9a? In the course of downloading such strings, some seem to become invalidated or something, unreachable at any rate. Is that due to the relay peristalsis? The newly added items obviously move all of 'm down somehow, I hope that is not the (internemoily compower slobbering) reason people have trouble with the newswire links

Commenter amounts (in brackets) may vary slightly between the original and my copies, specially if they show low page numbers (in white at top and bottom) in as much as they can be made anytime but my experience shows that ceases after a mere few.

> but dude... by Lizard 4:38am Tue Sep 25 '01 Your links still aren't working, its impossible to access any of the articles.-

'21st' links need a tinker, none thereafter. It took the indy folk only a day to realize that mirroring would be a lot easier when linking all the way to the root which they did (probably after they saw I went ahead with the caveat that a little diy tinker would be needed); now only the first handful of files (21-9-01-1.htm to 21-9-01-28.htm) don't click automatically (I would take a substitute of copied root URL text, is all), the rest, starting the 22 go with just a poke. Ps If it bothers you that the logo ain't there I would have to create 2 directories /local/image/ but I'm too busy.------- How's this for a foofproolinq?????? I can make it even easier for yall I'll make two subdirectories; one called: straight-article-clicks and another called pre21st-tinker-clicks then I'll allow them both to fill into past and future as they will. - actually just one will do I guess. ----- Oh shit, now I am confused and not so sure if I should go; by On nO --- It's been a funny puzzle so far; figuring how to 'connect the batches, poking till you find a traffic lull, estimating the amount of item numbers will be on a given page (believe me, it varies; due to multiple and failed postings), but now I am discouraged; between the space of 8.30 and 9.30 this *(euromain)*morning the root URL's seem to have been removed again. Could this be a space saving consideration given the indyans don't expect anymore congestion/mirror-need????? ----- I give up for a breathing spell. How's that.---------- For future mirrorers: I guess adding the root would be a semi automatic thing in Wordpad (neccesary for each file [[unless you can sorta paste some together to make 'm 80 or 120 K's]] or the equivalent Linux trick - unfortunately not in my arsenal).

> 65585 This piece documents the historical context of the 9/11 attacks. > Getting Better by Lizard 6:47am Wed Oct 3 '01 lizard@yippie.zzn.com I'm really starting to like what you're doing here... before all you could get was the summaries, but now you're creating a catalogue of the newswire daily, but it links back to the original article on IMC. This is good, because following links to old stories was never difficult on IMC, but the hardest things to do often are find the articles on the newswire backlogs (which is often slow and sometimes doesn't work-- plus you can't search by date like you can here... I understand though! Indymedia is a busy site and they do amazingly well considering what they are undertaking!!!) and the search functions. This site, given some more time and attention, could actually help that along. I would be willing to help you with some of the grunt HTML work if you would want to send the files back and forth through email. Another thing you could do (which I'm not sure exactly how the logistics would be worked out but it would be really cool) is to set up a functional search engine of the mirrored pages.. it would require come CGI work in PERL or something, and I'm not sure if Lycos would let you do that. But just a suggestion... contact me if you want some assistance.

Anyone using or advocating violence in politics should be targeted, by consensus, for assasination politics.Violence will never be eliminated but the best hope for minimising remains AP. Going back to the bad old days of the cia is the way to ultimate disaster. ----------- So, if I fathom this right, Jim is hoping the CIA practice, sort of exactly what AP is but at a much earlier and opposite stage of development, can, will and must survive if only the targeting improves? When they manage to work out in the open as a central pillar of well distributed common sense, tackle violent people only and perhaps the occasional all too potentially violent ones. I doubt what this item purports to consider a viable solution will be popular anytime soon (the blurb suggests that Islam is not viable without Jihad; however I wonder if it is not possible to make the case there as here [[in the west]] that the difference between force where it makes (I should say could make) the best difference and violence is huge), but I have been thinking that Islam is indeed a huge failure in that the repression of desire, hedging and hemming it in with all sorts of penalties, taboos and restrictions has the counter productive effect of blowing a relatively benign sentiment out of the water so to speak. I mean Islamists seem to be the least capable of control in the sense of sublimation; their leisurely lifestyle (to guard against overheating) is of course conducive to the stop and go, explosion and downtime rhythm that clashes with the sustained effort of societies that have to bail to stay afloat on a very regular basis (smoothing out the peaks and troughs); those people having the most reason to prove to be least modest; I hit upon this train of thought when reading somebody's depiction of Islam as victims. Well, what do you want from a people that overflows (transgresses/crosses borders of) their territories at a rate even the jews will have trouble to match. Overgrazing and erosive behaviour is multiply unpardonabe when you pretend to such high religious standards, live in such sensitive areas and maintain the factors of population growth Muslims seem to think they can afford and justify.

Attempting to put large get togethers -- put together in order to contest overgeneralizing decisions made by too few folks representing and affecting general but ignorance-biased contingent -- in the largest possible but still meaningful context. ---xxxx---

92154 infoshop man ChuckO: The left has gotten so good at policing itself that it even started marching into the anti-democratic protest pens when the cops started using that tactic. ------You mean we are allowed ante-democratic polverization station performance platforms for good and betterin behaviour???? ----------

> Let's remember that "civil disobedience" consists of two words. Over the past 30 years, the left forgot about the second word: disobedience. What's more, if you are an American activist, you supposedly live in a "free" country where you have freedom of speech is supposed to be protected. So how did the left get to the point where it cooperated in its own disempowerment? Social change is not going to happen through civil, polite protest.

-------Your emphasis on disobience is just a way to abuse sympathetic momentum and hijack that amorph term to back up your vandalism for horrified awe 'tactic'. <snip>

> Diversity of tactics also recognizes that the tactical situation on the streets during a protest can break down and become fluid. Who could have guessed that "nonviolent activists" in Seattle or Quebec City would throw tear gas canisters back at cops? Who can guess the reaction of black blocers who choose to not resist police attacks? Another reason why we advocate diversity of tactics is because we see militants and nonviolent activists being attacked by cops without provocation.------

Secrecy is terrorism! And for god sake stop abusing 'diversity', you know damn well that all violence ever can, does, will and must lead to is polarization, reduction to the black and white stuff, scoured contraction, busts and bursts (I don't mean consensual sex either), repressing the magic theater of multiple greys turning to myriad colours. ------ I've lost track of the number of incidents where the cops attacked a demonstration in order to arrest people wearing masks. ------ Look, unless the earth starts a crazy wobble sometime soon there can be only one and I mean one radically upright rise up tactic only: Spend your energy on purely passive and 'mere' potential 'frozen' forms thereof (bedrock) so they can start feeding up the relays and ladders of decentralized, bottom up and opened pathways through life/death cycling (photosynthesis). All the ones you mention contribute to pollution, aggravation and what not. -------- How come my kind of tactic is excluded, remains unmentioned let alone practiced? Cause people with less inflammatory impatience than your adherents can't be whipped up into your flavor of militant frenzy?? I often wonder how much growing up by what seems like too many bloods of beauties for any one man's own good might have to do with your overcompensation on the tough/front count. ------- How many of you still know that the sound of a child's teeth in a ripe apple is a turn on to a mother and/or motherly's ear? How many less are educated further and deeper along those lines to know crunch of garden destined solarly reducible rock decimated into dust is the most ultimately momsfriendly (for a change) macho yet 'democritterly monstration - vote - measure imaginable? ---------

Remick then says that a "tiny group" which embraces these tactics can throw stones from a demonstration that puts everybody else at risk. ---- That is exactly what happens again and again, I will just as again and again reiterate: picking up a stone to be passed along to whereever the most energetic of us wanna make that semi-religious 'destruction at the base of life' semi-Schumpeterian sound - with another outward chain giving out resulting fresh-made souvenirs to all and sundry (including police, some of them have gardens and/or parks to visit with kids nearby don't they?).

> She continues: "The radical wing of the movement sees enforcing demonstration rules as authoritarian and simply will not accept it. They also reject arguments that the heightened level of polarization and potential for repression creates a new reality post September 11 where promising non-violence is even more important."

> Needless to say, the movement doesn't divide easily into a radical wing and a non-radical wing. There is a multiplicity of tendencies that overlap and that vary depending on each individual. Many folks like to think that the NGOs are opposed to militant tactics, but one of the secrets of the movement is how they covertly support militant actions that they can't publicly support. -------

Yeah rite, well, we wanna leave those juvenile tactics behind and have the freedom withdraw and grant our support out in the open. A lifeline collonade of hi-tec totin', every Whole Earth catalog trick in the book bearing, volunteer armsful of sustainers, autonomizers and crisis relievers should be FIRST choice and VANGUARD in any (local or international) action seconded by military backup only springing to action when the former is waylaid or harrased in any way. ----------

> Chuck: Demonstration rules are, of course, authoritarian. The moderates have frequently lied to the press that they are the primary organizers of an action that has been disrupted by militant outsiders, when the fact is that most of the big anti-globalization protests are the efforts of many groups and coalitions. Demonstration rules are designed to police dissent and discipline it for the interests of some organization. ----------

This tone, characteristic of the "Pacifist Fascist" faction is, I think, best answered thus: Fuck you. If you think we're going to arrive at a demonstration of our rejection of plutocratic fascism and then subject ourselves to your brand of tactical fascism, you are sorely mistaken. The strength of this current uprising, as we must keep pointing out to all the authoritarians in the peanut gallery, is that we have such an enormous diversity within the ranks of dissent. It is not a failure of the milieu that we have no leaders, or central committees, or apparatchiks, or internal police; in fact, it is the absence of these anachronistic hold-overs that has made the milieu so resilient to date. If you wake up one morning to discover that the movementS have become A movement with a leader and an internal gestapo, then you should dress in your best funeral clothes, because the uprising is dead. In the meantime, though, you should - as ChuckO has in the piece that you attempted to quote above - fight like hell to keep this from happening. No more bosses anywhere! ---------

The blend in effect is an eyewash for the gullible, political ammo;a mere ostensible one in our case (our fructifying results in wholly new needs, deeds and greeds, in reality it only serves to exacerbate the contrast). In absence of an ultra-orthodox core with world wide ambitions, the mix disorients, unmoors and throws cultures, customs and heritage into a turbulent shallows of confusions wherein the gauntlet chops a lot closer around you and leaves little line-ups affording glimpses, openings, trust, confidence and hearteningly familiar vistas out. We Babel's masterminders are a termite's wet dream and still around, still pledgin' allegiance to an anchor which keeps pace with the ephemeralization of our own identity since the abortion of Babblin' Brook evaporating Bigdick has dispersed us. 94292 wherein someone objects to daveduke posts; I go: I'll be the first to respect (and even dig) space for you to 'do' in but this is not ideal. On the contrary Angie, you are the one taking up the wrong space; this should have been a comment to the dukey post don't you think? Watch for a post starting in the duke vein to ever so gradually dissolve in an all-n-cross-creation implication of the shem-shaun / jew - palestine / peacenik-soldier sew-a-seeing the place goes to hell in a bandhacksit.
